Yes, in Shelby County

An oil drilling rig stretches 180 feet into the Shelby County sky only 4 miles west of the Montevallo city limits. Owned and operated by the Warrior Drilling and Exploration Company, the tower was erected Tuesday morning and drilling started Wednesday morning. Personnel at the site indicate a shaft will be sunk 12,500 feet into the earth, in the search for oil or gas.

Oil drilling begins

by Marcia M. Sears

After years of speculation, and several geological surveys, serious drilling for oil and gas in Shelby County began this week.

Tuesday morning a drilling rig was erected in place on a hilltop near Pea Ridge in southwest Shelby County. Drillers say it is a wildcat drilling and they do not know whether they will find gas or oil, or whether they will find anything significant.

Warrior Drilling and Engineering Company of Tuscaloosa is the drilling company on the scene. Marty Sumners, daylight driller for the company, told the Reporter the State of Alabama is very interested in what the drillers will find and has asked for samples as the work progresses.

Sumners says the rig the Warrior company is using is one of the deepest drilling rigs in Alabama. The company is prepared to go down to a depth of several thousand feet.

It is not known what oil company has contracted with Warrior to drill the wildcat well.

The company has paid the City of Montevallo Water Board $1,000 in fees to tap on to the city water supply. The drilling is taking place on land owned by Kimberly-Clark Company.

Six or seven years ago interest was stirred when testing was conducted in the Spring Creek area near Montevallo. Later the Kerr-McGee Oil Company of Oklahoma conducted geological surveys in the coal region of southwest Shelby County. This summer Atlantic Richfield Oil Company conducted public meetings in Bibb and Shelby Counties trying to buy up leases to the mineral rights from landowners.

It is believed that the increased price of oil and gas has made it attractive to speculators to conduct expensive testing and drilling in Shelby County, in the hope that they will find oil near the rich coal seams which lie under much of the western section of the county.

4-H camp draws visitors

by Marcia Sears

Forty prominent Alabamians drove into Shelby County Monday to tour the new statewide 4-H camp on the banks of the Coosa River.

Among them were Tine Davis, founder of Winn-Dixie, Dr. Harry Philpott, President of Auburn University, Joe Farley, president of Alabama Power Company, and Lem Morrison, president of Dairy Fresh Corporation and of the Alabama 4-H Club Foundation.

Senator Lister Hill Proctor, Representatives Sonny Moore and Curtis Smith, Probate Judge Tommy Snowden and County Commissioners Ned Bearden and Jake Morris led the governmental segment.

Board members of the state 4-H Foundation came from all parts of the state.

Purpose of the visit was to observe the progress of construction at the 105 acre site which is located just off Shelby County Highway 28, where the ferry used to cross the Coosa.

The camp, to be called a youth development center, has most of the roads and building sites completed. The manager's residence and some of the dormitories are nearing completion. Sites are laid out for the olympic swimming pool and athletic fields.

Cecil Mayfield, state 4-H executive, told the group that great care is being taken to keep the site as natural as possible. The only trees being removed are those necessary for roads, buildings and views of the river.

Alabama Power Company has granted the 4-H Foundation a long-term lease to the property.

Opening date is scheduled for next June, and the visitors Monday seemed pleased with the progress.

Pelham budget tops $1 million

by David Moore

By the end of Monday night's council meeting, the City of Pelham not only had a million-dollar-plus budget for 1980, but a new councilman as well.

Councilman John Tanner recommended Joe Littlefield to fill the vacancy created when former councilman Leslie Todhunter moved to Alabaster last May. The council approved the recommendation unanimously.

Mayor Burk Dunaway read for approval Pelham's proposed 1979-80 budget, which included an estimated income of $1,352,174 and expenditures totaling $1,341,402.31. The budget passed unanimously with very little discussion.

The city projects an excess revenue of $10,771.69 for next year. Expenses are expected to increase almost $210,000 over last year, while projected income should increase $21,912.

Pelham's three major expenditures are $442.981 for the police department, $383,565 for the fire department and $217,000 for the general operation and administration of city hall.

The Pelham library was budgeted $10,000, $2,000 more than requested. The excess appropriations, Dunaway said, were to start a building fund.

Other expenditures are $84,000 for sanitation, $19,505.66 for garage, $76,000 street department, $7,350 park and recreation board, $50,000 towards the sewer fund, $35,000 payment on bonds, and $16,000 for donations.

Major income sources include $104,174 from revenue sharing $198,000 ad valorem tax, $120,000 fines, $225,000 privilege licenses, $50,000 interest, $35,000 gasoline excise tax, $22,000 each for motor vehicle tax and beer and liquor tax. Other sources of income were $10,000 or less.

Ray Hamilton's motion to adopt the budget was seconded by Tanner.

In other council business, Tanner moved that the city purchase approximately 60 street lights and authorize Alabama Power to install them in Chandalar and Brookfield, with any extra lights going to Wooddale. The motion,

Teachers win 'Thursday' battle

by Bert Seaman

Teachers in Shelby County won't be staying after school on Thursday afternoons anymore to work on their professional development.

The weekly meetings were cancelled when the Board of Education met Wednesday and supported teachers who have been protesting putting in extra time with no additional pay.

In a unanimous decision to do away with the Thursday sessions, the Board went against the recommendation of Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles who urged their continuance until the professional development plan was revised.

Speaking out strongly against the present situation, Board member Paul Sumners declared, "I haven't seen anything cause this much confusion and unrest in Shelby County education as long as I've been here."

Sumners termed the program "unworkable," and he said he didn't believe it could be enforced.

Knowles agreed that changes should be made. With so much dissent, he said it would be "foolhardy to leave it as it now exists."

Both he and Chairwoman Elaine Hughes urged that the weekly meetings be continued so all the good that has been accomplished wouldn't be lost.

"I don't see that any good has been accomplished," Sumners replied. He told the Board he thought no plan would be better than the present one.

Sumners' son, Vincent teacher Wayne Sumners, presented the case for the 218 SCEA members who voted at a recent meeting that the professional development plan be revised.

Claiming teachers had no input in the plan, Sumners handed out mimeographed sheets which showed that principals had been informed of the plan on May 29. He indicated that the steering committee had merely adopted

Because the [illegible] agreed on them, Sumners told the Board that a bad attitude had developed.

Listing some of the detrimental effects of the program, Sumners pointed out that teachers with a second job would lose money since they wouldn't be able to work on the day of the meetings. He added that plans to take college courses which fell on that day would also have to be abandoned.

Mentioning that there would be less opportunity for families to be together, the Vincent teacher also noted that when young children were involved, extra money would have to be spent on baby sitters.

With all the extra time he puts in outside the classroom, Sumners says he works a 60 hour week now.

"This isn't a fight," he said, "but a question of legal and moral rights."

Once more going over the ways in which the plan would improve the instructional system in the county, Knowles said it had been drawn up using State Department of Education guidelines.

"There's been no attempt to victimize teachers," he declared.

Giving the panel an example of one group that was going along with the plan, Knowles said that secretaries in the central office

Commission hears budget requests

Shelby County Commissioners sat for four hours last Thursday listening to budget requests from representatives of 14 departments. But even then they didn't reach the end of the list.

So the panel set another hearing for 9 a.m. Wednesday to hear how much money the probate office, the computer programming department and the commission office will need to operate during the 1979-80 fiscal year.

New forms which the commission office handed out this year are expected to give the panel a clearer picture of financial needs and expected revenue.

The following budgets were presented last week. Tax Collector Fay Quick put down a figure of $71,915 for operating her office. Sheriff Buddy Glasgow reported it would take $392,676 to run the jail and $724,726 for the Sheriff's Department.

Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds gave $169,528.84 as her operational expenses. Linda Dupree from the Juvenile Probation office listed her budget figure at $36,841.25.

Public Works Director Jimmy Ray reported that his budget would be $2,098,027.17. He put the figure to operate the animal shelter at $14,000.

Paul Owens, who heads the county's planning commission, said his budget would be the same as last year - $27,058. And Carolton Franks, who is in charge of the solid waste program estimated that program would require $241,912.69 to operate.

Mrs. Mildred Harrison put the library's budget request at $84,958 and health department

Alabaster argues

Keep fire trucks in town?

by Bert Seaman

What if a fire broke out in Alabaster while personnel and equipment were outside the city limits fighting a blaze?

That was one of the questions posed at Monday night's council meeting when the question about fire protection contracts was raised.

The issue, which has been on hold for several weeks, came up again after Fire and Police Commissioner Wayne Lucas reported that the fire department had answered 27 calls outside the city last month.

It had been suggested when the issue was first raised that Lucas, Fire Chief John Cochran, the mayor, a representative from an insurance company and city attorney Karl Harrison meet and discuss the possibility of drawing up a contract for fire protection.

Agreeing that the city shouldn't waste any more time about looking into the matter, Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek said that a number of people had questioned him about what action was going to be taken.

After Councilwoman Charlotte Burke asked exactly how far the fire department went to fight a blaze, the panel was told that a number of years ago, fire chiefs in the county had drawn up districts each would be responsible for.

He didn't think it would be wise, the mayor said, for the city to be responsible for the whole fire district that is now covered. And he called attention to the fact that a train might block a crossing when fire units that had been outside the city tried to return to answer a call in the city.

The panel agreed that a feasibility study should be conducted and the mayor and Police Chief C.E. Carter said they would obtain copies of some fire protection contract they considered effective for the council to look at.

According to Cochran, the only obligation the fire department now has to answer calls outside the city limits is a moral one. Burke said she felt the city had just as strong an obligation to residents of the city.

Another matter concerning the fire department was the proposal to do additional work on the Siluria Fire Station. It was noted that $1,700 had been budgeted for replacing the roof.

Lucas pointed out, that for $2,274, new doors could be put on and the floor, which had suffered water damage, could be raised.

Even though Lucas said much of the labor would be donated, Burke urged the council to take bids in order to be sure of just how much the work would cost.

Going along with her suggestion, the Mayor instructed the fire chief to get at least three bids on the project.

Alabaster council commends police

Two members of the Alabaster Police Department were commended at Monday night's council meeting.

Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek presented Police Chief C.E. "Bull" Carter with a plaque from the Police Safety Institute for outstanding work in that area.

And the Mayor read a letter from a mother who credited Sgt. Stanley with talking her runaway son into returning home.

The department added two men to the reserves when the panel voted to accept applications from Clifton L. Smith of Siluria and Frank C. Taylor of Alabaster.

However, a regular member of the force was lost when the council agreed to accept the resignation of Steven Fancher The policeman wrote that he had been offered a position with Helena which he thought would be to his benefit.

After postponing action on a request from the County Health Department several weeks ago for a $3,000 donation, the panel agreed to make a $1,500 contribution.

The department conducts several health care programs at city hall.

Unanimous consent was also given by the council for two off premise beer licenses. The requests were made by Henry Barr and Mike Barefoot for a convenience store in the new Alabaster Shopping Plaza and a store at the intersection of County Roads 17 and 44.

Names were submitted by Councilman Gene Glasgow at the last meeting to fill a vacancy on the Park and Recreation Board. Monday, Glasgow recommended Richard Kidd to fill the spot formerly held by Pelham Moncrief who recently moved.

Kidd was elected to serve out the unexpired term which will be up next October.

Pine beetle lays siege

by David Moore

The tiny pine beetle has laid seige to Shelby County forests in the worst epidemic since 1972-1973.

According to county head forester David Stone, pine woods east of Montevallo along Highways 25 and 12 are the hardest hit in the county. The beetles, he told the Reporter, have also been particularly bad in the northern portion of the county in the mountains between Calcis and Dunnavant.

Statewide, the pine beetle has infested 47 counties, mostly in the central portion of the state, according to state forestry reports. Timber damage in Alabama is reported to be $9.9 million.

Stone said that an aerial survey conducted in Shelby County last month revealed 362 beetle spots. The spots were identified by yellow or red foliage, which denotes dead pines.

Compared to an earlier survey conducted in August, the September survey showed about the same number of pine beetle spots, but they were bigger than the month before, Stone noted.

Stone stated that salvaging the infested wood and cutting a 50-foot buffer strip around the area is the best defense against the tiny, but deadly insect.

The adult pine beetle, which is either dark brown or black in color, grows to be only an eighth of an inch or less in length. The adults lay eggs under the bark of pines, and the larva which hatch from the eggs "girdle" the trunk, eating away the live part of the tree, the forester explained.

Stone said it takes only from two to three days for the larva to kill a pine.

A pine tree ten inches in diameter may harbor as many as 20,000 beetles.

Stone indicated that the August drought of last year weakened the county's pine population, leaving it susceptible to the boring beetles.

Stone expects that the pine beetles will remain a county problem for the next two years.

Besides the recommended salvaging procedure, Stone points out that a cold, wet winter broken by several warming spells could cut down on the pesky beetles, too.

"All we can do right now is notify land owners where we've spotted beetles, Stone said.

He added that he hesitates to recommend pesticides to kill the beetles without specific instructions, especially where the beetles are located in a person's yard. (For more information, call 669-4133.)

director Maxine Smith asked for the same amount as last year - $74,800.

Grant Gober from the extension service also kept his budget the same as it was, $27,600, but he asked for an additional $1,200 to improve his area of the courthouse.

Another budget figure that remained the same was mental health. Director Jerry Jackson asked for $30,710. Soil and water conservation head Robert Kelley said that his costs would remain about the same. He asked for an increase of $360, bringing his budget to $10,270.

George C. Howze from UNDO asked the county to contribute $7,510 to his budget which runs $37,552 in combating drug abuse.

The only department that reported needing less money was the forestry commission. David Stone said that he could operate on $35,000 which is $1,200 less than last year.

Road project to cost $270,591

The cost of widening and repaving Valleydale road in north Shelby County will come to $270,591.

County Engineer James Ray, Jr., announced Monday that Dunn Construction Company of Birmingham was the low bidder on the project in the amount of $257,705.50. Engineering fees make up the remainder.

Governor Fob James and State Highway Director Rex Rainer released some state and federal aid secondary money to make the project possible, according to Ray. The Shelby County will pay 25% of the total amount, and the remainder will come from state-federal funds.

The Valleydale Road project has been considered the number one priority need among all roads and highways in Shelby County. Increased traffic on the road in recent years has caused excessive wear and tear, and future use indicates that a wider road is necessary.

In order for the county to come up with its share of the funds, the County Commission recently renegotiated some highway bond issues.

Ed Board borrows $400,000

"This is the same song as last year, except there aren't as many verses," Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles told Board members as he prepared to give his report at last week's meeting.

Knowles was referring to the Board's financial predicament. Since the money from the state which was due Sept. 20 was delayed, the Superintendent reported that $400,000 would have to be borrowed to meet the school system's payroll.

As soon as the state money arrives, Knowles said that the loan could be paid back except for $125,000. He anticipated that the money would be paid back to the First National Bank of Columbiana and the First National Bank of Birmingham within 5-10 days.

Then another loan will have to be made from the Columbiana bank, Knowles told the Board, to take care of the unpaid amount of the first loan. That money would have to be paid back by January including a 6 percent interest charge.

The reason for state money being late in arriving was attributed to Hurricane Frederic which caused a delay in cities turning in tax money to the state.

To add to their woes, the Board was also informed that if the state ran late again with their check, an additional $750,000 might have to be borrowed in November.

And the Board was reminded that proration might take a 3½ percent or better chunck out of the check the state would be sending.

"There's no hurry about getting to Montgomery with our budget," Deputy Superintendent of Education Vern Davis told the panel. Davis explained that the usual check would not be in the State Department Special Education Trust Fund, because this year, he said, they are operating on a "zero" based budget.

However, the Board will be meeting Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m. to consider the 1979-80 budget.

In other business at their meeting last Wednesday, the Board voted to let Mechanical Erection Company go ahead with the number one alternate project in the Vincent High School renovation.

That work will cost $36,654 and involves installing lighting. The recommendation was made by architect Al Dampier due to the company's upgrading of their contract.

In other action, the Board awarded the contract for a lunchroom delivery vehicle to International Harvester of Birmingham. The company submitted a low bid of $13,959.36.

seconded by Willard Payne, passed unanimously.

Prentice O'Barr, responding to a letter from city attorney Frank Ellis, Jr., told the council that he would remove a fence he had built across a public road in Pelham.

The council approved the reappointment of Frank Dorrance, Jr., as chairmman of the library board.

Dorrance reported that there are now two seats open on that board.

PPD Chief D.O. Watson reported that in September his department issued 166 citations, worked 36 auto accidents, one arson of a vehicle, nine cases of vandalism, 11 grand larcenies, four petty larcenies, one assault and battery, seven burglaries, one robbery of a person, and recovered one stolen vehicle.

PFD Chief William Bryars reported that in the last month his department answered 43 alarms, 15 of which were fires and 28 of which were rescue runs. Firefighters spent a total of 141 man-hours in drills and training, he said.

Mayor Dunaway announced that the city's new rescue vehicle would probably arrive Thursday.

The mayor also noted that a move to organize a Pelham Chamber of Commerce appeared to be underway. Tanner said he would be willing to work with interested businessmen on the new organization.

The mayor said that Joe Littlefield would be sworn in as councilman at the next meeting (October 15).

Littlefield, who used to run a curb market in Pelham, was defeated by John Tanner in the last council election, Dunaway noted.

Taxpayers face courthouse confusion

by Marcia M. Sears

Shelby County taxpayers face one of the biggest messes in history when they try to pay their taxes this season.

There are apparently so many errors in the newly re-appraised ad valorem tax figures that no one is sure what is correct.

In figures coming from the office of County Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds the value of one mill varies from $251,122 to $320,970. The county levies a total of 32 mills in all the various funds.

Until the total amount of tax income the county can expect is known, the County Commission, the schools and the hospital cannot figure their budgets for the fiscal year which has already begun.

Another reason to anticipate problems in taxpaying this year is the delay in preparing tax notices. Tax Collector Fay Quick has usually mailed out all tax notices by September 1. This year, however, the notices were not delivered to her office until last Saturday, and they were not ready to mail. The county has hired four extra workers who are frantically doing by hand the separation of notices that was formerly done by the computer. Hundreds of the notices have names on them, but no addresses, and so will not be mailed.

Mrs. Quick fears it will be three weeks before the tax notices are in the mail.

Individuals are still calling to the attention of the probate judge errors in their property listings. Tuesday afternoon Snowden showed the Reporter the forms sent to one man showing he owned four lots. He says, however, he owns only three lots. This type of story has happened to dozens of county residents. Knowledgeable people are shaking their heads and saying everyone should check the county records against their deeds when all this is over to be sure they are not paying taxes for someone else, and that no one else is paying taxes for them.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

When I got there the score was 0 to 0. It always is two seconds before the referee blows his whistle. Sometimes it stays that way until he blows his whistle again, for the last time that night. Other times it can go as high as 27 to 18. Or even higher if the toting side gets too good for the stopping side.

One day, years ago, we beat Plantersville 86 to 0. Simon Finley just about killed one guy. In the bathhouse after the game, he sat there whimpering, bright, glassy tears rolling down his cheeks. "I'll never come up here to play again," he moaned. "At least, not until Samson graduates."

Fifty years later, standing in front of a table in his cafe on East College, telling his customers he had beef and pork for the meats, he was still carrying the name Samson around. He toted it everywhere he went. Until we finally laid him to rest on a little hill outside of town.

I go to football games as long as the weather is mild. Let one cold snap pop up, and I pull the cover over my bald head and let the young folks frolic as they will. The last time I tried to keep warm at a ball game we were playing Vincent, up there. It was November and the temperature was 29. Ninety-nine percent of the crowd was huddled around one fire, a little fire about the size of a snack of shorts.

I saw the fire once. When a fat lady left to get a cup of coffee, and before three grammer-school boys took her spot before the flames. The rest of the time I was a good fifty feet away, standing in the line the wind took coming from Buffalo.

But nobody left. I suppose they were afraid they'd freeze between the fire and the car and no one would find 'em before Sunday afternoon. Nobody knew the score either. At least, nobody who shelled out a buck to get in. I suppose the referee did and the umpire. But nobody asked them.

Somewhere, along about Yellow Leaf Creek, one guy in our car asked if anyone knew the score. But nobody answered. And he didn't press the point. He was so glad to be thawed out he didn't really care anyhow.

Most of the time I get to the game about the middle of the first quarter. By then everybody is settled and you have a 50-50 chance of seeing the game and not the back end of some guy hunting his seat.

But tonight I came early. For two reasons. First, I wanted to be sure I found out Dan Head's number before the game started. And, too, I always get a bang out of listening to the B.B. Comer band.

I found out Dan's number and then forgot it but made out all right since he was playing quarterback. Having played there myself 54 years ago, it's never hard to spot the quarterback.

I stood with Hank Spires in the north end zone. He left in the third quarter because Hank the 3rd came by with his grandmother and big Hank followed 'em out.

Somewhere up there I casually mentioned that sometimes the score gets as high as 27 to 18. I guess because that's exactly what it was tonight. Shelby High 27 and B.B. Comer 18.

10 of 17 County CETA workers get jobs

by David Moore

Ten of the 17 county CETA (Comprehensive Training Employment Agency) workers whose contracts terminated Friday were hired in permanent positions, Monday.

The CETA program, which is subsidized by the State Department of Industrial Relations and the Federal Department of Labor, is designed to train people who are at an economic disadvantage in job fields they might otherwise be unable to enter.

According to Gale Farr, Shelby County Public Service Employee Coordinator, an eleventh CETA worker whose contract had not terminated, was hired full time by the probate office.

"We like to see the CETA workers placed in full time employment," Farr told the Reporter. "If a job is available in the department they're working in, we like for them to have first choice (when possible) at that job."

Farr said that before the 17 contracts terminated on September 30, the county had 30 CETA workers. Contracts for 12 of those workers are still in effect, she noted.

Most CETA contracts, including the 17 which terminated Friday, are set up on a 78 week (18 month) basis, and once a contract expires, the worker cannot reapply for another, Farr pointed out.

The seven workers whose contracts expired and were not hired in full time positions were without a job Monday morning unless they had found employment elsewhere.

According to county engineer James Ray, eight terminated CETA workers started full time jobs in the highway division Monday morning.

"Out of the 23 CETA workers I had at one time (since 1975), at least 80% of them were really good workers," Ray said. "They really filled a gap in a very difficult time."

As for the overall success of the CETA program, Ray said, "I would say it is very good. It puts some people to work in areas they'd have a hard time getting into. I'd say in our county it's been real successful."

Oak Mountain park ranger Phil Roberson said that several CETA workers were employed there last summer. He noted, "The pay scale for CETA workers is higher than minimum wage and we were able to get better quality workers than we could have otherwise."

CETA worker Sherry Broom, who works at the North Shelby Fire District station, said, "I think it is a good thing, it gives people who don't have any experience a chance to see if they like a certain kind of work."

Broom is on a special, six-month contract which is still in effect.

Other CETA jobs still under contract in the county include library workers, a juvenile probation worker and YMCA workers.

The CETA office said that new contracts have been received and job openings will be announced at a later date.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

There was a TV show a while back on which the wife could solve cases that baffled everyone else.

She was so brilliant, in fact, that she was even able to fix her own doorbell. Well, it seemed brilliant to me anyway.

When it comes to dealing with anything mechanical, I draw a complete blank. If a kick or a whack won't make it work, I'm lost!

Sometimes I almost feel as though the equipment in my house must be able to sense my insecurity.

Take a few weeks ago for example. Problems suddenly developed right and left.

Just in the kitchen, the refrigerator, coffee pot and trash disposer all acted up at about the same time. It almost sounds like a conspiracy, doesn't it?

Although it didn't quit completely, the refrigerator developed an annoying little habit of defrosting every day. This meant that every time I'd take something out, I'd usually be doused with cold water.

And my counter top would be covered with water every time I'd try to brew a pot of coffee. I'm proud to say, that was one of the few things I've been able to fix. Don't ask me how - I just poked around inside it and suddenly it was working again.

A repairman had to deal with the ailing refrigerator and disposall which had started smoking when it was turned on.

Keeping the vacuum cleaner going when the hose started tearing wasn't too difficult. Since nothing mechanical was involved, I was able to solve the problem by applying a generous amount of masking tape.

However, as you might imagine, that didn't work for long. The hose finally came apart completely and I had to order a new one.

That sounds simple enough doesn't it? Uh-uh. Nothing was pertains to anything with a plug is every simple - well, hardly ever. Although the hose was ordered two months ago, it still hasn't arrived. And for anyone with shag rugs, that's very bad news.

But let me tell you about something that I'm finally have a measure of success with. It's the TV set of all things - and as far as I'm concerned, that's about the most mysterious thing that was ever invented.

As I mentioned, a little poking around cured the coffee maker's ailment. Well, a well placed whack gets the TV adjusted when it goes Kaflooey.

When the set is turned on. the only sound emitted is a loud buzzing. I've found the remedy for that is simply to leave the sound off for a few minutes.

However, if the buzz comes back during a program, or if the picture goes wild, everything can be brought back to normal by a well placed whack on top of the set.

But, after splitting a favorite bracelet in two while fixing the set by this method, I've learned to remove any jewelry that might conceivably break when applying the whack.

The problem of making the picture appear consistently in color still remains unsolved. Maybe I'll come up with the solution someday. Probably I just have to jiggle something somewhere.

UM enrollment increases by 6%

On-campus full-time enrollment is up 6 per cent this semester at the University of Montevallo compared to fall, 1978, UM President Jim Vickrey said this week in a letter to the institution's trustees.

Enrollment of freshman students is also up from 866 last year to 901 this semester, while declining off-campus and graduate enrollment kept the total "headcount enrollment" down, he added.

Student enrollment is down in UM's off-campus programs from 252 to 146, and President Vickrey said that the drop is largely due to the institution's voluntary efforts to pull back from some of its off-campus programs. UM officials announced last summer that they would gradually pull out of an upper-level program at Jefferson State Junior College beginning this fall.

The increase in on-campus full-time enrollment from 2,121 last fall to 2,247 and the drop in off-campus enrollment this fall both reflect objectives set for the year, Dr. Vickrey said.

Leukemia drive short of goal

With 65 percent of the neighborhood chairmen having completed their rounds, the Jefferson-Shelby County Leukemia Society fund has reached a total of $18,400.

These results were announced by Glenn Giddings, president of the Alabama Chapter, Leukemia Society of America.

"At this stage of the campaign, we wish to thank all residents and organizations who have already contributed to this very worthy cause. I can't help but feel encouraged that we will reach our goal of $38,000," stated Giddings.

"Because several marchers have requested more time, we are extending the drive to October 14."

THS band head appreciates help

Letter to Editor

Not many school band programs enjoy the luxury of having the community and parental support such as we have at Thompson High.

With the rising cost of inflation and the increased size of the band here, only through the support of our fine merchants and parents have we been able to represent our community and school.

Whether the band sells donuts or candles, the community always cooperates with the band's efforts. The band directors, therefore, would like to express appreciation to the merchants, community, and especially the very loyal Booster Club parents who have so unselfishly given their time and support.

This is symbolized by signs in the bandroom which read "PRIDE."

Baptists eye hospital

The Baptist Medical Center of Birmingham is currently reassessing area medical needs to determine if they will expand into Shelby County.

"As we're speaking today, there is nothing definite (in terms of a building project). But there is some activity," Bob Howerton, director of publicity for Baptist Medical Centers told the Reporter.

By "activity," Howerton said he meant the studying of population projections and medical needs, especially in north Shelby County.

The Baptist Medical Center owns 40 acres of land on Riverchase Parkway, East, in Shelby County.

An attempt to build medical facilities on that land some two years ago was blocked by the Birmingham Regional Health Services Agency. Shelby Memorial Hospital's directors and hospital director Richard Lind vigorously opposed the expansion.

Howerton said that no definite word would be announced on the possible expansion for about six months.

If Baptist Medical Center expands to Riverchase, it may be in the form of a professional building first, followed by "services" later, Howerton said.

Fire district sets budget, expands

by David Moore

The North Shelby County Fire District board of directors adopted nearly a quarter-million-dollar budget and expanded its coverage into Jefferson County this week. The action came Monday night at the board's monthly meeting.

According to board member Jack van Pelt, the board approved a 1980 fiscal year budget showing an expected gross revenue of $248,800.

The new budget provides for the addition of one fulltime firefighter to the district's present crew of seven, he said.

Another major provision of the budget calls for about $20,000 to be spent on a communication system. Currently, Pelham dispatches calls for the fire district, but when that town finishes its second fire station, NSCFD will operate a joint communication center from the building, van Pelt said.

He also said that the district's billing operation will now be handled by computer and that the bills will probably go out in two weeks.

The basic rate for most of the 1900 houses in the NSCFD class seven area is $100 per house per year. Other rates apply to other structures, the board member noted.

Van Pelt explained that the NSCFD has expanded its territory into Wine Ridge subdivision and Coshatt Estates. The adjoining areas were previously serviced under individual contracts with the Rocky Ridge Fire Department some six miles away.

The North Shelby station, being some three miles away, is expected to lower fire rates in the two areas to a class 7.

Though located south of the Cahaba River, Wine Ridge and Coshatt Estates are a part of Jefferson County. Under that county's law, residents of the areas voted to form the Wine Ridge Service District about three weeks ago.

The Wine Ridge Service District, which encompasses 181 houses, then entered into a contract with the NSCFD for fire protection. Van Pelt said the contract is for $18,000 per year.

Wendy Holcombe heads State Fair talent

"We figured it's right in keeping with our down-home theme this year at the Alabama State Fair," said Fair Director Dan Fleenor. "We have reached out for top name entertainers with an Alabama connection, so who could be more fitting than Wendy Holcombe?

The Shelby County country music whiz will show Alabama fairgoers why she skyrocketed to fame during two free nightly appearances at the big grandstand show on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 9 and 10, for one show each night beginning at 8 p.m.

Making her first appearance on Nashville's celebrated Grand Ole Opry in 1975, Wendy currently travels the nation as one of the stars of the popular syndicated TV show, "Nashville On The Road." She has played Las Vegas and also made her movie debut not long ago in a Walt Disney film.

Wendy's banjo talent came to light more or less by accident when she persuaded her mother to let her "fool around" with a banjo which her father was attempting to learn to play.

Sitting in the middle of her bed so she wouldn't drop the heavy instrument, Wendy taught herself to play several favorite tunes.

After that, she perfected her ability with long practice sessions out in the family barn, with goats and horses and cows for an audience. Some months later, on a birthday trip to Nashville, an Opry regular overheard Wendy playing a banjo in a music shop. One thing led to another and she found herself backstage at the Opry, picking for Roy Acuff himself. Just weeks later, she had been signed for the Porter Wagoner and Pop! Goes The Country TV shows for the new Nashville On The Road show. Then followed her first big appearance at the Opry itself and Wendy's career was off and running.

A natural showperson who is only now learing to read music, Wendy also plays the guitar, fiddle and mandolin and has recently cut her first album. The young entertainer attends Thompson High School in Alabaster.

UM student killed in car crash

A senior music major at the University of Montevallo died from injuries she received in a three car crash on rain slick Hwy. 119 Thursday.

Twenty year old Leslie Jan Edmonds of Montgomery lost control of her Volkswagen near the red light in Siluria at approximately 2:18 p.m.

After hitting a stone wall on the opposite side of the road, Edmond's car bounced back into the north bound lane and collided with a 1969 Dodge driven by Jimmy Terry Parker.

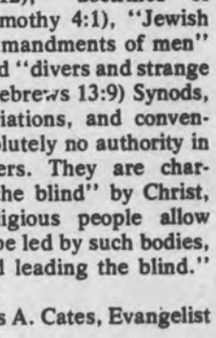
Trying to stop, a third driver lost control of his car which slid into the rear of Parker's car.

However, the 1976 Oldsmobile driven by William S. Rudder was only slightly damaged in the crash which caused moderate damage to Parker's vehicle.

In addition to Edmond's car, an Alabaster police car was also severely damaged as Alabaster policeman Steven Fancher raced to the crash scene.

Fancher reportedly only received minor injuries when the police car skidded and crashed into a telephone pole.

Edmonds reportedly died at Shelby Memorial Hospital later in the day from internal injuries.



WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"What Is the Apostles' Teaching?"

When the Lord's church was established on the day of Pentecost of Acts 2, Luke stated that "the disciples continued in the apostles' teaching." (Acts 2:42) In defining the apostles' teaching, we can first know what it is not.

One, the apostles' teaching is not the Old Testament. The Old Testament is not binding today. In the gospel age, man would not be under the law which God gave to the Jews when he "took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt. (Jeremiah 31:31-34; Hebrews 8:6-13) The Jews became dead to the law of Moses so they could be married to the law of Christ. (Romans 7:1-4) The law of Moses was nailed to the cross. (Colossians 2:14) Thus, one can be saved today only by the law of Christ.

Two, the apostles' teaching is not doctrines originated by man. Christ says, "But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of man." (Matthew 15:9) Such doctrines are also termed "the leaven of the Pharisees" (Matthew 16:12), "doctrines of demons" (I Timothy 4:1), "Jewish fables and commandments of men" (Titus 1:14), and "divers and strange teachings." (Hebrews 13:9) Synods, councils, associations, and conventions have absolutely no authority in religious matters. They are characterized as "the blind" by Christ, and when religious people allow themselves to be led by such bodies, it is the "blind leading the blind." More to follow!

Our Lady of the Valley plans ballooning and music for fair

A huge hot air balloon will be hovering all day Saturday over the spot where Our Lady of the Valley Catholic Church will be holding their Fourth Annual County Fair.

Most of the event, which will feature music, fun and games and good food, will be held on the church grounds on Cahaba Valley Road. However, the five mile run, which is the first activity on the days fun filled agenda, will take participants to Indian Springs School.

The finish line of the 8 a.m. event will be on the church grounds. And a one mile "fun run" will follow for those not up to the endurance test.

Boothes will be set up on the grounds where arts and crafts will be sold and there will also be a section for trash and treasures.

Anyone who wants to try their luck at games of chance will be able to select from among 20 along the fairs' spacious midway.

For the younger fair visitors their will be pony rides, balloon rides and a space bounce.

Three on a String bluegrass band will perform and other musical entertainment will be provided by the Birmingham Banjos and Sweet Adelines.

The main attraction on the food menu will be barbecue. Other popular items that will be available for hungry fairgoers are: hot dogs, french fries, popcorn and cotton candy.

Wilsonville fair There were always long lines waiting to ride this pony and his buddy at the Wilsonville Elementary School's fair Saturday. Another popular attraction was the hot air balloon ride.

New class

Home Economics teacher Rose Ellen Hankins is showing 8th graders at Montevallo Middle School a film on human development. This is the first time that Introductory Home Ec has been taught at the school.

New course starts at MMS

A little self knowledge is a useful thing. And eighth graders at Montevallo Middle School are taking advantage of the opportunity by participating in a new class at the school.

MHS instructor Rose Ellen Hankins is teaching Introductory Home Economics to a class of approximately 25 students - half of them boys.

Besides getting to know themselves better, the students will also learn how to function independently and how to interact with a group.

"When I get out on my own, I want to be able to cook and sew," remarked one of the boys.

I see this as a good chance to learn more about myself," remarked another member of the class.

According to Hankins, the major emphasis of the course if not on cooking and sewing, although they will be taught, but rather on how to make decisions, how to interact with a group and consumer and career education.

Students are meeting in a lab fadlity which was prepared during the summer under the supervision of Area Vocational Director Jimmy Bice.

The lab is equipped with three kitchen units moved from the former Prentice High home economics room and renovated. A new refrigerator and sewing machines were purchased along with new tables.

Human development and family relationships are now being studied by the class. The next unit will be on clothing and the final segement of the half semester course will be on food and nutrition.

JR&H combine forces with Wade Realty

The Columbiana real estate firm Wade Realty has merged with Johnson-Rast & Hays Co., Inc., according to Robert E. Reed, president of the Birmingham based firm. Reed said that all of the sales associates of Wade Realty are now associated with JR&H's Pelham office.

"We are extremely proud to have these fine associates join our residential team," Reed said, "and we certainly are looking forward to this expansion in our service area with the addition of a sales force which is so influential in such areas as Calera, Columbiana, Wilsonville, Shelby Shores, and Lay Lake." The sales associates joining Johnson-Rast & Hays include Ross Bryan, Buck Falkner, Pat Formby, Peggy Wood and Jane Windham.

The merger became effective September 1, 1979, Reed pointed out. With the effect of the merger, some 35 listings in the service area of Wade Realty are now being serviced and marketed by Johnson-Rast & Hays.

HOW CAN YOUR ROOMS HAVE A FRIENDLY AT— MOSPHERE

What can you do when you're furnishing a room to help it have a friendly atmosphere? Here are a few ideas.

Make sure a room is not unintentionally drab. Add color here and there where needed to help make it more cheerful.

The seating pieces--sofa and chairs--should be arranged or grouped to invite easy conversation.

Ask yourself if your lamps furnish proper lighting aside from being decorative.

Shop for chairs that look inviting to sit in.

Make sure you have some coffee and other tables that don't look too frail and unusable. Make sure there are table tops or other surfaces which can be used by guests without fear of causing damage.

Give your rooms a sense of friendliness with the right choices of accessories. The proper use of pictures, mirrors, etc., will help.

Speaking of friendly atmosphere that's just what you'll find here. Our salespeople are friendly and helpful and you're free to come in and browse to your heart's content with no pressure or obligation.

Still going strong

Mrs. Manila Smiley, shown about to cut her 75th birthday cake, is pictured with some of the friends and relatives who helped her celebrate her birthday Sunday. Now in her 50th year as a beautician, Mrs. Smiley has no intention of quitting.

At 75 she still drives to work

"Old hairdressers never die, they just keep bending hair."

That's the philosophy of Manila Smiley who celebrated her 75th birthday Sunday.

Still active as a hairdresser, Mrs. Smiley first started working in a beauty shop 50 years ago.

That business was in Andulusia. Now Mrs. Smiley travels from her daughter's home in Altadena South to Five Points West to work in a beauty shop there three days a week.

Commenting on her mother's independence, Mrs. Jan Trucks noted the drive takes Mrs. Smiley an hour each way. "But she enjoys activity and being with people," Mrs. Trucks said.

When she's not at the beauty shop, Mrs. Smiley enjoys club work and making clothes for her grandson, Virgil Trucks III, who's nearly three years old.

If she's cautioned to slow down, Mrs. Smiley said she replies "If I die on the job, I'll die happy. I really enjoy my work," she declared.

Talking about her favorite subject, Mrs. Smiley pointed out that hair styles are gettinng back to the way they used to be when she first started in the business.

Mrs. Smiley's son Don was one of the guests at the celebration in Altadena South Sunday. He described his mother as "just about the best mother there ever was."

Other friends and relatives came from Birmingham, Andulusia, Tallasse, Wetumpka, Alex City and Georgia to offer congratulations to the guest of honor.

Library board honors Columbiana librarian

It rained throughout the afternoon Thursday as members of the Columbiana Library Board honored retiring librarian Mrs. Matti McGiboney at a tea.

"When we moved into this building ten years ago, it was on a real cold day," McGiboney recalled. And she laughed as she related picking up books that were spilled from a truck during the move from the town's recreation building.

Mrs. Cecile Leonard was Library Director at that time. And she and others that McGiboney had worked with over the years attended the reception.

Mayor Bob Bolton was another guest at the affair, and members of McGiboney's Sunday School Class, the Gleamers from the First Baptist Church of Columbiana, were also present.

Now that she'll have a lot more free time, McGiboney says she plans to "catch up" on visits to relatives around the state.

MATTIE McGIBONEY

Rabren, Mrs. J.B. Turner, Jr., and Mrs. Kenneth Walton.

In the receiving line were Mrs. Isbell, Miss Upton, Mrs. Bobby Upton and Mrs. Marshal Malick, mother of the groom, of Tampa, Fla.

On Saturday the bride-elect was honored with a luncheon given by Mrs. Carl A. Jones and her daughters, Rinalda and Patricia.

The honoree was presented with a gold framed wedding invitation arranged with pressed flowers, and she presented gifts to her attendants, Mrs. Rob Bolton and Miss Nancy Isbell.

Among others attending the luncheon were Mrs. Marshal Malick, Mrs. Bobby Upton, Mrs. Barney Isbell and Mrs. Teddy Kempgens.

A cake was also presented by several members to celebrate the club's 30th birthday.

Those presenting the cake were Ginny Fowler, Lorene Falkner, Myra Falkner, Sara Ozley, Lucy Turner and Carole Seale.

A new scholarship program for high school valedictorians at the University of Montevallo has been nominated for an award in the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) annual awards for innovative academic programs.

The Summer Valedictorian Program paid tuition and mandatory fees for any high school valedictorian to attend the five-week first semester of summer school at Montevallo, regardless of where the students planned to attend fall classes.

Of the 56 students who participated in the summer program, 48 registered for fall classes, although only 18 of the 56 had originally planned to attend UM this fall, according to Larry Peevy, director of admissions and records.

Scots plan fall festival

Kilts, tartan banners and other colorful sights will rival the early autumn scenery at Cheaha State Park when descendants of the sons and daughters of Auld Caledonia gather for a Scottish Festival on Saturday, October 6.

Co-hosted by the St. Andrews Society of Montgomery and the Caledonian Society of Alabama, the annual event will feature music by three bagpipe bands, as well as Scottish sons and dances, performed by members of the two societies.

Workshops in piping and Scottish country dancing are being added to the program this year, said Caledonian Society president, Gibson R. McKenzie of Birmingham.

Persons of Scottish descent are invited to attend and learn more about their ancestral roots, McKenzie continued.

The festival will begin with a bagpipe procession at 10:30 a.m. and conclude with a ceilidh from 3 until 4 p.m.

Those planning to attend are urged to bring a picnic lunch and a litter bag. Contact person: Nancy Duncan, 988-0518.

For UM professor

Play marks milestone

When the Greek tragedy, "Medea," opens Wednesday, Oct. 10, at the University of Montevallo, it will mark a milestone at UM.

W.T. Chichester, professor of speech and theatre at UM, and director of the production, is retiring.

Chichester has taken part in more than 300 productions, including over 30 that he directed at UM.

As a radio actor in the 1930s, he performed on the "Phillip Morris Hour" with Orson Welles, as well as several other popular series, including "Gangbusters," and "Junior G-Men."

"Medea," is the second Greek tragedy he has directed in his career. The first one, "Oedipus the King," produced in 1967, was highly successful at UM, and was performed at the Birmingham Festival of Arts.

He decided to produce "Oedipus the King" after overhearing two freshmen complain about having to study the play. "What a sad commentary," he said. "It's one of the great plays. But you can't just read it, you must see it.

"Greek drama may be difficlut for modern readers to visualize, so they don't read them. But once they see them, it all becomes clear.

"The classics have stood the test of time because they are exciting."

In addition to teaching at UM, Chichester has taught at the University of North Carolina, Baylor University, and North Dakota State University.

He served as Chief of Entertainment at the post level in the Army in WWII. Upon release from the Army, he returned to the University of North Carolina, where he had received his bachelor of arts degree in 1941. He received his master of arts degreee in 1946.

A member of the UM faculty since 1962, Chichester was awarded the second annual Marian Galloway Award for Outstanding Contributions to Theatre in Alabama last year during the Alabama Theatre League's annual meeting. One of the founders of ATL, Chichester also served as the statewide organization's second president.

"Medea" will be presented by the UM Theatre through Saturday, Oct. 20. Performances are at 8 p.m.

Trained Firemen

David Stone, County Forester for Shelby County, awarded Alabama Forestry Commission certificates of training to these members of the Montevallo Fire Department Monday. All the men underwent a forest fire-fighting course sponsored by the Commission last year.

Montevallo FD to mark 50th year

Montevallo's Fire Department, the oldest in Shelby County, made plans Monday night for its 50th Anniversary celebration, to be celebrated concurrently with Fire Prevention Week, October 7 to 13.

Films and talks on fire safety are planned for Montevallo Elementary, Middle, and High Schools, as are door-to-door handouts of fire prevention and escape literature in the evenings.

A large "learn not to burn" sign will hang from the extended snorkel at the fire hall all week.

In addition, a giant fireplug will be erected downtown with a fireman inside to pass out literature to passersby.

All property owners in the Montevallo Fire District, which stretches from Pea Ridge to Dry Valley, will be invited to sign up for free fire safety inspections during the coming year.

The week will be climaxed on Saturday, October 13, with a parade down Main Street, an open house at the fire station, and a 1920's style party in the evening.

The parade will feature two marching bands and equipment from some 12 fire department.

Open house will include a public inspection of all the department's firefighting equipment, remarks from public officials, and barbecued chicken sold by the Montevallo Secondary Firemen.

In other business Monday night, it was announced that Pete Guthrie would henceforth be the purchasing officer for the department, a position created to increase accountability and decrease waste.

Several of the men were presented with Alabama Forestry Commission certificates of training earned last year in a "trial by fire."

They were: Eugene D. Walters, Kenneth Blackburn, Mark Austin, David Webb, Jeff Payne, Lt. Milton F. Terrell, Nemesio R. Sosa, Larry E. Smith, Lt. Clarence Lee Stone, Lt. William A. Read, Ray Perry, Capt. Dudley D. Pendletion, Karl A. Perkins, Charles M. Murphy, Chief S.M. Mahan, Jr., Asst. Chief Joe McGaughy, Jimmy Lucas, Asst. Chief Robert M. Lightfoot, Lt. Harry Klotzmen, Claud Elledge, Charles Allen Baugh, Ernest W. Blankenship, Steven D. Gibbs and Alan Blackmon.

North Shelby charters new Pack

Cub Scout Pack 9 held its charter ceremony September 25. The new North Shelby Pack is sponsored by Christ the King Lutheran Church in Riverchase, which is also its meeting place.

Under the direction of Cubmaster Mike Cochran and other involved adults, Pack 9 already has three dens and 23 scouts in its program. Many of the scouts transferred from Pack 5 which had to close its membership due to over crowding.

The pack's American flag was presented to them by the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society, and the pack's charter was presented to committee chairman Dieter Hotz.

The theme for the scouts this month is Fire Detectives, and the scouts will be visiting area fire stations and Shelby Memorial Hospital to study fire prevention. Next month the scouts will be collecting canned goods for a Thanksgiving distribution to needy families.

Sixteen awards and badges were presented to scouts and den leaders at the charter meeting.

The scouts will meet at the church at 7:15 p.m. on the fourth Tuesday of the month. Anyone interested in signing up a child for the new scout pack can call Carol Nelson (663-6599) for information.

Tame Wildcats 24 to 10

Warriors remain undefeated

by Richard Crosby

One of the largest crowds ever to assemble in Shelby County witnessed the Thompson-Shelby County game last Friday night in Alabaster. The 3,000 plus fans saw a battle from the opening kickoff till the final horn as Thompson outlasted the Wildcats 24 to 10.

"You can't fumble seven times and win" coach Mark Bradley said of the game. "We executed our defensive scheme as well as we wanted to. Our kids did a good job of keeping poised. It was the first time we have been behind in a ball game all year. We're real disappointed to lose."

Thompson coach Larry Simmons told the Reporter, "We're tickled to death to win it. It was a real battle right from the start. It was a hard-fought game and also a clean game. Both teams played hard and we're just glad we won it."

The Warriors took advantage of an early Wildcat fumble down in Shelby County land. Quarterback David Cofer made use of the miscue with a 35 yard touchdown run. Steve Smitherman added the PAT to give the home team a 7-0 advantage.

Shelby County came back with a scoring punch of its own. Arthur Johnson brought the packed house to its feet with a thrilling 71 yard run for a touchdown. Dan Head added the PAT to tie the score.

In the second quarter, Shelby County again fumbled an opportunity to the Warriors. This time the defense held Thompson out of the endzone, but Smitherman didn't let his team down and booted a 20 yard field goal for the go-ahead points.

LAfter stopping the Wildcats, Thompson drove down the field for its most convincing touchdown. The Warriors generated seven points with a 70 yard drive. Cofer accounted for his second touchdown of the night on a bootleg play. Smitherman added the PAT making the count17 to 7.

The Wildcats came back down the field late in the first half but couldn't find the endzone. Dan Head got the call and promptly booted a 23 yard field goal to make the score 17 to 10 at the half.

The third quarter was the turning point for the game. Shelby County completely shut down the Thompson offense but the Wildcats couldn't get the ball in the endzone. Twice the Wildcats came within the 20 yard line only to fumble away scoring opportunities.

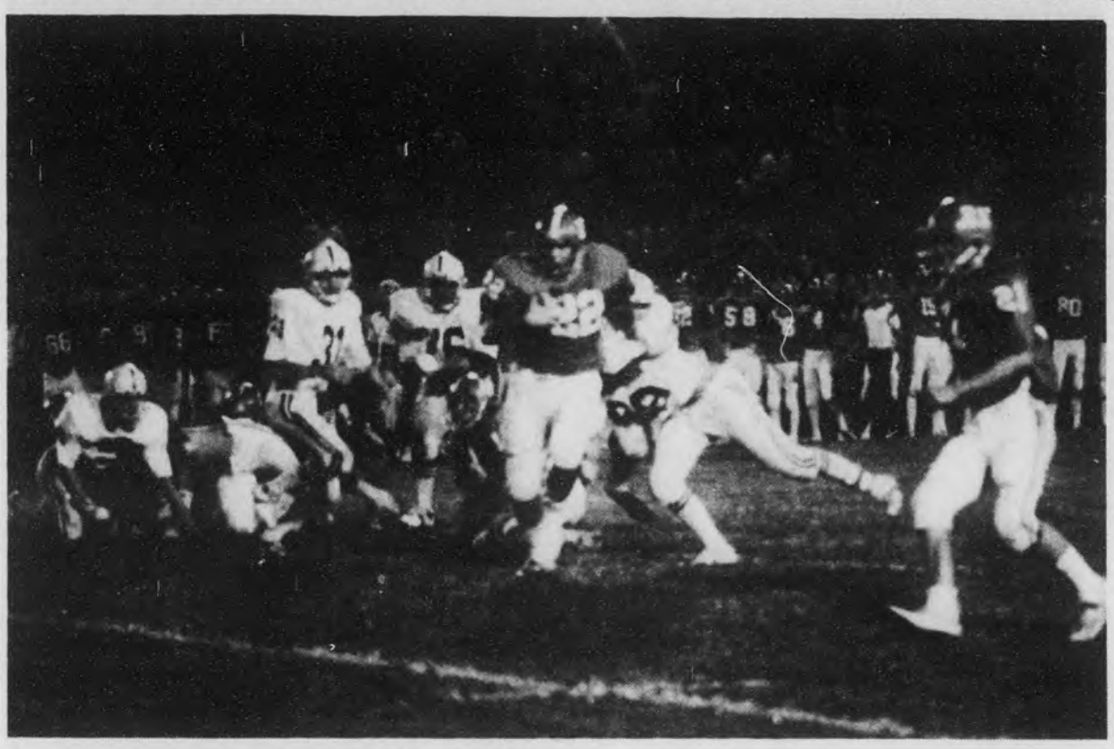
In the fourth quarter, Thompson got its third big break of the night, recovering a Shelby County fumble on the 20 yard line.

Several plays later, David Cofer copped his third touchdown of the night. Smitherman added the PAT to end the night's scoring.

The Shelby County offense was hurt early in the game with the loss of Darron Burns and Guy Mitchell. Arthur Johnson had the running chores for the rest of the night and although turned in a great performance, eventually ran out of steam playing on both offense and defense. Fot the night, the ninth grader collected 201 yards on 14 carries. Thompson's David Cofer ran for 164 yards.

Coach Simmongs named Bret Hopwood and Bret Davenport as his outstanding defensive players, and Mark Barnett and Mark Gamble as his offensive players.

Thompson takes its undefeated record on the road to Pelham this week while Shelby County hosts Bibb County for the Wildcat homecoming.



Cofer breaks through the line

Quarterback David Cofer breaks through the Shelby County defensive line and turns upfield. Cofer accounted for three touchdowns in the game played Saturday night.

Cofer heads for the goal line over Wildcat defenders

Cofer kept doing his thing all night. If he didn't just knock the tacklers out of the way he jumped over them. The senior had 147 yards rushing for the Warriors.

Johnson rambles

Freshman Arthur Johnson races upfield against the Warrior defense Saturday night. Johnson gained over 200 yards in the game.

Pelham gets third win

Pelham upped its record to 3-2 following a seven to zero win over the Oak Grove Tigers last Friday night. The Panther defense was the shining star of the night, halting successive drives by the visitors to get into the endzone.

"Our defense played super" coach Steve Rivers stated, "They were the difference in the game."

The first-year coach at Pelham named Paul Trammell, Don Sherrill, Chris Cutcliff and Ricky Needham as some of his outstanding defenders.

The only score of the evening came in the second quarter as the Panthers took advantage of an Oak Grove miscue. A punt was shanked out of bounds of the Grovers 26 yard line. Three plays later, quarterback Steve Rye found the endzone after a five yard jaunt. Woody Woodson booted the PAT to give the Panthers a 7-0 lead that was to stand for the rest of the night.

Oak Grove did have several opportunities. Pelham fumbled the opening kickoff, giving the Tigers the ball on the 30 yard line. After three plays, Oak Grove attempted a field goal which was no good, but Pelham was charged with a fifteen yard penalty. Again the Pelham defense held off the hungry Tigers and forced another field goal attempt that was also no good.

The win gave Pelham its third of the year, one more win than the team managed last season. "We're not satisfied with the two losses but we feel good about the improvement we've made. We're playing better and the kids are excited," Rivers told the Reporter.

Next week the Panthers host Thompson in a classic rivalry for the two neighboring communities The Warriors bring a perfect 5-0 record in the game.

Panther defense hugs on Pelham's defense showed its stuff Friday night against the Oak Grove Tigers. The Panthers repeatedly turned back the tough visitors and held on to a seven point victory.

Yellowjackets win homecoming game

Vincent got its fourth win of the 1979 season last Friday night and the win was even more important as a homecoming crowd cheered the Yellowjackets on to a 33 to 7 victory over Munford.

"Our offensive line played extremely well" coach Gary Garrett said of the game. "They have been the story for us the past several weeks."

A scoreless first quarter greeted the Jackets, but Garrett's crew got down to business in the second quarter.

With 8:37 left in the half, Sidney Yowe topped a 35 yard drive with a six yard burst. Rodney Driggers booted the PAT.

Vincent chalked up another score as time expired in the first half. Quarterback James Oden passed 30 yards to Tony Abbott for the six-point play. The pass ended a 70 yard drive for the Jackets. The PAT went wide as the Vincent team headed to the locker room with a 13 to 0 lead.

Vincent took the opening kickoff of the second half and drove 65 yards for the third touchdown. James Oden passed 35 yards to Rodney Driggers for the score. The conversion attempt for two points failed.

Six minutes later the jackets capitalized on a Munford error. Dexter McCrimmon recovered a Munford fumble on the visitor's 15 yard line. Two plays later, Eric Kelley raced 11 yards for the goal line and another Vincent TD. Driggers added the PAT upping the lead to 26 to 0.

Dwight Spradley got his touchdown of the night in the fourth quarter on a two yard run. Driggers was again successful with the point after giving the homecoming crowd the thirty-third point of the night.

Munford scored a consolation touchdown in the final four minutes of play against the Vincent third team defense.

For the night, Spradley gained 98 yards on 23 carries. Eric Kelley had 46 yards in 11 attempts. Defensively, Dexter McCrimmon had 17 tackles and one fumble recovery to lead the Jackets. Also turning in good performances against Munford were David Brasher, David Shawn, Steve Riggins, Tony Abbott and Rodney Driggers.

This week Vincent travels to Winterboro to take on the undefeated Bulldogs. Games remain tough for Vincent which will face Montevallo the following week.

Get first win of the year

Bulldogs humble Hornets

by Richard Crosby

Montevallo won the battle of the winless last Friday night. The Chelsea Hornets fumbled and stumbled 28 to 8 before the home Bulldog fans.

"I don't think we played as well and won as we did in a couple losses, but I'll settle for worse play and more wins" Coach Richard Gilliam said of the game.

"We spotted them 21 points in the first quarter and played catchup the rest of the game" Coach Richard Conkle told the Reporter. "They have a good team but we made too many mistakes. Montevallo had 14 points before we had completed one offensive play."

Chelsea's woes started on the first play of the game. The Hornets fumbles the opening kickoff and Montevallo set up shop on the Chelsea 32 yard line. Several plays later, Paul Russell burst two yards for Montevallo's first score. The PAT was wide.

After the ensuing kickoff, Chelsea fumbled on its first offensive play. Montevallo recovered on the 35 yard line and nine plays later Clay Cardone ran one yard for the touchdown. Paul Russell passed to Scott Studdard for the two-point conversion.

With 54 seconds left in the first quarter, the Bulldogs engineered a 69 yard drive in five plays. The touchdown play covered 44 yards as quarterback David melsoni passed to Derreck Stuart. Paul Russell booted the PAT making the score 21 to 0.

Montevallo got its final points of the night following another Chelsea fumble. Chelsea fumbled on the first play after the kickoff, and on the third play of the second quarter, Paul Russell burst 50 yards for the goal line. Jeff Hall put the toe to the extra point, ending the scoring for Montevallo for the night.

Chelsea's defense scored the school's only points of the night and of the year in the final two minutes of the half. A fumbled snap on a punt attempt forced the punter to scramble and attempt a pass. Chelsea's Chris Thompson intercepted the pass and raced 43 yards for a touchdown. Jeff Gulledge passed to John Bearden for the conversion giving the Hornets eight points.

That score stodd for the remainder of the game.

Offensively, Paul Russell led the Bulldogs with 111 yards on 14 carries. David Melsoni passed nine times and completed seven for 122 yards. For Chelsea, Kelly Cooper gained 94 yards on 12 carries.

Defensively for the Hornets, Chris Thomas, Keith Garrett and John Bearden were named by their coach for outstanding play. For the Bulldogs, David melsoni, Jeff Hall, Tim Jones, Jerome Jones and Steve Melsoni were named as having great games.

Montevallo meets Jemison this week in Montevallo. The last time the Panthers defeated Montevallo was in 1972, the first year Gilliam coached the Bulldogs.

Chelsea travels to Calera to play the Eagles in a homecoming game. The last time the Hornets whipped the Eagles was in 1972 during Calera's homecoming.

Montevallo looking good

Things were looking good for Montevallo last Friday night as David Melsoni's passes connected for touchdowns and the Montevallo cheerleaders kept the fans cheering. Members of the cheerleading squad for this year are (not in order) Beverly Lilly, Belinda Morris, Andrea Lovelady, Angela Russell and Breta Reisener. The Montevallo fans a lot to cheer about as their team won its first game of the year. Montevallo, now 1-3 for the season, faces Jemison this week in Montevallo.

Jemison upsets Calera Eagles 7 to zip

Jemison's Panthers and Calera's Eagles put on one of the most outstanding defensive displays in several years last Friday night in Panther Stadium. Unfortunately for Calera, Jemison's offense had the scoring combination that won the game.

Calera was blanked on the scoreboard by the Panthers, a feat that hasn't been done to Calera in many years. "We didn't have a play we could score on" coach Danny Alverson told the Reporter.

Jemison's size dealt havok to the Eagle offense which had yet to allow an opponent to score this year.

Alverson commented that the Panther defense played his team almost perfectly. "Our offensive line was like trying to hold water with pegboard. They whipped us all night from tackle to tackle and penetrated our line so quick that we were unable to get a play developed.

The Panthers scored the game's only touchdown in the first quarter. A 39 yard pass and PAT scored the seven points that won the game.

Calera's most serious challenge to Jemison came in the fourth quarter with four minutes left in the game. The Eagles moved to the Panther five yard line. From there, Bill Seay gained three yards on a sweep then one yard on a power play. With the ball on the one foot line, Calera tried two successive quarterback sneaks which failed to put the ball across the goal line.

"They had the big play" Alverson stated. "They also had the big defensive stand in the final period."

This week the Eagles face Chelsea for the Calera homecoming. "They're tougher than their record indicates. They have a young team and they always play well against us."

About the upset loss to Jemison, Alverson said, "We just have to rake up the leaves and go again and get ready for the next one. I Hope we learned something from the loss."

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

On Oct. 15, certain Ala. deer hunters will be twanging arrows from bowstrings all over the state. Bagging a buck or a doe with bow and arrow is a great achievement to the whitetail hunting nimrod.

However, I don't think the country's robin hoods would have done as well as they have without aid of the portable tree stand. Uppermost in my mind and the most popular is the Baker tree stand, invented and manufactured by Jim Baker in Valdosta, Ga. Several friends swear by this devise, which is sold in large department stores and through sporting goods catalogs.

There are four models. With the larger stands you have an add-on seat. By all means you should have the safety belt to keep you from falling off your stand when standing or dozing. The key to my using the Baker stand is the hand climber. Years ago when I tried to use the stand, the only way to get up a pine was to hung the tree and bend your legs and raise the stand with your feet. I just couldn't hug a tree and pull up because part of my anatomy around the belt line got in the way. But Baker has now apparently invented a hand climber that enables you to pull your body upward with out touching the tree trunk. I now have my stand and have been able to get 10 to 12 feet above the ground after several moments of puffing and resting.

Shooting from a height gives the hunter an advantage. (In Europe the customary way of shooting some big game species, like the wild boar, is the fixed platform with ladder.) A whitetail usually peers about horizontally for danger. A slight movement on your part, if you are "ground borne," will spook a nearby buck. The second advantage, and I would say most important, of the elevated perch is that you eliminate human body scent a nearby deer might detect. Since your body is warm, its odors will tend to drift upward and should not be sniffed by a deer if you are hunting in flat country or from a hill or ridge.

Conservatively speaking, I'll say I lost rifle shots at a dozen or so deer the past three years because I was not elevated above the scent detection line. That blowing snort is proof positive I was whiffed by a whitetail in the vicinity. That warning is sufficient to drive off all other deer in the area. I either suffered another long wait or else I moved elsewhere. I could have avoided these alternatives if I had been in a tree stand or even in the lower branches of a big oak.

I've been in camps where fellow hunters shaved and bathed the night before and splashed on lotion. That lotion means MAN to a deer. Don't get me wrong -- a hot bath will probably destroy some body scent. Many hunters swear by special scents concocted for the deer hunter: apple, grape, acorn -- but I think the best scent, especially for the last two weeks of the gun season -- is the sex scent of the doe deer in heat. Sprinkle liberally on shoe soles, trouser legs. It doesn't smell anything like Chanel No. 5, but if it kills the human odor or attracts a buck, it's worth the stink.

As most seasoned deer hunters know, your best times for collecting venison are dawn and dusk. During brighter hours of the day, these deer will be bedded down, preferably on a sunny slope. When gun season is in full swing, practically all deer will feed at night.

More than any other state, Ala. offers best chances to bag a deer. The estimated deer population is 1,300,000 animals. It's peculiar, however, that every state bounding ours has nowhere that number.

Some anti-bowhunting nimrods have said the archer cripples more deer than the rifleman. I feel sure the buckshot shooter, however, probably cripples more deer than he kills. But because of all the trouble he has to surmount, the bowman has to make sure his arrow hits a vital spot. For that reason alone you'll see more archers practice shooting for weeks before opening day, as compared with rifle hunters.

Cakes boost athletics

Ms. Marty Lucas proudly displays one of her cakes which the Montevallo Athletic Boosters give away during the home football games. The horseshoe cake above earned over $50 for the group.

Boat registration rules told by state agency

William B. Garner, Director of the Marine Police Division of the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, announces that the following boat registration procedure has been instituted by the Marine Police Division.

1. All boat registration renewals will be processed by the county Probate Judges and License Commissioners.

2. All new boats (or boats not previously registered in Alabama), ownership transfers, dealers, livery operators, and duplicates will be processed by mail through the Marine Police Division office in Montgomery.

We feel that this system will provide the least amount of confusion and allow a smooth orderly transition from the previous system.

Application blanks are being made available for the above registration procedures at the Probate Judges and License Commissioners offices as well as marine dealers, marinas, livery operators, and local Marine Police Officers. No renewal notices will be mailed by the Marine Police Division this year.

Registriation will begin October 1st with a grace period until November 15th.

New hunters's group seeks membership

The National Dee Hunters' Association has announced the formation of an Alabama chapter and the publication of a new quarterly magazine, "The Alabama Deer Hunter," for its members.

"We plan to publish a magazine that will tell deer hunters where the deer are in Alabama and how to bag them" Sam Coleman, president of the National Association said. "It's going to be a magazine about Alabama deer hunting and hunters."

Membership in the new chapter is $12 annually, and anyone interested in joining should write to: The National Deer Hunters' Association, Alabama Chapter, One Court Square Suite 110-J, P.O. Box 4486, Montgomery, 36101.

In addition to the new magazine that comes with membership, the NDHA is offering its members a decal for their vehicle, a jacket patch, membership card and a unique hunters' insurance policy.

Richard's aggravating forecast

by Richard Crosby

Can't believe the criticism that has come my way the past week. Shelby County High fans started throwing cups of ice at me during the game

Fact is, I called the game just as I saw it and in reality, I correctly chose the winner.

Just to ease the minds of local fans, I'll admit that the past several weeks I've picked certain teams to lose just to get them fired up. Just look what I did for Jemison last week.

NO MORE!! From now on it's the truth.

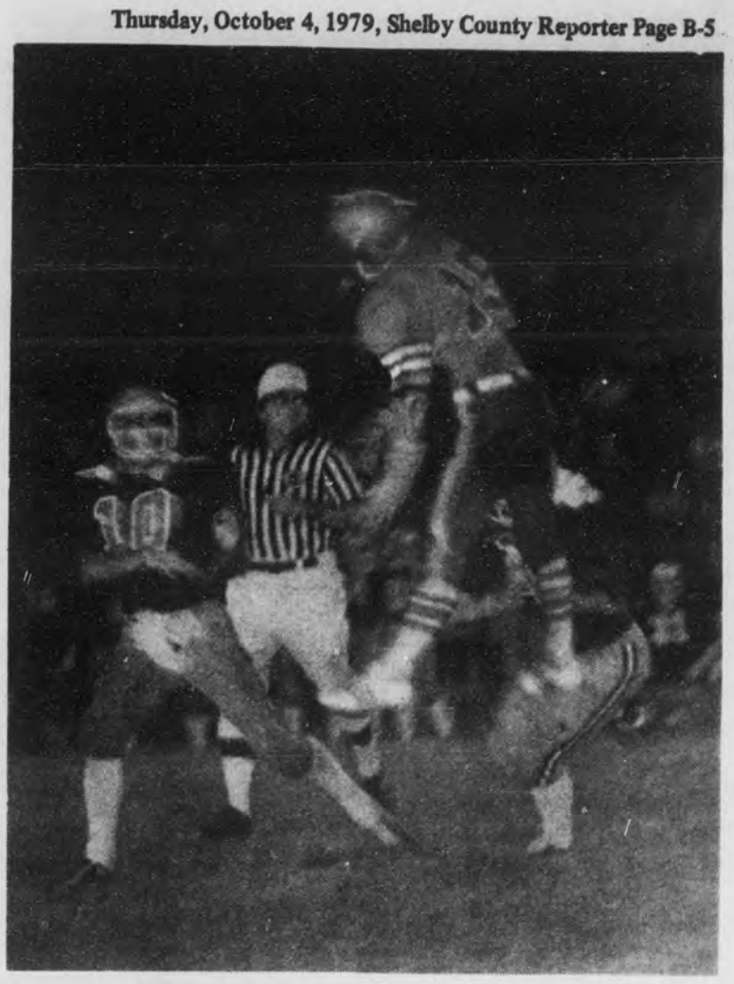
Thompson-Pelham-The Panthers are going to have their hands full with undefeated Thompson and I predict the game will end with the Warriors still undefeated. Prediction: Thompson 34, Pelham 0.

Shelby County-Bibb County-Bibb is no pushover as the Wildcats will learn Friday night. Shelby County has one of the toughest schedules around and with the loss of two runningbacks, Bibb will have the upper hand in the Wildcats' homecoming. Prediction: Bibb County 29, Wildcats 13.

Vincent-Winterboro-I think the yellowjackets can take those Bulldogs. Vincent has shown a lot of improvement the past few weeks and although they might not be able to contain the Bulldog offense, the same will be true of the other's defense. Prediction: Vincent 28, Winterboro 19.

Chelsea-Calera-Chelsea has everything to gain and nothing to lose this week and that will give the Hornets an edge. However, against the Calera defense the Hornets don't have a chance as Calera takes out revenge. Prediction: Calera 44, Chelsea 0.

Montevallo-Jemison-The Panthers are looking to whip another Shelby County team and the Bulldogs will be prime meat for the Jemison crew. Too bad Montevallo has to lose at home. Prediction: Montevallo 12, Jemison 32.



Rye's pass blocked

Quarterback Steve Rye got a few surprises. One was this high jumping defender from Oak Grove who batted away a potential pass.

Briarwood, ISS get volleyball wins

Briarwood Christian School was host to three volleyball matches last week. Teams playing in the matches were Briarwood, Indian Springs and Pelham.

Indian Springs defeated Briarwood in the first matches. Briarwood won the first game 15 to 13, but then lost 13 to 15 and 4 to 15 to the visitors from indian Springs.

Indian Springs was also the winner against Pelham, winning in two games 15 to 5 and 18 to 16 in a tiebreaker. The final match involved Pelham and Briarwood with the Lions victorious over the Panthers. Briarwood blanked Pelham the first game and then won the second 15 to 11.

Panthers cause fumble

Pelham's defense made breaks for the team as the above photo shows two Panther defenders knocking loose a fumble from the Tigers.

A $3.00 Management Area Deer and Turkey License in addition to a regular hunting license and management area permit is required for hunting deer and turkey on Management Areas.

FISHING LICENSES

Resident--Annual Rod and Reel $6.00; Hook and Line (ordinary cane pole) in county of legal residence $1.00; Disabled 25¢.

Non-Resident--Annual $10.00; Seven-day Trip $4.00.

A 25¢ issuance fee is required for each above-listed license. All military personnel are required to have licenses.

A $5.00 state and $7.50 federal Duck Stamp are required in addition to the appropriate hunting license when hunting migratory waterfowl.

Residents over 65 years of age may obtain lifetime hunting or fishing licenses by paying the appropriate issuance fee.

Coosa Valley Rebs get second win

Coosa Valley Academy got its second win of the year last Friday night against Faith Academy of McCalla. The Rebels came from behind to nip the visitors 7 to 6.

Faith got on the scoreboard first with a first quarter touchdown. Ronnie Vines ran six yards for the score. Dean Tindle's PAT was low, providing the margin for victory for Coosa Valley.

The Rebels scored their only touchdown in the third quarter with just two minutes remaining. Mike Wheeler races 11 yards for the score. Don Smith booted the PAT giving Coosa Valley the lead by a single point which held up through the rest of the game.

For the records, Wheeler gained 126 yards on 21 carries for the Rebels who rolled up 205 yards total offense. The Rebels also recovered three Faith fumbles. The win made the CVA record for the year 2-3.

Cable television making progress

The first hookups to Shelby County Cablevision are just around the corner for some residents of Pelham, Helena and Alabaster.

"All we've got to do is get the cable fired up and some folks hooked up," Cablevision president Terry Johnson told the Reporter. "I certainly don't see why we shouldn't be in operation within the next two to three weeks."

Residents of the King Valley area of Pelham off Hwy. 52 will most likely be the first viewers to have the cable offered to them, Johnson said.

Other areas which may be hooked to the cable at the same time, or shortly thereafter, are parts of Deering Downs and the northern end of Navajo Hills.

According to Cablevisionn chief engineer Larry Castleberry, so far some 1500 feet of support strand has been strung from the Pelham based earth station behind city hall, to Hwy. 52. The cable itself will be lashed to the strand.

The long awaited arrival of cable TV to Shelby County has been hampered by modifications which South Central Bell has had to make to phone lines in the area, Johnson said. Originally, he had targeted August as the date the system would become operational.

Though the utility companies have been very cooperative, Johnson pointed out, they were slowed down by interruptions such as Hurricane Frederick, which required many linesmen and other workers to be called to South Alabama to repair damages there.

Castleberry said that two Cablevision crews are currently doing "make ready" work such as stringing strand, which started about two weeks ago. About two miles of cable per day can be strung by the crews.

Johnson noted that the initial cable system calls for approximately 55 miles of cable in the tri-city area.

Cable in Chandalar South is being buried underground with the other utilities. This area. Johnson said, will be connected early in operation with the cable which will stretch across Cahaba Valley Estates.

Port South, between Deering Downs and Navajo Hills, another subdivision with buried utilities, will not be connected until some time later in the operation, Johnson noted.

Due to the $6000 per mile cost of stringing the cable, Johnson said that the company would be unable to service any areas within the tri-cities which has a density of less than 40 homes per mile.

Except for the Deering Downs subdivision, the cable will probably not be available to other Helena residents until Pelham and Alabaster are hooked up. This is due to the agreements reached between Shelby County Cablevision and the three cities, Johnson explained.

Johnson said he was concentrating on making cable available to residents of the tri-cities at this time, and until that part of the operation is complete, he will not be considering other areas of the county.

The basic cable connection will afford TV fans the choice of eight stations: the four Birmingham stations, Channel 17 in Atlanta, the Christian Broadcasting Network, Madison Square Gardens Sports, and C-Span's live coverage from Washington of the proceeding of the House of Representatives. Local bulletin, time, temperature and weather will be shown on anothe.

Two m. vie packets, Show Time and Home Theatre Network, will be offered, as will stations WOR (New York), WGN (Chicago), and Nickelodeon, which programs to children.

Under the mountain

Long before Highway 25 was built over Coosa Mountain, the Central of Georgia Railroad built a half-mile tunnel through the mountain. The 100-year-old tunnel in use, and still bears soot smudges from steam locomotives which thundered through it on the route between Birmingham and Columbus, Georgia. Local stories connect the tunnel with the legendary race between sledge hammering John Henry and the spike driving machine. (Photo by Moore)

Hwy. 25 over Coosa Mt.

It took a special law to finish paving

by David Moore

In the beginning was the mountain. Indians who came to area foot-beat a rugged path over the mountain. Later, settlers called the path the Winding Stair Trail. The mountain they named "Coosa".

Sidney Word Lee, founder of Buffalo Rock in Birmingham, instigated the construction of a highway over the mountain to open the Coosa Valley to developed lands in the west. Lee was also interested in access to his 3000 acre camp in Calcis, an area he considered the most beautiful in the world. Lee reportedly claimed, "Whether I go to heaven or hell, I'm going to be sure to go through Calcis!"

But building Lee's dream highway, which was started in 1914, was no simple matter.

History of the construction of Highway 25 over Coosa Mountain in Northeast Shelby County.
Part III
by David Moore

Though hampered by rugged terrain and lacking modern earth moving machinery, the main reason completion of the mountain pass took so long (1914-1921) is because the project ran out of money.

Originally numbered Hwy. 21, the road remained unpaved until 1954, when Columbiana attorney Karl Harrison, then Shelby County Representative in the State Legislature, pushed for a bill to sponsor the project. After paving, the numeral designation was changed to Hwy. 25.

Alton Parker, who now lives on Coosa Mountain, worked on the paving of the road. In 1977, Parker, who grew up in the area, opened the Mountain Terrace Restaurant with his son Robert and Wayne McDaniel, who was then a Vandiver minister.

Overlooking Vandiver from the south side of the mountain, the restaurant offered a fine scenic view and drew good crowds, according to Parker. But due to personal health problems, the restuarant closed after five months. It is currently in the process of being sold, Parker said.

Parker has heard stories of an old wagon shipment of silver reportedly lost in the valley south of Coosa and Double Oak Mountain. Parker says it's not the shine of silver that attracks him to the area, but instead the clean air, cool breeze and his view of the valley to the east early in the morning just before sunrise.

Grady Isbel and Earl Bowden claim that in the days before the pollution got too thick, thirty years ago, one could look from atop the mountain to the courthouse dome in Talladega, forty miles away.

"I don't see why anyone would want to go to the Smokies when we have these mountains right here in Shelby County," says Bowden.

Bowden, who once moved to Arkansas, received a master's degree in experimental psychology from the university, and thought he would never return to the area, relates an Indain legend which he says may have some validity to it.

According to the legend, anyone who bathes or gets wet in Shoal Creek, (the water runoff for Coosa and Double Oak Mountains) can never leave the creek for good, but will always have to return.

If this is indeed true, they can return via Hwy. 25, and like Sidney Word Lee, pass through Calcis.

UM names faculty scholars

Five top University of Montevallo professors have been named UM's University Scholars this year -- one of UM's top faculty honors.

The five, William Cobb, professor of English; Dr. Robert Cowan and Joan Yarbrough Cowan, UM's duo-pianists-in-residence; Frank McCoy, chairman, Art Dept.; and Dr. Hendrik Van Tuyll, professor of philosophy and religion, will each lecture during UM's second annual Freshman Seminar Program this semester, according to Dr. Russell Warren, academic vice president.

Dr. Warren said the professors were chosen for their ability to interest students in scholarship and to help students understand that all academic subjects are related to each other.

"While there are many objectives of the Freshman Scholars program," he said, "two stand foremost in my mind."

"One is to allow entering students to glimpse at the excitement of learning as portrayed by the five University Scholars.

"The other is to assist students in understanding that all subject matter is interrelated."

Fatal

Walter H. Burbank, 75, of Route 1, St. Joseph, Tenn., was killed at 7:10 Monday morning when an 18 wheel, tractor-trailer rig crushed the rear half of the car in which Burbank was riding. Burbank was a rear seat passenger in the 1978 Thunderbird. The driver of the T-Bird, Madgielean Burbank and another passenger, Paul H. Burbank, 54 were taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital. The accident occurred two miles south of Calera on I-65 when the driver of the auto braked to avoid a spare wheel that had fallen from an oncoming van.

Inverness Center rises near Highway 280

by David Moore

A six story office building for Taylor Mathis of Alabama, Inc., is currently under construction at Inverness Center. The high-rise will be the tallest, non-industrial structure in Shelby County.

According to Leo Karpeles, vice president for Taylor Mathis and general manager of Inverness Center, the office will encompass 107,000 square feet of space and is being built at a cost in excess of $3 million.

Brice Building Company contracted the construction of the office and two floors of the structure have already been erected. When complete, the structure will be enclosed in grey tinted glass with black aluminum panels.

Rental office space will be available, Karpeles said.

Inverness Center is being developed by Taylor Mathis for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

The ten year master plan for Inverness Center calls for a well landscaped 172 acre office park which will include 26 buildings. Nine of the building sites overlook a 106 acre lake. Utilities will be underground.

"Our real bag is landscaping," Karpeles told the Reporter. "We love trees. It breaks our heart every tree we have to cut."

Karpeles went on to explain that the idea behind Inverness Center is to attract national corporations with regional offices in Alabama to move into the office park.

The Taylor Mathis building will be the second office constructed in the complex. McWane, Inc., moved into their corporate office in Inverness last August. A vice president of the company refrained from disclosing the cost of the modern split-level facility which overlooks the lake.

McWane, Inc., a holding company, owns, among other interests, McWane Cast Iron Pipe, McWane Coal, Empire Coke, Simsco Companies in Columbiana, and the recently acquired American Foundation Life Insurance Co., of Little Rock, Arkansas.

When complete, the entire Inverness Center will encompass some 1.5 million square feet of office space. Karpeles said that Taylor Mathis intends to begin a similar six story building as soon as possible after the first of the year.

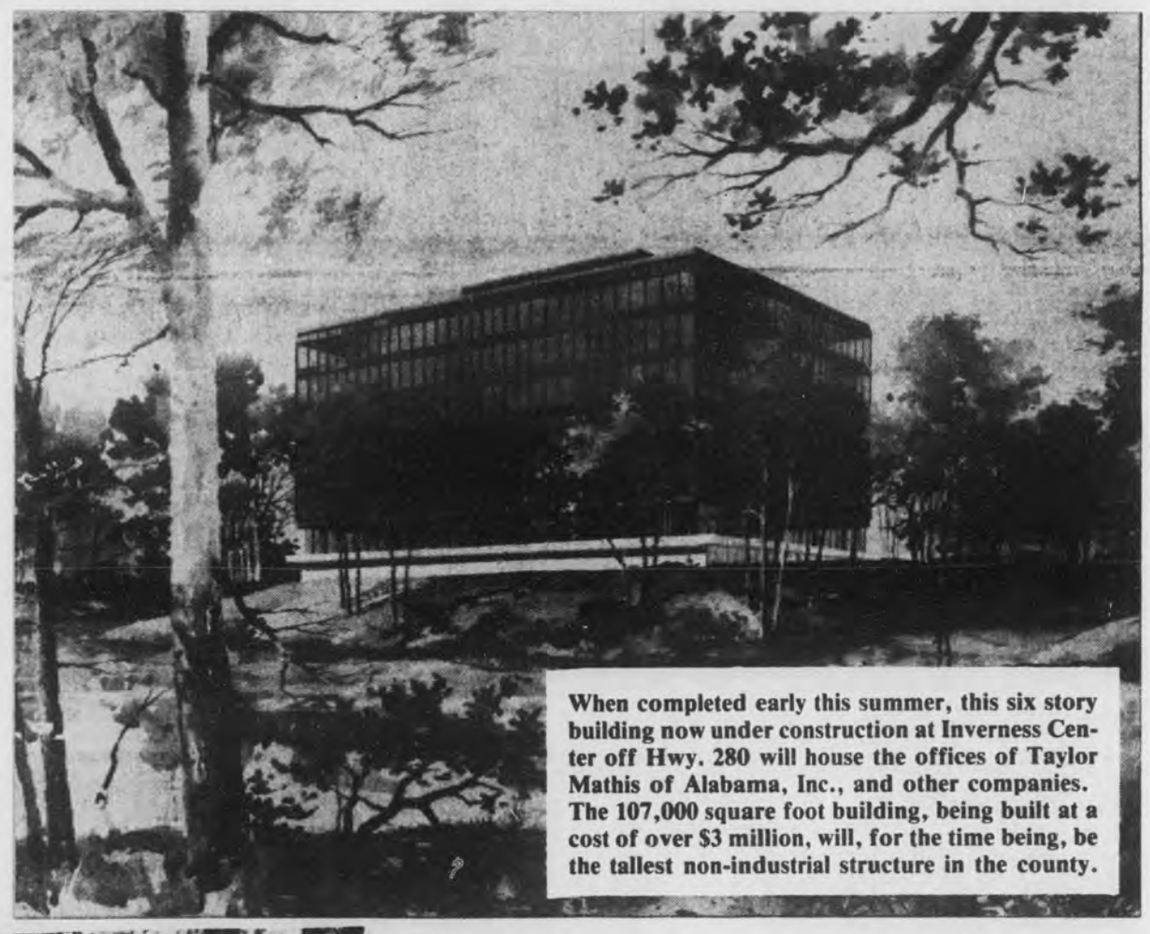
The master plan calls for the construction of a possible seven story hotel facing Hwy. 280 to be operated by a national chain. Three or four banks will also be facing that highway.

Karpeles said that the only commercial businesses in the park will be a possible restaurant or two, and a small shopping center or mall some three years in the future.

Karpeles said he has some concern over the lack of any zoning restrictions in the area.

Land across Hwy. 280 is in a different beat than Inverness, and any zoning control voted in by Inverness would not affect development on that land, he noted. Already one light industrial site and a filling station have been built across from Inverness.

"We're going to worry about our 1534 acres (the Inverness community), and create our own environment. There's nothing we can do about the other property across the street," Karpeles said.



When completed early this summer, this six story building now under construction at Inverness Center off Hwy. 280 will house the offices of Taylor Mathis of Alabama, Inc., and other companies. The 107,000 square foot building, being built at a cost of over $3 million, will, for the time being, be the tallest non-industrial structure in the county.

Errors crop up in tax notices

Somewhere between 1,500 and 2,000 tax notices that are being mailed within the next two weeks to Shelby county taxpayers will be incorrect.

But steps are being taken to correct them, according to Jim Sumners, spokesman for Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds.

Sumners said this number represents about 20% of the errors that were brought to the attention of the tax assessor and the Board of Equalization. Some 80% of the errors were corrected before tax notices were prepared.

There may be other errors that have not been brought to Sumners' attention, he said.

In all there are about 30,000 to 32,000 tax notices going out to Shelby County taxpayers, Sumners said.

The Tax Assessor's office prepared the figures on taxes, and the county computer printed the notices. There was no time for Tax Collector Fay Quick to check the accuracy of the notices because they were not ready until the last minute. Mrs. Quick has a staff of special workers preparing the mailing now, and expects to have them mailed within 10 days.

Mosquitoes return for second time

By David Moore

Better buy some insect repellent and sew up the mesh netting because the mosquitos are coming again.

"Due to excessive rainfall, we anticipate a heavy outbreak of mosquitoes in the Coosa Valley," Joe Stevenson, superintendent of insect control and recreational environment for Alabama Power, told the Reporter last week. Stevenson predicted that the pesky critters began hatching over the past weekend.

According to Bruce Gilliland, director of AP public relations, Aedes vexans, or floodwater mosquitos, are hatching from standing water in the lowlands along the coosa River.

Gilliland said Alabama Power, sprays for Anotheline mosquitos which breed in permanent pools such as lakes and reservoirs, but the company has no control over the floodwater mosquitoes.

More than 30 different species of mosquitoes are found in Alabama, Gilliland said.

Stevenson pointed out the lifespan of the mosquito, which normally breeds late spring, is four to six weeks, but in cool weather they may live as long as two months.

The abnormally heavy rainfall the past few months has given the mosquitos a second breeding season, Stevenson explained.

Gilliland said that the outbreak is expected to peak this week, but, depending on the temperature, it could last several weeks.

Stevenson said that diesel fuel, oil or kerosene can be used to film over breeding ponds and kill unhatched larvae.

First cotton bale ginned

The first bale of cotton of the year was ginned in Shelby County Tuesday morning.

The Coosa Valley Coop at Vincent ginned the cotton which was grown by Howard Green of Rt. 1, Vincent. W.G. and Sam Florey are the ginners. The bale weighed 650 pounds and was considered a good grade.

Approximately 3,500 acres were planted to cotton in Shelby County this year.

Wilsonville council welcomes new woodwork industry

by Bert Seaman

The news that a small industry wants to locate in their community was sweet music to the ears of Wilsonville Council members.

Even though John Folmar told the panel his woodworking business wouldn't generate any tax money for the town, they were still anxious for him to open up shop on the corner of South Main and Hwy. 25.

The council was impressed by the Columbiana man's plans to improve the appearance of the building which is in such a conspicuous location.

Their worries that the waste material from his business would be scattered were laid to rest when Folmar explained he would use a cyclone device. With this, waste would fall to the ground in one spot.

Folmar told the panel that anyone could come by and get the sawdust and shavings to use for mulch at no charge. He also offered to give away some scrap lumber which could be used for bean pole stakes.

The need for more room was the reason Folmar gave for wanting to move his business which is now near his home on County Road 97 between Calera and Columbiana. He also mentioned that he needed the three phase power which is available at the new site.

Noting that 95% of his business is wholesale, Folmar said that he delivers the special doors, windows, columns and other units that he makes for contractors. He pointed out that the tax collected was at the point of delivery, which was usually in Jefferson County.

The doors on the new home of Governor Fob James in Montgomery were built at his shop, Folmar reported.

Council members were unanimous in voting to accept the businessman's proposal to locate in the community. He reported he now employs three men but said he hoped eventually to hire three more.

The panel expressed hopes that other businesses would follow Folmar's example.

Mentioning that trail bikes were being ridden on highways and that some riders failed to wear helmets, Councilwoman Dot Scruggs said that the matter had been called to the attention of Wilsonville Police Chief Sherman Humphries.

The chief told her, Scruggs said, that several citations had already been issued.

Once again bringing up the subject of updating the city's

Pun'kin time

Fall is in the air and pumpkins are on the ground and one of the most colorful displays of the famous harbinger of Halloween is the front yard of the C.T. Tingle family between Montevallo and Pea Ridge, where 700 to 800 pumpkins can be seen among the trees. Tingle and his daughter Susan, a ninth grade student at Montevallo High School, inspect this year's crop.

Sawdust may be fuel of the future at UM

Sawdust and wood chips may be the fuel used in the future to fire up the heating plant at the University of Montevallo.

Congressmen Richard Shelby announced last week that he has helped arrange a $1.19 million federal loan to UM to install a multi-fuel central campus heating and cooling plant.

The UM loan is the only one awarded in Alabama from a nationwide fund available for such projects, Shelby said.

The new boiler, once installed, can use natural gas, coal or wood by products for fuel, according to Hollard Floyd, director of UM's physical plant.

Substituting wood by products for natural gas could cut operation costs by about one-half Floyd said, based on today's high natural gas costs. The UM central plant now uses either gas or coal.

It should take only seven years for the university to realize a payback on the project, according to two independent engineering firms that studied the proposals.

The project should be completed within two years, Floyd said.

Cahaba Valley wreck takes woman's life

A Montevallo woman was killed in a wreck on Hwy. 119 North during last Thursday's heavy rainstorm.

Cathy Lee Maddox, 27; was killed instantly when her red, 1977 Datsun plowed into a pickup truck at 7:30 a.m., according to Coroner Billy Thompson. Six other people were injured in the accident.

Apparently blinded by the heavy rainfall, Miss Maddox failed to see a temporary curve built into the road for construction purposes of the I-65 overpass, the State Troopers office reported. She crossed into the southbound lane and met the pickup truck head-on, the trooper said.

Troopers said two addresses were listed for Miss Maddox, Route 2 in Montevallo, and Hefflin Ave. East in Birming-

MYRTLE BROOK

Two women installed to Hall of Fame

Myrtle Brooke will be installed in the Alabama Women's Hall of Fame on October 18 at Judson College, in Marion.

Miss Brooke designed one of the first college social work curricula in the nation after she came to the University of Montevallo in 1908. She also was a leader in establishing the first statewide mental health organist on and the Alabama Conference of Social Work. Miss Brooke died in 1948 in Montevallo.

President James F. Vickrey of UM will make the speech installing Miss Brooke.

Carrie A. Tuggle (1858-1924) will also be installed in the Hall of Fame on the same day. Mrs. Tuggle is being honored for establishing Tuggle Institute for orphaned black children and her work in helping establish the Jefferson County Juvenile and Domestic Court. A.G. Gaston will install Mrs. Tuggle.

All Alabamians are invited to attend the ceremonies at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Childersburg operation closed by National-Standard

by Reporter Staff

National-Standard Company announced this week that it will close its Childersburg plant indefinitely.

A majority of the 70 Childersburg plant personnel will be transferred to the company's Columbiana plant where a variety of wire products are now produced, company spokesmen said.

Several employees at the Columbiana plant, however, have been laid off for some time. Seniority of employees' service is expected to be the key factor in determining which employees from the Childersburg plant will get jobs in Columbiana. The employees are represented by the Steelworkers Union.

It is expected that the phase-out of the Childersburg plant will take about three months.

Headquartered in Niles, Michigan, National-Standard is a diversified manufacturer of specialty wire, metal products and machinery with plants in the U.S. and abroad. Its annual reports consistently show favorable earnings, but in the last two years the company has been showing concern for the profit status of the Alabama plants.

R.J. van Steelandt, company representative at the Niles headquarters, told the Shelby County Reporter in a telephone interview that the company hopes to expand the product line at Columbiana.

The plant has specialized in making wire cord for radial tires, but when the market for tire cord drops, it affects employment and sales at the plant, he noted. For that reason, van Steelandt said, by making several other types of products, the Columbiana plant will not be so vulnerable to cyclical demands for tire cord.

He also hopes that diversification will mean steadier employment for all the personnel at the plant. He did not say what other types of products the company will manufacture there.

Crop duster flips making forced landing

by David Moore

A crop dusting pilot was apparently unharmed after his plane flipped over during an emergency landing near Harpersville Monday.

According to K.D. Warner of the General Aviation District Office, Herman Muller, a crop duster for Coosa Flying Service, was forced to land his AgCat biplane after the engine blew a cylinder. Warner said that Muller landed in a field two miles south of Harpersville and the plan flipped over when the landing gear hit a mud puddle.

Muller was featured in an article on crop dusting which ran in the Reporter two weeks ago.

Though unavailable for comment after the crash landing, Muller had earlier described crop dusting as "fun with moments of sheer panic."

In the crop dusting article Muller noted that 25-30 accidents occur each month in the business and that about 30% of those are fatal. "But the good ol' American way is that it will always happen to the other guy," the pilot had said.

Harpersville police chief Elvis Lineger said that when he arrived on the scene around 4:40 p.m., the pilot was not there and there was no sign of injury. The plane was lying upside down in a field just off Hwy. 25, the chief said.

business license fee schedule, Mayor Austin Mitchell said that a special meeting would have to be called soon to take care of the matter.

Touching on the recurrent subject of garbage pickup, Scruggs noted that one resident had resorted to putting garbage bags in the trees. However, the Mayor explained, that had been done to keep dogs from tearing up the bags and scattering the contents.

Columbiana Council studies eyesore lots

Some of the overgrown lots in Columbiana are not only eyesores but health and safety hazards as well.

After bringing the matter to the attention of city fathers several weeks ago, Columbiana Scoutmaster Bob Hume appeared at Thursday's council meeting with information on how other cities handled the problem.

What Hume is after is an ordinance which deals mainly with absentee landowners who neglect their property. Hume and members of his troop have been cutting grass and keeping up the appearance of a number of these lots.

However, owners, one of which is a utility, sometimes will not pay for the service, he said.

Even though the scoutmaster said he was not for imposing a fine on owners not in compliance, both Councilmen Frank Owens and Paul Smith noted that the law needed "teeth."

Pointing out how the neglected lots could cause injury, especially to children, Hume said one had an open hole, broken bottles and an old shack where youngsters sometimes started fires. He also noted that rats had been found there.

Hugh Sims, a member of Hume's troop, will draw up a sample ordinance for the panel to consider. This will be Sims' service project to ward his Eagle award.

Turning their attention to the retirement plan for city employees, which has been under discussion for sometime, the council once again considered some of the pros and cons of the state plan and the individual plan which had been proposed by Liberty National Insurance Company.

"First we need to find out if all the employees want a retirement plan," Mayor Bob Bolton pointed out. He instructed City Clerk Mary Largin to get each employee to come to her office and register a vote for or against a plan.

If a plan is adopted, employees will have to match the 5% which

Hospital offical takes own life

The body of James Henry Chandash, 31, of 3451 Flinshire Drive, Hoover, was found at 12:44 a.m. Monday, just off Highway 280 at the foot of Double Oak Mountain.

Shelby County Coroner Billy Thompson ruled that Chandash died of an apparently self inflicted gun shot wound.

Chandash, who was head of Respiratory Therapy at Shelby Memorial Hospital, left his home in Hoover Sunday evening saying he was going out for cigarettes.

His body was found in his parked car, shortly after midnight Monday morning.

Year's tax work explained by Sumners

by Marcia M. Sears

Eighty percent of the errors in the tax records have been corrected, according to Jim Sumners, who has worked for the past year in reconciling the records.

Sumners was hired by Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds a year ago to reconcile the records in the county tax assessor's office with those of the PRC Jacobs Company. Jacobs handled the county-wide tax reappraisal program and concluded its work last year. Jacobs had a subcontractor do a complete aerial mapping of the county, and then assigned valuation figures to each piece of ted by Jacobs before the company left, and several errors were left, and several errors were found and corrected.

Sumners told the Reporter that in the past year of working with the records (with a crew of 6-8 in the offices of the old jail) he had discovered and corrected 3100 errors in addresses; 1600 improvements missing from parcels (houses or barns not counted); 3500 parcels of land not mapped; 1400 mapping errors out of 32,000 mapped parcels.

He said that the ratio of correct records to errors was 50%.

Sumners then took a sample of 1200 parcels to see if the Jacobs Company had appraised them correctly. He found that 408 were priced correctly, but 800 were not and that 66% did not reflect the correct value. Sumners claims that the Jacobs Company did not apply its own pricing formula correctly in arriving at the value of Shelby County land parcels.

He says there are still major problems to correct, but because of the time factor involved tax notices have to be sent out. If 80% of the errors were corrected, this would mean that 20% of the tax notices may be incorrect.

A further complication in the work developed this springs when the state legislature enacted the "lid" law which caused 1000 to 1200 applications for "current use" status from individual owners, covering 3,000 to 4,000 parcels. Sumners says, "This meant we had to calculate these parcels twice."

But he feels that the overall picture will be improved in Shelby County.

Among the positive things he listed as features of the total program are:

1. All property in the county is now assessed. There is no way any property can be missed. He said that 10-20% of property in the county had never been taxed in the past.

2. Values will be more equalized. Large timber and large industrial interests will be paying a fairer share of the taxes.

3. It is easier to detect conflicts in property valuation and owners can be notified.

4. There is no possibility of double assessment as has happened frequently in the past.

5. The maps developed from the program are helpful to cities and industries and to the county engineer for many purposes.

6. Compared to some other counties Shelby is not too far behind. Talladega and St. Clair counties will not have their notices sent out until November or December, Sumners said.

Sumners said that ultimately the county can have a good workable system of tax assessment that is more accurate and will bring an increase in revenues without an increase in the millage rate.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Alma has another birthday and a guy sort o' remembers.

It looks like the team of 1979 has a chance of playing in the state play-offs. The last time this happened was 1924 when we played Cullman in Birmingham. Remember the special train and the live wildcat in his cage.

Chances are they'll have a big parade up and down Main. All the little folks will be there, from six to sixteen, and a few a year or two older. Those who got a late start or got a little careless somewhere along the way.

They'll work a whole week, off and on, getting the floats ready, and use them for about a half hour and put 'em away and forget 'em for another year. And Mom and Pop will smile and clap their hands and feel good all over. And, in the end, pay the bill for the whole kaboodle.

A few old guys and gals will come back. They'll sit a little further away from the table at dinner and unbutton the top button on their breeches, probably, when the meal is over. They'll get up and dance if the music is 'Let Me Call You Sweetheart.' And they'll fill the air with smoke and big talk if the beat is suited for the young folks.

They'll remember Miss Mary Peter and ache a little inside just remembering. Since this lady, of all the bunch, was everyone's favorite.

They'll remember Mr. Montgomery for his funny antics, and tell funny tales about him, and laugh until they shake from their adams-apples to their belt buckles.

The older ones will remember Coach Barcley and the younger ones Coach McNeal. But all of 'em, the fat and the skinny and the bald-headed, will remember the oneness between a man and a bunch of boys. A oneness that lingered on, even unto another day fifty years later.

They'll get to the ball game early, hoping they'll see a lot of familiar faces, and see maybe one or two. One or two that, for the life of them, they can't fit a name to.

They'll find a seat high in the stands, in sight of the spot where the "goose lot" was, and the "manual training house". And memories will crowd in, and half-forgotten faces. And they'll just sit still and let the night run away-until the noise of the "kick-off" brings them back to reality.

They'll look at the crowd, packed in the stands like sardines, and they'll remember the few hundred folks who lined up along the sidelines years ago.

They'll polish their specs and look at the cheerleaders a whole lot and the game a little and drink cokes and eat peanuts and, after a little, unbutton another button on their pants.

And so Alma has had another birthday. For my crowd it's her 54th. I hope she has another 54 before me and my bunch quit coming around. That'll just be 108, plus about seventeen or eighteen, depending on when a guy started courting the Ol' Gal.

Under the Courthouse Dome

The Shelby County grand jury met in secret session during the week of October 1st, 1979, and reported their findings before Circuit Judge James H. Sharbutt, on Friday October 5th, 1979.

Beth Burnett served as foreman of the grand jury.

ESSAY CONTEST

"What the First Amendment Means to Me"

is the theme of an essay contest

now being sponsored by the Shelby County Reporter, the Alabama Press Assn., and the National Newspaper Assn. Mgrs., Inc. The contest is open to all Shelby County residents except those persons exempted under the contest rules.

The first amendment, adopted in 1791, has since protected the rights of freedom of speech, press, religion, and peaceable assembly. It has in recent years, however, come under fire from those who would have serious restrictions placed upon these heretofore inalienable rights.

It is the responsibility of the people of this nation to insure that this safeguard of American freedom is not altered in such a way as to limit the individual's right to speak, write, worship, or assemble peaceably as he or she chooses.

It is the hope of this newspaper that through this contest the citizens of this area will gain a better understanding of the First Amendment and its role in the preservation of the freedoms they so fully enjoy.

Contestants are urged to compose their essays in strict obeyance with the contest rules. All entries must be received by the Shelby County Reporter no later than 5 p.m., November 14, 1979. Entries may be delivered in person or mailed in to: The Shelby County Reporter, Main Street, P.O. Box 947, Columbiana, Al 35051 or The Shelby County Reporter, Hwy 31 at Crosscreek Trail, P.O. Box 534, Pelham, Al 35124.

All entries will be judged according to the contest rules and prizes will be awarded as follows: First Place $25; Second Place $15; Third Place $10. There will also be a $5 prize as honorable mention. In addition, the first place winning entry will be sent to the Alabama Press Association for competition in the state contest.

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

CONTEST RULES

1. Contest open to all Shelby County residents except those employed by newspapers, radio or television stations, news services or a member of the immediate family of an employee of the exempt media. THERE ARE NO AGE RESTRICTIONS.

2. Each entry shall consist of not more than two 8½ x 11 pages. The entries must be typewritten and double-spaced, or clearly written in longhand, and not more than 1,000 words on the subject: "What The First Amendment Means To Me."

3. Each entry will be judged on the basis of appropriate treatment of the theme, originality and the writing skill of the entrant.

4. No entries will be returned and all will become the property of sponsoring state associations, Newspaper Association Managers, Inc., and the Ohio Newspaper Foundation for use as they desire, with no added compensation to the authors. Entries must be previously unpublished.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

It doesn't seem posible that this has happened to me again.

Whenever I really get involved in some activity that I think is just the greatest - it's discontinued. When I find a product and get hooked on it, it's taken off the market.

What I want to know is why, why, why?

My latest frustrating experience came when I made a trip to the place where I work out. It was locked up tight!

For the past eight months I've depended on this place to keep me in shape. How could they just go out of business without a word, without even a murmur?

Of all the exercise clubs I could have joined, why would I pick this one?

Then there was that tap dance class that I enrolled in last year. I really became enthused when I finally learned a couple of the steps, and it was good exercise too.

I never knew why, but just when I reached the place when I felt as though I couldn't miss that class for anything, it came to a screeching halt.

On, several occasions, I've taken up horse back riding. But when I'd start to get the hang of it, the stable where I took lessons would close or the instructor would go off on an extended trip.

There's no way I can win, just no way!

When it comes to food, the most expasperating experience I've had lately involves ice cream. I usually have to trek to three or four stores before I find my favorite flavor - chocolate chip, and sometimes I can't find it anywhere for a week or two.

But on one of my searches when I couldn't locate it, I decided to try a flavor called caramel coconut, or something like that. It turned out to be darned good.

After buying it two or three times, it just disappeared and I've never seen it again.

The same thing has happened when I've become attached to a particular cosmetic item or something in the clothing line that fit just great. One day when I'd rush into a store where it had always been, it just wasn't there anymore.

Whatever happened to all those things that I thought were so great, I'll probably never know.

I guess what I should be able to glean from all these experiences is the valuable lesson of enjoying it while you have it because tomorror it will probably be gone.

National Newspaper Week

Newspapers reflect society

by Phil Dessauer
President, The Society of Professional Journalists Sigma Delta Chi

The newspapers of our country are most of the things their critics say they are.

They're nosy, noisy, aggressive, irreverent, occasionally arrogant. In some instances they embarrass people, distort the truth, get facts wrong and -- Lord knows -- misspell names. They are a long way from perfect...just as our society is.

But newspapers broaden our lives. They pursue justice, expose grafters and lawbreakers -- ranging all the way from Boss Tweed to Watergate. They keep watch over taxpayers' money; patrol the world in search of news; give us "instant history," telling it as it is. They inform, entertain, stand guard...and feed us millions of words every day with remarkable accuracy.

Daily and weekly papers can do these things because they are free. In countries without a free press the people needn't worry about aggressive reporters or high-handed editors; newspapers simply dish out the party line. If they stray, their publishers get unscheduled, indefinite vacations.

A free press has all the flaws of a free country. It has good guys and bad, diamonds and duds. But you have to ask yourself, "If we didn't have the First Amendment and a free flow of information, what would be the alternative?"

Control. Government control...and still more control -- until there would be no room for factual reporting, no tolerance for unfavorable news, no noise or dissent. Just the deadening drug of conformity -- and submission to Big Daddy Knows Best.

Newspapers should be responsible, truthful and worthy of trust. The great majority of them are. But if a few don't measure up, we can stand that -- for as long as they are free, we are free.

(Mr. Dessauer is managing editor of the Tulsa Daily World, Tulsa, OK., and National President of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.)

Budget hearings based on estimated income

by Marcia M. Sears

The Shelby County Commission is continuing budget hearings this week and expects to adopt a final budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year by next Monday.

Commissioners expected to go through a proposed budget line by line at their meeting last Monday, but the figures were not ready. Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden said the budget will be one of the most thorough budgets the county has ever had and there will be more accountability built into it.

He said each department will have a budget that accurately reflects the expenses and revenues of that department.

Budget planners are using "zero based" budgeting to arrive at the figures, he said.

To make the budget, however, he is using a proposed income figure that causes uneasiness among all the Commissioners. Because Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds has been unable to arrive at a definite figure for the projected tax revenues, the Commission finally agreed to use the figure of $225,000 per mill as the basis for the budget. A total of 32 mills is collected, for state and county functions.

Estelle Sumners, the assessor's chief clerk, gave the Commission the $225,000 per mill figure last Thursday, after explaining where an earlier error had been made.

Reports that the county income would increase by 53% were given by a State Revenue official based on earliest computer work. But even he suggested the county would be "safe" using a figure of 20%. Later reports were printed that the county's tax revenues would increase by 60% but Mrs. Sumners' figures set the increase at 24%.

The difference is several hundred thousand dollars for the county's general fund, as well as for the hospital and the county schools. Officials are still unsure about the figures, but are forced to go ahead with budgeting because of state laws. Several errors are still known to be in the tax notices. The final figures will not be known until the taxes are collected by December 31.

In the meantime, county employees are unsure of what raises if any they can expect for the fiscal year, which began October 1.

Republicans to host presidential contender

A contender for the Republican Party Presidential candidacy will visit Shelby County for a rally in November.

Bob Dewey, chairman of the Shelby County Republican Committee, announced that U.S. Congressman Philip M. Crane of Illinois will visit with Shelby County voters on Tuesday, November 6, at 3 p.m. The announcement came Tuesday night at the committee's monthly meeting.

Location of the public rally will be announced at a later date, Dewey said.

The Republican Congressman is from Mount Prospect, Illinois, and was first elected to the House in a special election in 1969.

In the House of Representatives, he is a member of the Committee on Ways and Means and serves on the Health Subcommittee and is ranking Republican member of the Subcommittee on Oversight.

Crane was born in Chicago, as was his wife, Arlene. They were married in 1959, and have eight children.

Chairman Dewey indicated that the Shelby County Republican Committee is working to bring all the GOP Presidential contenders to the county prior to the Alabama Presidential Primary in March, 1980.

Mud mixer

Gas drillers at the wildcat well near Pea Ridge laid their own 2" line a half mile to Montevallo city water mains so they could mix up their "mud" in a tank that holds several thousand gallons. The exact composition of "mud", which looks like thin cement, is a closely guarded trade secret in the oil industry. It is pumped into a drilling hole both within and without the casement pipe to prevent a blowout when gas is reached. Later, the mud is pumped out of the pipe to permit gas (or oil) to flow up to the wellhead.

VFW Post sends aid

Alabaster V.F.W. Post 5963 and the Ladies Auxiliary have donated a total of $2,000 in cash and $250 worth of canned goods to hurricane victims in Mobile.

$177 was also donated by the Auxiliary to a leukemia victim.

The two groups are holding a garage sale this Friday from 9-4, and Saturday from 9-2 at the Post home on 1st Avenue West.

Post officers attended a V.F.W. School in Birmingham on September 22, while Auxiliary officers attended one the following day at the Kelly Ingram Post house.

The Auxiliary is currently sponsoring a "Hire the Handicapped" poster contest in most county schools.

Anyone interested in joining the Alabaster Post or Auxiliary is invited to call 663-9854 for more information.

DID YOU KNOW?

In 1930, an Alabama Power residential customer paid 35 percent more per kilowatt-hour than in 1978.

Alabama Power's price per residential kilowatt-hour went down each year from 1929 to 1968. It wasn't until 1968 that Alabama Power applied for its first general rate increase. In fact, since 1913, Alabama Power has been granted only seven rate increases.

Progress on I-65

Progress on I-65 continues as the Ashland Warren Company of Birmingham lays base on the roadway. By last week, six inches of the crushed aggregate had been laid on the southbound lane between Hwy. 52 (overpass in background) and the Oak Mountain road. The nearly $10 million contract calls for base and pavement from Hwy. 52 to the Cahaba (6.9 miles), and is expected to be completed by April 1, 1980. (Photo by Moore)

Evansville roads to be widened

The roads in Montevallo's Evansville area are scheduled to get a face-lift this fall.

A group of 12 from the Evansville area attended Montevallo's City Council meeting Monday night and voiced a series of complaints regarding the condition of roads throughout the area.

Responding to the complaints, council members agreed to grade the existing roads, apply gravel and tar, and prepare surfaces for asphalt. Five thousand dollars was earmarked for installing culverts and another $6,000 was earmarked for improving the roads throughout the area.

Council members explained to the group that plans and engineering specifications for a $2 million grant to upgrade living conditions in the Evansville area had been completed, but the federal granting authority had turned down the application. The funds did not come through, according to the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission, because other areas in the region are experiencing conditions far worse than those in the Evansville area.

Councilman Herbert Milstead reported that work would begin on the Evansville project as soon as possible. He noted, however, that there are more than 100 loads of branches and tree limbs still to be picked up. The fallen branches and limbs throughout the city were blown down when high winds and rain accompanying Hurricane Frederic hit the city.

In other action, council members adopted a Revenue Sharing Budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year. The budget earmarks $2,000 for the city library, $4,000 for the Park and Recreation Department, $10,000 for street improvements and $56,437 for public safety and general administrative use.

Two applications for beer licenses were tabled until personnel from the city's police department run a routine check of the neighborhoods and applicants. One of the applications was submitted by W.C. Sloan for an establishment in the Vallo Plaza. It requested a license for an on-premises serving of beer. The other application was submitted by Mrs. Ella B. Hamm, for an off-premises beer license for an establishment on Spring Creek Road.

By unanimous vote council members elected Mrs. Ann Milford to the city's library board.

City Clerk Don Hughes told council members that a recently acquired emergency generator will be installed in the near future. When installed and operating it will supply power for all of city hall, except air conditioning.

Troop holds flea market

Boy Scout Troop 5 will hold a flea market Saturday, October 13, from 9-5 at the Pelham Plaza. Articles for sale include furniture, clothes, bric-a-brac and more.

Proceeds will go to buy scouting equipment for the troop and to help fund trips.

Council studies arts in schools

What kind of art education does your child receive in a Shelby County school? And how can it be bettered?

These are questions the Shelby County Council on the Arts and Humanities will attempt to answer in a meeting with county faculty members today at Indian Springs School.

A survey, organized by Mrs. Curtis Solem, chairman of the Council's school committee, will determine how teachers presently incorporate the arts in the classroom, and whether the Council can assist teachers interested in setting up or expanding arts programs.

In conjunction with the survey, the Council will distribute a listing of visual and dramatic artists in the area who are willing to give talks in county shcools.

The Council is holding a printmaking workshop for county teachers November 1 at Columbiana Elementary, led by Dr. Frank McCoy, chairman of the UM art department, and Lila Wells, chairman of art education at Montevallo.

Winter and spring activities sponsored by the Council include tenative travelling are exhibits, local musicians in concert, and plays at high schools.

The next meeting of the Shelby County Council on the Arts and Humanities will be held at Indian Springs School, November 1, at 7:30 p.m. New members are welcomed.

Math-o-rama plans made

The Birmingham area chapter of the Alabama Council of Teachers of Mathematics will hold its annual Math-O-Rama at Homewood High School on Thursday, October 25, 1979, from 3:30-6:00 p.m.

The theme for this year's meeting is "Mathematics for the Exceptional Student." Workshops in "Mathematics for the Gifted Student" and "Mathematics for the Remedial Student" will be held for grades 1-4, 5-8, and 9-12. Several general interest sessions for math teachers are also planned.

For further information call Marvin Balch, Director ACTM District IV, Indian Springs School, 988-0203.

Junior Miss Pageant plans tea for seniors

The program seeks to honor outstanding senior girls and awards scholarships at the local, state and national levels. The girls compete in categories of Youth Fitness, Poise and Appearance, Creative and Performing Arts, Scholastics and a short interview with the program judges.

Deadline for entries is October 19th. Anyone who is interested may obtain information by calling Bob Robinson at 879-4274 (after 6). The 1980 Shelby County Junior Miss program will be held on November 16th and 17th at Riverchase School.

Elliottsville wins Star troop status

Members of a new Brownie troop in the county demonstrated their enthusiasm for the program by being the first Star troop in the Cahaba Girl Scout Council.

According to a field worker at the Birmingham Girl Scout Headquarters, that's a big honor. She explained that out of the 10,000 Girl Scouts and Brownies in the Cahaba Council which covers a seven county area, the Elliottsville troop was the first group to get their membership registration in.

Twenty seven girls registered in troop 65, so at the Thursday afternoon meetings at Eliottsville Cumberland Presbyterian Church, they divide into two Brownie rings.

Priscilla Gray is the leader and her assistants are: Betty Gilliam, Kay Weldy, Kathy McDowell and Claudia Daniel.

When the girls were invested into the troop on October 2, they received both their Brownie pins and World Association pins.

During the year, Gray noted, the troop will be studying five subject areas which are called "worlds." The first, in November, will be on well being.

In order that the girls understand what constitutes good nutrition, Gray said that nurses from Childrens' Hospital would be speaking to the troop.

Looking around at how they can help others, the troop has so far scheduled a visit to the Briarcliff Nursing Home and at Christmas, they'll be collecting toys for needy children.

New troop organizes

The County has twenty-seven new Brownies. They are: Valerie Gray, J.J. Weldy, Amy McDowell, Heather Dorsett, Kristy Young, Susan Woodrow, Cindy Rickard, Shannon Tucker, Melissa Powe, Laurie Long, Candice Hopes, Lori McDonald, Angie Gilliam, Kem Posey, Michelle Kent, Erin Beckett, Tina Grant, Susan Sergeant, Kimberlee Bush, Kelli Stephens, Lisa Menard, Sherry Coggins, Amy Lee, Emily Lee and Andrea Dunn. Not pictured are: Melissa Daniel and Laura Love.

Mrs. Gertrude Davis brought an interesting post card to the Reporter office Monday. It showed a photo captioned, "Mt. Dixie near Sanatorium Site, Columbiana, Ala." The card was postmarked on Feb. 10, 1912, and was sent from Corinne F. Harris to Mrs. Frank Coffin in Mobile.

Mrs. Davis' son Joel, who now lives in Chattahoochee, Fla., was visiting relatives in Mobile and was going through their collection of old letters looking fro stamps when he found the card.

The picture postcard was printed by Roberts & Son, and was in very good condition. The scene showed a man standing on top of a large rock in a deeply wooded section of Dixie Mountain.

According to one resident, a sanitorium was planned for Dixie Mountain at one time, but apparently plans fell through, because it was never built.

Battleship Park once again open

The USS Alabama Battleship Park is open again for business. It was necessary to close to the public because of the damage caused by Hurricane Frederic. The Battleship sustained minor damage and is completely accessible to the public. However, the OS2U Plane located on a catapult on the stern was damaged. The submarine USS DRUM had heavy damage. She pulled loose from her moorings and was pounded by the waves into her own gangways. It will take some time to repair her.

In the meantime, the admission charges have been reduced to allow for this. The rose garden is still intact, but it will take some time to determine how much damage there is. Most of the rest of the displays are in good shape. The souvenir-ticket building lost its roof, but that has been replaced and the building is clean and in operation.

"Considering everything, I think we were very lucky," stated Captain W. J. Diffley, Executive Director of the USS Alabama Battleship Commission.

Local artists exhibit works

The Bluff Park Art Association presents its 16th annual arts and crafts show this Saturday. Four of the more than 80 artists and craftsmen selected to be in the show are from Shelby County.

Virginia Barnes of Montevallo will be showing her watercolors and serigraphs. Helena woodcraftsman Charles Ellis will present a display of his dulcimers, guitars, flutes and Aztec drums.

Lila J. Wells of Montevallo, will exhibit drawings, prints and paintings in various media. A portfolio of watercolors will be displayed by Mildred Wyatt of the Cahaba Valley.

The Shelby County artists, along with the other artists (representing eight states) will be competing for nearly $2500 in awards.

While visitors browse, they can listen to music by the Henry Kimbrell Combo and eat barbecue and homemade cake.

The popular art show, held each year at the Bluff Park Community Center, begins at 10 a.m. and runs to sundown. Signs will be posted along Hwy. 31 in Green Valley, Hoover and Vestavia to direct visitors to the show and to free shuttle buses. Admission is free.

the council voted they would put toward it.

The decision on what plan to accept will be made by the council and the Water and Gas Boards. Largin was instructed to send letters to all the insurance companies in Columbiana asking them to bring a proposal to the next council meeting if they are interested.

Saying there was a chance the city might be able to secure a $350,000 HUD loan, the mayor told the panel that two public hearings on how the money should be used would be held at city hall, Oct. 14, 15, at 7 p.m.

He cautioned, however, that a number of other cities would be competing for the $3 million he said was available this year.

The mayor explained that a point system was used in making the awards with projects undertaken in low income areas receiving the highest number of points.

Flavor is foreign

An International Fall Festival at the University of Montevallo Thursday, Oct. 11, will feature foods from several countries and entertainment ranging from German tavern songs to music from India.

The food fair, part of the festival, 4-8 p.m. in UM's Bibb Graves Hall, will feature dishes from India, Spain, Germany, Iran, Malaysia and America and other countries, according to Sucheta Kulkarni of Centreville, chairman of UM's Association of International Students, which is sponsoring the fair.

Miss Kulkarni, who is originally from India, said the entertainment would begin at 6:30 p.m.

Prices for dishes will vary, she said, "from hot dogs on up."

The public is invited to the food fair, she added.

Proceeds exceeding costs will go to charity.

Pianists perform

The famed team of Yarbrough and Cowan will give a benefit performance for the Montevallo Library next Monday.

Pianists' concert raises money for local library

Duo-pianists Yarbrough and Cowan will perform their annual faculty concerts at the University of Montevallo Monday, Oct. 15, and Tuesday, Oct. 16, at UM's LeBaron Recital Hall.

The Monday night concert will be a benefit performance to aid the Montevallo Public Library, which was recently moved to a new building after a fire last year.

The husband and wife team, Dr. Robert Cowan and Joan Yarbrough Cowan, duo-pianist in residence at UM, will play Mozart's Sonata in D Major, Chopin's Rondo in C Major, Opus 73, Ravel's Mother Goose Suite, and Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Joseph Hayden.

They will also play the first Alabama performance of "Three Movements for Piano," written by Dr. Edwin Robertson of the UM Music Dept. faculty and dedicated to the Cowans.

Veterans of more than 300 performances, Yarbrough and Cowan have performed in 30 states and in Mexico and Europe. They have released records on several labels.

A $3 admission will be charged Monday for the library benefit performance. No admission will be charged Tuesday night. Both concerts begin at 8 p.m. and are open to the public.

Pullman builds a million cars

How long a train would a million railroad freight cars make?

Pullman Standard experts determined that if all the freight cars built by the company were assembled into one train, this train would be 9,500 miles long.

The Pullman Standard division of Pullman Incorporated has built a million cars for the railroads of America since it built its 12 cars in 1881.

In these ninety-eight years, hoppers - both open and covered, flat cars, box cars and gondolas bearing the famed Pullman name have carried every conceivable product and commodity built, grown or assembled for the consumers of the United States. Corn, coal, color television, Cadillacs and carburetors all have moved to market via Pullman Standard-built cars.

Starting in Birmingham, Alabama, the train would wind through all sections of the United States--just as cars built by Pullman Standard serve all communities in our nation--and end inBirmingham, with enough cars left over to extend from downtown Birmingham to Pullman Standard's Bessemer, plant where the one millionth car was actually built.

At one time, freight cars were almost all black or "boxcar red." Not any more. Today, cars are orange, pink, purple--whatever the customer wants. Pullman Standard's one millionth car is Imperial Silver with Royal Blue signage.

Boat people rescue aided by local man

Navy Electronic Warfare Technician 3/C Charles B. Raymond, son of Charles R. and Anni K. Raymond of 315 Joye Lane, Montevallo, recently participated in the rescue of three boatloads of Vietnamese refugees in the South China Sea.

He is a crewmember aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Jouett, homeported in San Diego and operating as a unit of the U.S. 7th Fleet in the Western Pacific.

His ship was aided in finding two of the wooden boats by a U.S. Navy P-3 "Orion" patrol aircraft, and detected the third using ship's radar. The first rescue took place 360 miles east of Saigon and found 47 people in good medical condition aboard a disabled vessel. The second boat was located about 140 miles away. The 42 refugees aboard had been without food and water for several days. The 28 survivors aboard the third vessel had been at sea for 21 days, and without fresh water for two weeks. The 117 refugees were fed, clothed, given medical treatment and taken to the Philippines.

A 1977 graduate of Thompson High School, Raymond joined the Navy in May 1977.

Here's one way in which you can start on a program of beautifying your home without spending a great deal of money all at once.

You can begin your program by buying one thing at a time whenever you can, and thereby regularly and continually adding new dimensions to your home without a big strain on your budget.

You might want to start your decorating program with one bright chair to offset drabness of a living room.

Perhaps an attractive table lamp would make a great difference.

Maybe you could use a handsome, framed mirror to hang over your sofa, credenza or dresser.

You may have been thinking about replacing your old cocktail table with a pair of the new smaller tables.

Or, how about an elegant headborad to replace the ordinary looking beadstead you're now using? The important thing is to think about a regular program of making your home ever more attractive, and starting when you can. When you are ready to shop, we are here to help you.

Pelham trap almost catches Warriors

by Richard Crosby

Pelham's Panthers played one of the best football games of the year Friday night but failed to win. The Panthers stopped the Thompson offense cold but allowed a field goal to lose to the Warriors 3 to 0 Friday night in Pelham.

"It was a good game," Coach Steve Rivers understated. "Two good teams battled the whole night. We had a couple chances to win but didn't take advantage of them.

"Our defense played great and it was the best game of the year for us in spite of losing."

The game's only points were scored with 6:20 left in the first half. Thompson started driving toward the goal line but the Panther defense held them out. Steve Smitherman broke the scoreless deadlock with a 22 yard field goal.

That score held up for the rest of the game as both teams failed to move the ball into the endzone. Pelham had an opportunity in the first quarter, driving to Thompson's 25 yard line but a fumble killed the chance.

Mid way through the fourth period, the Panthers had another shot at putting points on the board. With first and ten from the Thompson 21 yard line, the Panthers readied to score but the Warrior defense held. On fourth down Pelham attempted a 15 yard field goal that would have tied the contest but the snap was fumbled.

Rivers said of the loss, "We're not pleased but we're definately improving. I believe we have a real fine football team and we can lineup against any team and play a tough game."

Rushing leader for Pelham was Dale Busby with 125 yards on 26 runs. Busby gained more yards than Thompson's David Cofer who carried for nearly 80 yards.

Rivers also commended his quarterback Steve Rye who had an exceptional game as quarterback according to the coach.

Defensively the whole Pelham defense earned commendation from the coach. Some of the standouts were Chris Cutcliff, Ricky Needham, Gerard Johnson, and Brad Jacks.

Pelham takes this week off while Thompson faces Childersburg in Alabaster. The following week, Pelham gets back in action against Vincent.

Vincent finds Winterboro as tough as indicated

Vincent found out why Winterboro is undefeated last Friday night. The Bulldogs broke loose in the second half for 16 quick points to put the game out of reach for the Yellow Jackets, with the final score 36 to 14.

"Winterboro has a good ball club. They're real sound defensively and have a couple of outstanding athletes. They have as good a quarterback as we'll see" coach Gary Garrett said of his opponent after the game.

"They beat us and I wouldn't want to take anything away from them. They have a good team and proved it."

Vincent gave the visiting Bulldogs seven points the easy way in the first quarter. The Jackets fumbled on their own five yard line with a Bulldog defender scooping up the ball and running to the endzone. That was the only score of the first quarter.

Vincent tied the score in the second quarter when quarterback James Oden passed 37 yards to Rodney Driggers who also added the PAT kick with 9:55 left in the half.

A fumble set up the second Winterboro score. Vincent let the pigskin loose on its own 24 yard line. The Bulldogs grabbed the opportunity and collected seven more points with just four minutes left in the half. Field position came in Winterboro's favor minutes later, taking possession on the Vincent 33 yard line. Four plays later the Bulldogs scored on a 20 yard pass but the point-after was blecked making there halftime score 20 to 7.

In the third quarter, Vincent drove the ball 45 yards for a score. Oden carried one yard for the touchdown with driggers added the PAT. "I thought at that time we had a chance to win" coach Garrett recalled, "But that's when Winterboro busted loose.

The Bulldogs drove 59 yards for their next touchdown, and then early in the fourth quarter, stopped the Jackets inside the Winterboro 20 yard line and drove 82 yards for another touchdown. That made the score 33 to 14 with nine minutes to play.

Winterboro added three more points before calling it a night, scoring on a 38 yard field goal with 16 seconds left in the game.

"We've got to stop laying the ball on the ground" Garrett said. This week his team meets another crew of Bulldogs, these from Montevallo. "They are a good football team. We've got to go back to work."

Offensive standouts for Vincent against Winterboro were Dwight Spradley, Rodney Driggers and Tony Abbott. Defensively, Dexter McCrimmon, Bret Hanner, Warren McGinnis and Steve Riggins were named by the coach.

This week's winner of Football Cash is Alabaster's Paul Posey. He correctly picked eleven winners but so did Tim Horton of Shelby. Posey won the cash in the tiebreaker, beating out Horton by 39 points.

Last week's winner was Annie Durrett of Alabaster. She won the prize outright with eight correct picks in the contest.

We delayed announcing Ms. Durrett's win hoping to get her to come by to have her picture made and collect her prize. However, we have been unable to contact her and have mailed the check to her address.

Paul Posey

This week's Football Cash entry blank is on page B-12. Try your luck. Maybe you'll be $25 richer this weekend.

A note about last week's contest, many people correctly picked 10 out of 12 winners. Here's a who's who of those entrants. David Stone, Cary Davis, Don King, F.C. Hall, Richard Faust, Mrs. Twillie Cottingham, Jean Porter, Ben Kirkland, Richard Mitchell, Larkin Schrimsher, Chris Jones, Frances Scoggins, Mildred Johnson, Jason Shaw and Willie Lacey.

'The doctors were surprised when I started playing football'

Birth defect overcome with desire to play

by David Moore

Lewis Jones sits in the stands talking about his feet. The Chelsea senior's teammates out on the field are preparing for a Tough one against Calera.

It is a cloudless fall afternoon and Jones is in good spirits. He has every right not to be, but he is anyway. He's that kind of kid.

"There've been plenty of operations--five I think. Usually every other summer they'd operate on my feet, so I couldn't swim or anything."

He pauses and smiles. "The doctors tried to keep me on the bright side. But they were a little surprised when I started playing football in the ninth grade."

Sidelined with more foot problems, Lewis Jones watches as his Chelsea teammates practice for the Montevallo game. Says coach Richard Conkle, "We have two or three boys who if they had Lewis's want and desire, we'd probably be undefeated. He's a good kid. The kind you like to have around." (Photo by Moore)

Little wonder they were surprised. Jones was born clubfooted. The tendons to his heels were too short and his feet pointed awkwardly in at each other.

For the first year of his life Lewis Jones wore casts on both feet. In fact, he learned to walk with his feet in plaster.

Later, there were corrective shoes and braces, painful the operations and more casts.

"The worst part was when I was younger and wearing the braces. The other kids would see me and rag me about it," he says without bitterness.

"I didn't want to wear the corrective shoes either, but my parents said it was for my own good. They never told me not to do something because of my feet, though."

The 17 year old lives with his parents, Lewis and Linda Jones, on the Dunnavant Road a few miles off Hwy. 280. He never let his feet get in the way of hunting in the woods or fishing. He's one of those people you can't keep down.

"Sometimes I'd get frustrated with myself because I couldn't do all the things other guys did--at least not as well. I guess I had to try a little harder."

All this time there was one thing Lewis Jones really wanted to do: play football.

Finally, at the age of 13, came the long promised last operation. Eight weeks later, when the doctor removed the casts, Jones' feet were straight. He would play football. And so what if his feet were only size seven and you could almost stretch your finger and thumb around his fragile looking ankles. And so what if his calves were small, more the size of an arm than a leg. So what?

Lewis Jones went out for football. And not only that, but in the ninth grade he was scrimaging with the varsity squad.

"When I first started playing, I think I had to prove something to myself. My legs are a little smaller and I knew that if I didn't keep up with the rest of the guys it would make me look bad. I lifted a lot of weights to build my calves."

"They're not that bad out of the ordinary, I guess."

Somewhere underneath his words lies a quiet bravery.

Jones lettered in football his sophomore year, and again as junior when he started the last five games. "I did pretty well last year I guess," the senior says.

he was looking forward to his final year, wanting to make the most of it. All summer he psyched himself up. Then fate tossed him a screwball. The week before the opening game he chipped a bone in his left foot during practice. He watched the opener from the sidelines. Nobody could blame him if he was a bit frustrated.

But against TCTS Jones was out on the field, starting at his offensive guard position and wearing number 71. He played three quarters before his foot began hurting and Coach Richard Conkle pulled him out.

The following Tuesday, while preparing for Montevallo, Jones had his foot stepped on during practice and once again found himself sidelined. Seems like bad luck can't be content with a light sprinkle--it has to pour like the dickens.

"I want to get back out there," Jones says, watching his teammates on the field. "When I get in shape I'll get back out there and do the best I can."

A slight breeze ruffles the 150 pounder's blonde hair. He sits quietly for a minute, frustrated but not gloomy.

A younger student sitting in stands calls out, "Hey, Lewis, how's your foot? Everybody at Chelsea seems to know Jones. He's president of both the student council and his senior class.

"Still sore."

"I imagine so," the student replies.

Jones says that when he graduates he wants to go to Montevallo. He's not really sure what he wants to study. Maybe math. But you get the feeling he's going to miss the football. He doesn't actually say so, you just get that feeling.

"Yeah, I want to get back out there," he says, watching the field. "But you know, I'm thankful I wasn't like some kids who can't walk at all. It makes me want to do my best."

Lewis Jones leans back against the concrete bleecher, stretches his legs out in front of him and laughs. Since he can't play football until maybe the Winterboro game, what else can he do but laugh?

"I was telling somebody the other day it seems like it's always my feet. Why can't I break an arm or something else."

Jones laughs again.

Eagles coast to victory over Hornets

Homecoming should be a happy occasion and it was for Calera High School graduates and students last Friday night as the Eagles posted a 35 to 0 win over the Chelsea Hornets.

Coach Danny Alverson's crew rolled up 35 points in the first half ans then coasted for the rest of the game.

"It's good to win homecoming. The players had a good attitude and were ready to play. Despite all the activity surrounding the game, everyone's mind was on playing their best" Alverson told the Reporter.

Calera took the opening kickoff and marched downfield in three plays. Senior runningback Bill Seay scored the touchdown on a 38 yard run. Johnny Ryan added the PAT making the score 7-0.

Still in the first quarter, Calera intercepted a Chelsea pass, but then had one of its own passes picked off. After forcing the Hornets to punt, Calera moved the ball 46 yards for the second score of the night. Six plays were required for the scoring drive which saw Fran Blanchard scoot 13 yards for the touchdown. Ryan added his secons PAT of the night with 6:21 remaining in the first quarter.

Bill Seay accounted for his second touchdown of the night with just over two minutes left in the first quarter. The streaking senior raced 74 yards for the six points. Ryan again was successful with the PAT.

Chelsea serious threat of the night came in the second quarter. The Calera defense stiffened and held the Hornets at bay on the Eagle 16 yard line. From there Calera took the ball downfield for the fourth touchdown of the evening.

Quarterback Johnny Ryan passed 51 yards to tight end Curtis Barefield for the score. Ryan added his PAT making the score 28 to 0.

The final score of the contest came with just under two minutes to play in the half. The Eagles marched 59 yards for the score. Blanchard collected his second score of the night with a one yard shot. Ryan added his PAT which ended the night's scoring with Calera 35 and the Hornets 0.

"They have a good football team" coach Richard Conkle said of the Calera squad. "I thought we played better than last week. We didn't fumble the football and played better against Calera than we did Montevallo."

The Chelsea coach added that his team has lost nine players to injuries since the first of the year and is still uncertain whether several will return before the season's end.

Conkle named Jack Shaw, Bobby Bearden, John Bearden, Keith McCullars and Victor Smith as his standouts from both offense and defense.

Chelseas faces unbeaten Winterboro this Friday night in Chelsea while Calera travels to Thorsby to play the Rebels.

Smiling faces were everywhere on the Calera side of the field last Friday as the Eagles won their homecoming game.

Deer season opens Monday

Deer season opens in Shelby County next Monday for bow hunters.

The annual season for the archery marksman always begins about three weeks before guns are allowed.

According to several sources around the county, deer are plentiful and bowhunters should have good results until the gun season opens.

Usually, bowhunters get their best chances early in the season before dogs have run deer. After gun season deer are easily frightened and spooky.

All hunters must have a valid hunting license which this year costs $10, up 100 per cent over last year's license.

The limit on deer is one a day and bowhunters may kill either doe or buck. The conservation Department feels that to bag a deer with a bow is a feat in itself and since a very small population of deer are harvested with bows, bowhunters are given an extra opportunity to bag a deer.

Richard's Picks

Only missed one prediction last week since going 'Honest' in the forecasting business. Maybe this week I'll be right on the money.

Thompson-Childersburg-The Warriors are looking for their seventh straight win and this week play before the home crowd against a tough bunch of Tigers. Despite the close call last week they should be able to handle Coach Cox's crew. Prediction: Thompson 33, Childersburg 11.

Calera-Thorsby-The Eagles shouldn't have much trouble this week as long as they keep their minds on Thorsby and not on Verbena the following week. Prediction: Calera 44, Thorsby 6.

Chelsea-Winterboro-The Hornets have had their problems but they aren't likely to stop this week as Chelsea faces unbeaten Winterboro. It will take class to accept the sixth loss of the year. Prediction: Chelsea 0, Winterboro 35.

Montevallo-Vincent-The Bulldogs will be looking to revenge last year's loss to the Jackets but it's the wrong year to hope for such luck. Look for Montevallo to stayclose for awhile but in the end the win will go to Vincent. Prediction: Montevallo 14, Vincent 27.

Shelby County-Pell City-The Wildcats haven't looked as good lately as they did at the beginning of the season. Perhaps this will be their week to get things going in the right direction again. Prediction: Shelby County 16, Pell City 8.

Pelham-Open-One of the few games I'm certain to right on. Look for Pelham to breeze through this one. Prediction: Pelham 16, Open 0.

Choctaw readies to pass

Shelby County's defense stretched a little too much against Bibb County as the visiting quarterback had plenty of time on the backfield to get his pass off the the receivers downfield. (photo by Crosby)

Wildcats fumble win to Bibb Choctaws

by Richard Crosby

The Wildcats suffered their in as many weeks before a homecoming crowd in Columbiana last Friday night. Bibb County held on to a small lead to down the Cats 14 to 12.

"They did everything you've got to do to keep from losing and we did everything to do to lose" coach Mark Bradley said of the game. "It would have been a crime against justice if we had won the game."

SCHS Majorettes performed 'Tea for Two' at the Homecoming halftime last Friday night. The song is a standard for SCHS.

Bradley's last comment refers to the final seconds of the game when Dan Head attempted a 29 yard field goal. The try came with 15 seconds left in the game and would have won the contest for the Wildcats by a one point margin. Bibb County, however, blocked the three point play to save the win.

Shelby County suffered nine fumbles during the game. "You can't make the mistakes we did and win" Bradley said of the miscues.

Bibb scored its first touchdown in the first quarter. The scoring play came on a 35 yard pass caught on the figertips of the receiver. "It was a great catch" Bradley said of the pass. "Dan Head had him covered but the kid just made a super effort."

The second touchdown for the visitors came at the end of a 70 yard drive, the scoring combination gave Bibb County a 14 to 0 lead.

The Wildcats rallied to put together a 73 yard drive after the kick-off. Fullback Guy Mitchell came into the game to dive the final three yards for the score. A [illegible] snap sent the PAT attempt by Head wide to the left,, making a halftime score of 14 to 6.

That score stood until the final four minutes of the game. After a short punt gave the Wildcats field position, Head Directed the team on a 57 yard drive, throwing 22 yards to Jeff Keenum for the six points. Shelby County attempted to tie the game on a two-point conversion attempt but the option play was stopped behind the line.

Shelby County's record of three wins and two losses is still an improvement of last year but not the record of players and coaches had hoped for at this point. The Wildcats hope to end the two game losing streak this week against Pell City. Offensive performers for the Wildcats were Dan Head and Arthur Johnson. Defensively, Andy Upton, Joe Tidmore and Donald Vickery had good games.

Pelham Jr. Team wins two

Pelham's Junior High team has won its last two games coach bill Horne reported. The Panthers scored wins over Montevallo and Vincent the past two weeks.

Pelham whipped Montevallo 14 o 6. Touchdowns were scored by Jack Cavender and Ricky Hayes. Hal Shelton scored a two-point conversion. Offensive standouts in the game were Matt Mace and Cavender while Devin Tubert and Keith bailey were named by the coach for defensive play.

Pelham won its first game ever over the Vincent Yellowjackets on October 4th. Pelham scored six points while holding off the Vincent team which failed to score.

The game's lone touchdown was scored by Jack Cavender. Other standouts in the game for Pelham were Ricky Hayes, Danny Whitman, Keith bailey, Danny Turner and Hal Shelton.

The Panthers play Chelsea on October 9th and then meet Shelby County on the 11th.

Volleyball team winning for UM

The Univeristy of Montevallo swept four volleyball matches this past week, all at home, losing only one game in the four matches.

The lady Falcons downed Livingston and Alabama-Birmingham in a tri-match, whipping Livingston 15-2,15-6, 15-7, then beating UAB 15-10,15-5. In that first UAB game, Montevallo had to rally from a 10-1 deficit.

Finishing up the week with wins over big state rivals Jacksonville State and North Alabama on back-to-back nights, Montevallo defeated scrappy JSU 15-0,15-17,15-7, 15-13, then got stronger toward the end in dropping UNA 16-14, 15-4, 15-8.

The Lady Falcons travel to South Carolina for the weekend. Next week they play North Alabama Tuesday at UNA and then return home to meet West Georgia Tuesday evening.

Victory slips a way from Montevallo

by Richard Crosby

Montevallo's Bulldogs has victory within their grasp last Friday night only to let it slip through their fingers in the fourth quarter. The Jemison Panthers scored two fourth quarter touchdowns to nudge ot Montevallo 13 to 6 before the Bulldogs' home crowd.

A scoreless first half between the two rivals fueled Montevallo's offense in the third quarter. After forcing a Jemison punt, Paul Russell returned the pigskin 52 yards deep into Panther territory. On the fourth play, quarterback David Melsoni passed nine yards t o Scott Studdard for the touch down. The snap for the PAT was mishandled nd the kick was low.

Montevallo held the 6-0 lead until mid-way throu gh the fourth period.

With seven minu tes remaining in the game, Mo ntevallo was driving toward the J emison goal line. With first dow n on the 30, the Bulldogs tried a Statue of Liverty play. One o f the Jemison defenders penetrate d the line and caused a fumble in the backfield which started a 30 y a rd scramble for the ball. After what seemed like minutes of pla ye rs tumbling over each other trying to find the handle, Jemison recovered the loose pigskin on Montevallo's 40 yard line.

On the first play, Jemison quarterback Casey Lowery turned upfield and raced to the goal line. Mark Lovett added the PAT giving the Panthers a one point edge, 7 to 6.

After holding Montevallo on fourth down, the Panthers drove 45 yards for the game clinching score. The touchdown came on a quicky pass on fourth and goal. Bulldog Clay Cardone blocked the extra point attempt making the score 13 to 6.

"We're real disappointed we didn't win because we had a chance," coach Richard Gilliam said. "We played well in spite of the loss."

This week the Bulldogs face always tough Vincent in Vincent. Last year the Jackets upset Montevallo and nearly knocked them out of the playoffs. Montevallo must win both the Vincent game and the following game against Winterboro to earn a state berth.

Pelham duo claim Lineman of the Week

Two Pelham players have been named Lineman of the Week for the October 4th and October 11th issue of the Reporter.

This week's honor goes to Chris Cutcliff, a junior for the

Chris Cutcliff

Panther squad. According to coach Steve Rivers, Cutcliff was instrumental in the Panthers defense of Thompson last Friday night, making numerous tackles and being in on just about all the other one. He also intercepted a pass and returned it 65 yards aginst the Warriors.

Cutcliff wears number 44 for Pelham and besides his defensive performance, plays wingback on offense.

Pelham's Jeff Mathis made his presence felt the week before. The senior wears number 55 for the Panthers. Coach Rivers said of Mathis' game against Oak Grove, "He was outstanding. Jeff made several big plays that I think contributed highly to our win."

Mathis made 11 tackles against the Tigers, is a senior, weighs 205 pounds and stands 5'10". He was also named defensive player of the week twice at Pelham High.

Honorable mention this week goes to Rex Wallace of Montevallo who collected 11 tackles and had three quarterback sacks for the Bulldogs against Jemison.

'Gamy' taste to deer meat comes from clea ning methods

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Last summer I was invited to dinner by a friend who does little hunting. The meat dish was a roast, free of fat, with plenty of the right sauce well laced with mushrooms, onions and herbs.

When I took a small bite, I concluded it was venison. But the taste was heavy.

"George," I said. "This is deer meat, isn't it?" He grinned affirmation. "Where did you get it?"

His answer explained the "gamy" taste. "A fellow I know killed the deer on a drive in the Tallapoosa River bottoms in Randolph county." According to what he knew, the deer had been chased a great distance. After it was finally dropped with buckshot, the blood vessels had been clogged with blood containing fuel wastes of exertion. I finished my small piece and refused another portion on the premise I was "full."

This episode is typical of venison treatment that dates back to pre-Civil War years when deer was probably served more often on Southern dinner tables than beef. Back in those days hunters didn't have that spare time to really enjoy a hunt. Sunday hunting was also frowned upon as tentamount to cussing the preacher. After long days behind mules or factory benches, deer hunters bagged th eir game by the easiest method p ossible -- with the help of hounds.

Today, ho wever, the meticulous hunter can drive 30 to 50 miles before d aylight, climb a tree with his tree stand, and have a better chance of bagging a deer with compound bow or scope-mounted rifle tha n his counterpart a century ago when the deer population was probably one-fourth that today.

Too, in bygon e days people thought of food as merely the fuel to keep up s trength needed for heavy physica l labor. Today we stress fewer c al ories for our comparatively nor n-physical labor and fix the empha sis on flavor.

On Oct. 15 hu ndreds of deer will be ready for p rocessing when bowhunters take their toll. Gun season opens on Nov. 16 and on that day many thousands of bucks will be ha rvested. Every hunter should enc leavor to get the tastiest meat he c an she can from that 50 to 250-lb. buck.

For the best in venison flavor, here are the steps I follow:

1. I shoot the d eer when it least expects it. If it is placidly walking or feedin g, then its heart is not pumping adrenalin or shoving blood t hrough arteries under tremendou s pressure. I aim at a vital spo t -- heart region, backbone, neck or skull or base of the tail if the d eer has its rump facing me. I pre fer the chest. I visualize, if the a nimal is broadside, a spot ab out six inches behind the front of the breast and about six inches above the belly line. Some of n y targets have dropped in thei r tracks; others have slid forward on their knees a few yards and on e or two made a 50-yard dash wi th their hearts blasted away. Th ese cases simply had to be the re sult of nervous propulsion.

2. As soon as the deer ceases movement, I spli t the belly skin with the hind leg s downslope, if possible, to dra in blood that may have filled th e body cavity. You don't hav e to split the throat because t he heart has stopped beating. I try not to cut the intestine. However, don't think the meat will be ruined if you do. Simply wash out the cavity as quickly as possible when you get the deer home. Cut around the anus and reproductive organs. You could leave in the heart and liver until you get to the butcher or home, but I usually take out everything and swab out the body cavity with paper towels or toilet tissue.

3. I drag the carcass by the head to by vehicle, prop open the body cavity with sticks and go home. I flush out the body cavity if necessary -- depending upon contamination with soil and leaves and fecal material and then I dry the carcass interior quickly. I usually skin the animal because skinning is easier soon after killing than several days later. I also avoid touching the metatarsal glands on the legs, lest these contaminate my hands and the meat.

4. If the weather is right -- 35 to 40 degrees F. -- I hang the carcass for five to seven days in a storage room with circulating air to age and tenderize the meat. If the weather is hot, I take the carcass to a butcher's cooling room. Next to No. 1, this is the most important step, although No. 2 is also very important.

5. After aging, I split the carcass into two halves and then proceed with normal butchering techniques -- sirloin tip roasts, rump roasts, tenderlein, T-bone steaks, etc. I cut the sinewy meat off the legs and cut it into stew meat or grind it into deerburger.

6. I prune meat away from bone, because bone takes up valuable freezer space.

7. I package the meat in family size portions in strong plastic bags.

8. Quick freezing the meet is the final step. I keep my freezer at 10 degrees below zero.

Now you figure it out -- that deer meat is costing you possibly $15 a pound. That's four time the cost of choice beef. Wouldn't you take the best steps to make that venison soft-stroke your taste buds?

Columbiana budgets over $⅓ million

Even though it took some extra time to draw up a budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year, City Fathers in Columbiana were able to come up with figures which give the city a cushion of $2,996.

At a special called meeting Sept. 25 a budget with an anticipated income of $384,272, was adopted. Expenditures for the year were set at $381,276.

Expecting to collect $125,000 from the general sales tax makes that revenue source the most lucrative for the city. Adding the next highest amount to the city coffers is the gross receipts from the sale of business licenses. That figure was set at $98,270.

The city listed $49,200 as the amount they expect to receive in property taxes. And the revenue for garbage collection service is expected to bring in $26,300.

Fines and forfeitures which the city anticipates collecting this year accounts for the city's fourth highest source of income. That figure was set at $31,900.

Administrative expenses which totaled $124,737, was the largest item under expenditures. Anticipating that a retirement plan for employees will be adopted in the near future, the panel set aside a figure of $8,343 for that purpose (5% of payroll.)

Money to be spent on administration will also include salaries, insurance, conference expenses, and notes payable on the computer storage building, parking lot and the Gaines Farmer property.

The police department's budget amounted to $102,875. Operating expenses for the fire department were set at $17,575 which includes a $4,320 payment on an $18,000 loan from the First National Bank of Columbiana.

Listed as an item of capital outlay, the loan which will pay for the cab of a new fire engine, is to be paid back over a five year period.

A $750 tire changer was also listed as a capital outlay item in the street and sanitation department's budget which totaled $94,796.

Donations amounted to $42,150. With a city beautification project in the works, the panel included a $2,500 figure in the budget for that cause and they also increased their donation to the library by $2,000 bringing that figure to $18,000.

The park and recreation board received $11,500 and the three schools were each given $1,600. Other monetary donations to be schools included $600 to the band and $3,600 to the Board of Education.

With only one no vote, the council also voted a 7% salary increase for employees. The objection to the proposal was registered by Councilman Bill Seales who favored an across-the-board raise.

Librarian seeks comments

Do you have any suggestions for improving the program at the Columbiana Library? If so, Barbara Roberts. the new Columbiana librarian wants to hear them.

"I'd like to see a lot more interest in the library," remarked Roberts, who assumed her duties on Oct. 1.

Prior to coming to Columbiana, Roberts taught at Shelby Academy for three years. She graduated from the University of Montevallo with a BA in English and then went on to earn an MA in history.

Roberts and her husband Charles are residents of Alabaster.

Alabaster Civitans install officers

"It takes team effort to do a good job," emphasized Jack Chandalar as he installed new officers of the Central Civitan Club Thursday evening.

Visually demonstrating his point, the Zone 1 vice president had officers and members of the board of directors move away from president Henry Russell.

During his comments later in the meeting, Russell said that he hadn't felt deserted. "I was sure that all of you were going to be behind me this year and that it's going to be a good one," he declared.

Chandalar also urged members of Alabaster's Civitan Club to back up their new District Governor Walt Davis who belongs to the local organization.

The zone vice president said that 45 new Civitan clubs had been organized durin g the past year and noted that was the highest number to have been formed during the past five years.

Also calling attention to an increase in membership in the Alabama Central District, Chandalar reported 51 men and women were added to club rolls last year.

Working through Civitan, Chandalar said he felt that communities and the world could be made a better place.

Wives attended the dinner meeting to see the 1979-80 officers installed. New officers of the Central Civitan Club are: Henry Russell, president; Dan Acker, first vice president; Bob Byrd, second vice-president; Don McKeever, secretary; and Charles Oden, treasurer.

Elected to the Board of directors of the organization were: outgoing president Herchiel Meadows, Leo Barton, Phil Gamble, Don McClure, and Beresford Brown.

Home designer draws ideas from client lifestyles

The key to Tully Burch's success as a custom house designer lies in the word "communicate."

"I talk with my clients to see what it is they do and do not want in their house. I draw the ideas out of their heads and put them in mine," says Burch.

The end product is a house custom tailored to the client's needs, specifications, budget and/or wildest dreams. Tully Burch, however is a good one to make recommendations on features that enhance the resale value of a house.

If you're thinking of building in the near future, it would be to your advantage to give Burch a call before you get started. Given a few ideas of the house you have in mind, he can give further advice as to lot types and settings. After the lot has been chosen, Burch suggests sitting down with the family and determining exactly what it is you want--after all, it's going to be your house.

TULLY BURCH

"You don't usually come up with an idea in one day. If you give it some thought and kick around ideas, then bring them in to me along with maybe some magazine clippings, notes or sketches, I can do a better job," the designer explains.

In his spare time, Burch has been working on a house design for his family. Because his wife cooks so much, he has given the kitchen special attention, designing a desk and bookshelves for her many cookbooks, two large pantries for all the supplies and utensils, and lots of counter space.
room downstairs.

In a similiar fashion, once Tully Burch understands exactly the sort of house you wish to have built, he will tailor the plans to your every need. All his houses include energy conscious features, and solar power can even be incorporated into the plans.

Desigining your house will take Burch from 10-30 days. But, he emphasises, "I won't hurry up and draw a house because I want to get paid for it."

Besides custom houses, Tully Burch also designs room additions, basement modifications and carport enclosures. Furthermore, he has a file of nearly 500 different houses and floor plans from which you can choose if you don't want a custom design.

"If I had a motto," Tully says, "it would be that customers don't walk out of here unless they're satisfied. If the customer's happy, it means I'm pleased."

Tully Burch works out of an office he designed next to the post office in Helena. If the idea of living in a house tailored to your personal needs strikes you as being the way a house should be, drop by or give Tully Burch a call at 663-2224.

Insurance rates drop in Pelham

With the price of everything else spiraling upward, Pelham residents will be relieved to know their fire insurance premiums are going down.

Mayor Burk Dunaway announced at city council meeting Monday night that Pelham has received a new fire rating of class six. The rating was previously class eight.

The mayor said the reduction in fire insurance would amount to some 18% for a framed, residential house, and more on a brick structure.

"It's been kind of a long hard battle," Dunaway said, referring to two and half years ago when the city decided "they wanted to build the best fire department in Alabama."

Since then, the mayor noted, the city had voted a 7.5 mill tax on itself, hired Chief William Bryars, bought two new fire trucks, one rescue vehicle and is currently building a second fire station, all of which led to what is now the lowest fire rating in the county.

The city employs 17 firemen and has a dozen volunteers, he said.

At the beginning of the meeting Pelham Clerk Willie Mae Dennis swore in Joe Littlefield to fill the council seat vacated earlier this year by Leslie Todhunter.

At the recommendation of the library board, the council approved the appointment of Mrs. Linda Dewey and James Hallmark to fill vacancies to that board. The motion passed unanimously.

The council also passed a resolution appointing Paul Schatz, John Medaris and Charles Wood as directors of the Pelham Medical Board.

After a motion by Councilman Ray Hamilton, the council agreed to hold a public hearing November 5 on the rezoning of a parcel of land belonging to Carlos Johnson near Mountain Chateau from A-1 to R-3. The zoning recommendation came from the Planning and Zoning Board.

Mayor Dunaway proclaimed November 4-11 Voter Registration Week, and urged all unregistered voters to go by Valley Elementary from 5-9 p.m. and register to vote.

Seventeen cub scouts from Dens Two and Three of Pack Five visited the 25 minute meeting.

Alabaster grappling with swimming pools, rent, sewer

Sewer lines, swimming pools and a sudden increase in rent were a few of the problems members of the Alabaster City Council grappled with Monday night in an unusually long two hour meeting.

Because of the need for legal advice, the first two problems were tabled. However, the panel gave the VFW Club permission to move to a new location on the city's main thoroughfare.

The sewer line dilemma belonged to real estate developer Harold Walker. He and his lawyer Steve Sears told the panel that the Columbiana Housing Authority had started legal proceedings to force the developer to tear up sewer lines which had been in since March.

Sears asked the council to condemn the land belonging to the Housing Authority, pointing out that it would be in the best interests of the city to leave the lines in place.

In giving his side of the story, Walker said he had "good intentions" in completing the lines, which were put in at a cost of $10,000, assuming that they would be approved.

However, he noted that the Housing Authority had never given written permission to cross the land they owned. It was pointed out that the city's Park and Recreation Board had approved the lines on land they owned.

The Housing Authority's objection to the lines, Walker said, was the fear that there might be flooding back into their houses since the apartments being served by the lines were at a higher elevation.

Sears and his client both stress that the developer had met the rigid specifications which the city's engineer had drawn up for the project.

There was unanimous agreement by the panel that the matter should be tabled until there could be a conference with the city's attorney Karl Harrison.

A resident of Kingwood Subdivision, Karen Weidner, brought up the matter of swimming pools which are being put in her area.

She suggested there be an ordinance governing their operation since the back up water flowed into her yard and the chlorine killed her grass.

It was pointed out that 20 more pools were planned for the subdivision next summer which would create an even bigger problem in the neighborhood.

Councilman Wayne Lucas mentioned the possibility of checking with the attorney for the League of Municipalities to find out what ordinances other cities had governing the matter. The panel agreed with that suggestion.

Asking council to approve a move to the building that formerly housed Griffin Variety Store on the city's main street, VFW Commander James Carter said an increase in rent was forcing the move.

The building they now occupy was supposed to be rent free, but the owner, S.R. Peacock recently started charging rent Carter noted, and then doubled it. Peacock also asked the VFW to take out a million dollars worth of insurance, the VFW Commander said.

Because patrons would have to enter and exit onto heavily traveled Hwy. 31, at the new location, it was recommended that the main entryway be made in the rear. However, a parking problem on that narrow street brought about the suggestion that the street be made one way and parking limitations be imposed.

No action was taken other than to approve the move provided the organization improve the building to meet building code regulations.

In other business, the panel approved a low bid of $2,690 submitted by Service Builders, Inc., of Alabaster to make improvements in the Siluria Fire Station.

The panel also voted to spend $3,821 for a police car to replace one that was recently totalled in a wreck.

In other business, the council approved raising mileage payments to 18 cents and Roger Wheeler was reappointed to serve a 3 year term as Chairman of the city's Merit Board.

Trip ends at county jail

A suitcase containing drugs and cash amounting to $152,500 was found in the trunk of a car stopped by Helena police. Looking over the stacks of money, which included some packets of $1,000 bills, are Helena policeman Steve Fancher, and Alvin Coggins, and Shelby County Sheriff's investigator Tom Barnes and Sheriff Buddy Glasgow. Helena arrest yields weapon, drugs, $152,500 in cash

by David Moore

What started out as routine traffic stop ended up as the largest drug bust ever in Shelby County.

Helena police officer Alvin Coggins stopped William Henry Boykin, III, 22, of Shalimar, Florida for speeding Sunday night at 7:30 near Vulcan Material's quarry on Hwy. 261. Coggins saw a partially smoked marijuana cigarette in the ashtray of Boykin's 1978 Fiat convertible.

According to assistant chief Ray Rollan, a blue pouch sticking out from under the seat was found to contain a small amount of marijuana.

Rollan said Boykin's car was impounded and Sheriff Buddy Glasgow and county investigators were called in on the case.

A search of the trunk revealed a suitcase containing $152,500, eight ounces of a white powder substance suspected to be cocaine, and a small caliber weapon, Rollan said. The street value of that amount of cocaine would be $16,000.

A pound of sinsemilla marijuana with an estimated street value of $2,000 was also found in the trunk, police reported.

Rollan said that Boykin was driving under the influence of intoxicating drugs.

Boykin is being held at the county jail on violation of the Alabama uniform controled substance act, pending further felony charges by the sheriff's department. His bond was set at $10,000.

Further investigations are being made by sheriff's investigators and UNDO (United Narcotics Detail Operations) agents.

Columbiana crash kills youth

A three car accident on County Road 28, just inside the Columbiana city limits, Monday night, resulted in the death of a Columbiana youth and the sending of four others to Shelby Memorial Hospital with a variety of injuries.

Ray Eugene Shiflett, 21, of Columbiana, was the fatality of the accident that occurred at 7:35 p.m., Monday.

Shiflett was apparently thrown from the 1966 Chevelle in which he and three Columbiana teenagers were riding. According to the occupants of the ill fated car, Shiflett was the driver.

Passengers in the Chevelle, all taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital were: Debbie Rich, 15, John Howard Hughes, 16 and John Wayne Horton, 13.

A 1973 Ford Torino was travelling in the same direction on County Road 28 and was involved in the smashup. Lori Ann Burke, 18 of Columbiana was listed as the driver and was taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital. Two other passengers in the Torino were not injured.

A third vehicle, driven by William Horton, 57, of Columbiana was also involved. Horton, the only occupant of this car was not injured.

The accident was investigated by State Trooper Wiley Bibb.

Taxpayers jam courthouse for answers

Monday brought long lines of taxpayers to the courthouse. Most landowners in Shelby County received their long awaited tax notices Saturday.

The notices were good news to many because taxes were lowered on many "homesteads". But for those who own several acres, or those who had made improvements on their property in recent years, or for those whose property is assessed at subdivision value, rather than at farm value, the tax notices proved to be a jolt.

Most taxpayers seemed to feel that the taxes were fair or at least they paid them and resigned themselves. But many taxpayers said that errors had been made and they were making their complaints known throughout the halls of the courthouse.

The most frequently heard complaint was that they could not find anyone who would talk to them or explain their assessments to them. Telephone lines to the assessor's office were busy constantly. Taxpayers formed lines until 6:30 Monday, well after the usual 4 p.m. closing time.

It was especially difficult to get to tax records because of the crush of people wanting to see how the assessments were listed. One attorney noted he had to delay closing the sale of a house for two days because he could not get the necessary records.

Among the complaints heard by the Reporter:

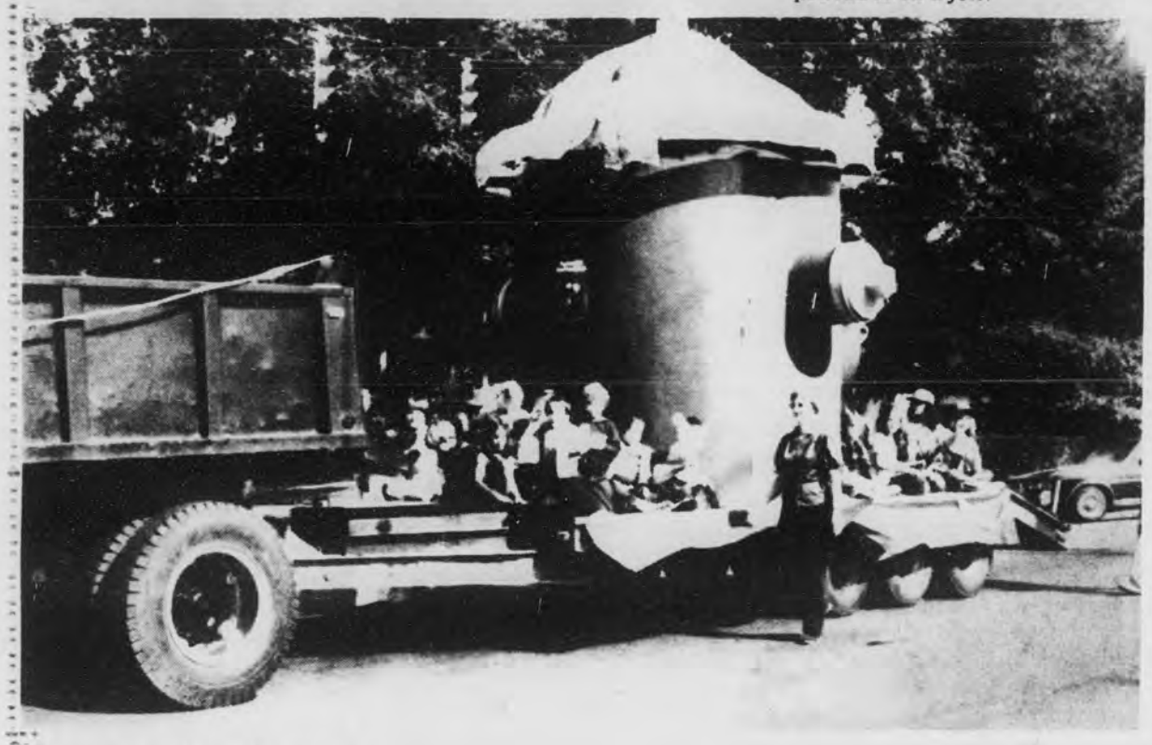
"My taxes went up from $9 last year to $148 this year. I've got about 4½ acres - nothing but a hill and a holler - and all the buildings are old. I can't help it if it's right next to Riverchase. I've lived there all my life and nothing has changed for me. I don't see why I should have a tax increase like that."

A man and wife from the Vincent area: "We have several acres and it is all in one parcel. But the tax people have split it up in five areas. Our taxes are up from $123 last year to $600 this year. Something must be wrong."

"My 40 acres of scrub and woods land is assessed way above last year."

"I have 80 acres in Wilsonville and two 40-acre parcels. But I can't figure out why the 40 acres with my house on it is assessed at less than the 40 acres that's just open land. And I can't find anyone who can tell me the answer."

"My taxes (on Highway 280 near Harpersville) have gone up six times since last year."



Montevallo Parade

A giant fireplug dominated the Montevallo Fire Department's parade Saturday. The Pelham High School Band and fire trucks from several cities helped Montevallo celebrate.

Yarn plant to stay open

Since the country's economic barometer is falling, Buck Creek President Harry Rogers told employees of the Valley Division in Columbiana that business will be sluggish.

However, he denied rumors that the plant will close down. Backing up his words, Rogers declared, "We've just bought five frames at a cost of $200,000. That should be a good indication we're not going out of business," he said.

The Buck Creek president spoke at a service awards banquet Saturday night at an Alabaster restuarant where five employees received certificates and service pins.

Speaking to the employees to be honored, Valley's plant manager Frank Brasher said, "Tonight's your night. Without you," he continued, "There wouldn't be a Valley."

Available money will be spent streamlining plants, Rogers told supervisors and employees present at the annual affair. When the economic picture improves, he reported that the plant would be enlarged.

Complimentary in his remarks about Valley, Rogers said that the quality of the yarn produced at the Columbiana plant was the best made at the company's three facilities.

Service awards

Certificates and service pins were handed out to five and ten year employees of Valley Mills Saturday night. Left to right are: Barbara Jones, 10; Janice Jones, 5; William Posey, 5; Clarence Mayfield, 10; and Fay Smith, 5.

Fire destroys home

The home of Dr. and Mrs. J.G. Alston on Mardis Ferry Road in Columbiana was completely destroyed by fire Monday evening.

Units from the Columbiana and Wilsonville Fire Departments answered the call which was turned in at approximately 6:15 p.m.

However, because of burned phone lines, the call to the fire department was delayed. And when firefighters arrived, the upper floor of the house was engulfed in flames.

The Alstons' son Bob reportedly noticed smoke when he arrived home after football practice and went upstairs to put his equipment away.

A call to the fire department was made from a nearby home. But even though four pumpers were on the scene within minutes and firemen worked until 10 p.m., they were unable to save the house.

One source said that a wood burning stove might have been the cause of the blaze.

Calera adopts budget of $½ million for year

The City of Calera's budget for the present fiscal year totals $497,205.85, almost a half million dollars.

According to City Clerk Lemoyne Payton, salaries for city employees make up the biggest percentage of the city's expenses. Police department salaries make up the biggest part of total salary expenditure.

Included in the budget is $20,000 for street re-surfacing, $25,000 for garbage pickup, $12,000 for the fire department and $3,925 to the schools that are within the city limits.

County budget delayed again

Shelby County Probate Judge Tommy Snowden announced this week that the county's general fund budget will not be completed until next Monday.

Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds revised upward her estimate of tax income this week, telling Snowden that each mill may bring in $240,000 instead of the $225,000 her office estimated the week before.

Interest rates take boom out of housing

by David Moore

The boom is gone. New housing construction in Shelby County has dropped off this year.

Health department figures show that the number of septic tanks installed at new houses has fallen off 18.8% over last year.

In 1978 a total of 875 septic tanks were installed at new houses, 643 of them from January through September. During the same period this year, a total of 522 tanks were installed at new houses.

The septic tank figures are considered by the Home Builders Association to be representative yardstick of construction outside municipal limits.

According to Bob Moore, broker for Dixieland Realty, contractors have dropped off on speculative house building because of high, short term loans, which now charge 15%-18% interest.

Moore notes that he is probably selling as many new houses as he was last year, but that sales on existing homes have dropped from last year.

The greater Birmingham Multiple Listings Service, which lists houses, condominiums and apartments for sale in several counties, backs up Moore's statement. Averaging six listings per page, the October 11, 1979 issue contains 778 pages of available housing, as compared to 642 pages in the October 12, 1978 issue.

HBA (Home Builders Association) president Aubrey Byrd says that older or existing houses are not selling as well because the equities in them are often usually higher than in news houses.

According to Moore, rates on conventional loans are running between 12%-12.5%. VA loans, he says, are at 10.5% interest.

But, points out Byrd, "It's better to buy one now than it'll be in six months, even paying 11% interest.

Byrd goes on to say that the houses on the market now are the same ones that will be available next summer because of the drop in speculative building.

The HBA president ends on a bright note, however, saying that the housing sales are "looking better" now than they were 90 days ago. And, he says, it's going to get better.

Referring to a Dow Jones financial chart, Byrd says it shows a downswing in the economy in the 12 months previous to the last eight Presidential elections. The downswings, he says, bottom out each four years about nine months before the election, then oddly enough swings back up.

"As soon as it (the economy) turns around it (housing) will be back like it was in 1971 when people were buying foundations, or like '76 and '77 when you could sell anything you had."

Sheriff's chopper

The two seater helicopter recently acquired by the Shelby County Sheriff's Department arrived last week at the Shelby County Airport. A government surplus item, the machine was purchased for $2,000.

Sheriff goes airborne with chopper purchase

Four wheel drive vehicles don't come cheap and neither do helicopters. But Sheriff Buddy Glasgow made a lot better deal on the purchase of an airborne vehicle for his department than he did when he bought a Blazer several months ago.

The Sheriff said that he was able to acquire the two man chopper which is now at the Shelby County Airport for $2,000 through the Federal Property Assistance program (Government Surplus). A price tag of $10,000 was on the Blazer.

There will be no charge for basing the helicopter at the airport nor for the pilot. However, the Shelby County Commission will have to approve the cost of insurance and gasoline.

The rotor craft had originally been purchased by the Boys' and Girls' Ranches, and he was able to acquire it, the Sheriff said, when he learned they were turning it back.

According to Glasgow, 80% of the cost of the Osage TH 55A were in shipping charges. The helicopter was flown in from Arizona.

Money to pay for the new piece of equipment will probably come from the pistol permit fund, the Sheriff reported. That source of revenue is expected to bring in $12,000, he said.

Noting that Chilton, Autauga and a number of other counties in the state have helicopters, the Sheriff said that the rotor craft will be used for traffic control, spontaneous patrol, search and rescue and other emergencies.

Glasgow is now taking flying lessons at the Shelby County Airport and may eventually fly the helicopter himself.

Writer praises police for showing empathy

Letter to Editor:

The law officers of Shelby County and the officers in the various communities in the county are human beings with families, friends, hopes and desires just like most other citizens of the county, but, because of their positions in their specific vocations are usually only subjected to criticism for their efforts at keeping the peace.

As a citizen of Alabaster, I would like to extend a 'thank you' and praise to some individual officers in our town; Chief C.E. "Bull" Carter and Officer Larry Rollan, Special Investigator. Their expertise in assisting and handling a recent problem for me, their empathy with both parties, the guilty and the victim, showed what experience, training, and being human can mean.

I believe the guilty parties will be better persons because these two people handled themselves and the case with such effieiency. I know my family gained even more respect for their position as well as for both officers.

ESSAY CONTEST

is the theme of an essay contest

now being sponsored by the Shelby County Reporter, the Alabama Press Assn., and the National Newspaper Assn. Mgrs., Inc. The contest is open to all Shelby County residents except those persons exempted under the contest rules.

The first amendment, adopted in 1791, has since protected the rights of freedom of speech, press, religion, and peaceable assembly. It has in recent years, however, come under fire from those who would have serious restrictions placed upon these heretofore inalienable rights.

It is the responsibility of the people of this nation to insure that this safeguard of American freedom is not altered in such a way as to limit the individual's right to speak, write, worship, or assemble peaceably as he or she chooses.

It is the hope of this newspaper that through this contest the citizens of this area will gain a better understanding of the First Amendment and its role in the preservation of the freedoms they so fully enjoy.

Contestants are urged to compose their essays in strict obeyance with the contest rules. All entries must be received by the Shelby County Reporter no later than 5 p.m., November 14, 1979. Entries may be delivered in person or mailed in to: The Shelby County Reporter, Main Street, P.O. Box 947, Columbiana, Al 35051 or The Shelby County Reporter, Hwy 31 at Crosscreek Trail, P.O. Box 534, Pelham, Al 35124.

All entries will be judged according to the contest rules and prizes will be awarded as follows: First Place $25; Second Place $15; Third Place $10. There will also be a $5 prize as honorable mention. In addition, the first place winning entry will be sent to the Alabama Press Association for competition in the state contest.

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

CONTEST RULES

2. Each entry shall consist of not more than two 8½ x 11 pages. The entries must be typewritten and double-spaced, or clearly written in longhand, and not more than 1,000 words on the subject: "What The First Amendment Means To Me."

3. Each entry will be judged on the basis of appropriate treatment of the theme,originiality and the writing skill of the entrant.

4. No entries will be returned and all will become the property of sponsoring state associations, Newspaper Association Managers, Inc., and the Ohio Newspaper Foundation for use as they desire, with no added compensation to the authors. Entries must be previously unpublished.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana a member of the FDIC.

Mrs. Gertrude Davis called me one night last week. She had hunted that turnip patch on the Egg and Butter road and couldn't find it. And for good reason, which I'll tell you about if you'll stay with me for another paragraph or two.

Remember years ago when Ross Ivey was running the picture show on Main for Eddie Watson, on the corner where the Western Auto is now. And that night, to help business, he let everybody in for a nickle. The line reached from the ticket window to the court house, and on past the Methodist Church, and finally fizzled out halfway between the two churches. Folks came from all around and had a good time and went on back home never to come back--since the nickle-night was a once in a lifetime thing.

But it proved one thing.

If you get it at a bargain--get it.

And don't fret simply because Freffie and Fidelia and all their kin got the bargain too.

Another time, as all you oldies will recall, the Republicans got control of the court house. And with folks like Judge Longshore and Andrew Jackson and Laney Isbell and Joe Bird and George Weaver running the show, they held on for years and years.

And they did a good job too. Especially once a year when the good Republican ladies had their big dinner on the benches back of the court house. It didn't cost a dime. And nobody cared if you weighed 50 pounds or two hundred. Or whether your tummy was as flat as a bed slat or hung over your pants a good ten inches. And if you came and ate like a little pig for an hour, but somehow missed eating some of Mrs. Isbell's chocolate cake or Mrs. Longshore's fried chicken or Mrs. Bird's apple pie, somebody was bound to notice and you would hear about it before the next Sunday.

But it proved one thing.

If you run upon a bargain hitch ol' Dobbin and get out and bellyup to the rack. And don't worry if Joe and Josephine and hundreds of others found it too. It won't make a tad of difference.

And that, Mrs. Davis, is what happened to our turnip patch on the Egg and Butter road. It was a real, down-to-earth, slam-bang bargain, and because it wasn't there when you got there a few days later was only a normal thing. You know how folks are when a bargain comes along.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Buck Rogers is back. But the thrill of watching the adventures of the space hero is gone - at least, for me.

The only thing in the first episode of the TV series to evoke a tingle of excitement was the appearance of the first Buck, Buster Crabbe.

During my growing up years in a small New York town, I remember looking forward with great anticipation to those Saturday afternoons at the movies when Crabbe would star in the adventures of Buck Rogers and Flash Gordon.

Movies have sure come a long way since then. Unfortunately, I think it's all been in the wrong direction.

Before Buck and Flash came to the screen, I read about them in comic books and in the comic strips of the daily newspapers. And my friends and I acted out their adventures.

Dressing up for our roles, I remember that I admired the boots that Wilma Deering wore in the Buck Roger's adventures. However, the only thing I could come up with to wear in place of them were knee socks. And flying belts, to my mind, were the neatest things ever!

One of the biggest thrills of my pre-teen years, was seeing in person, the man who played the Buck Rogers role.

Crabbe was one of the stars of the Aquacade which was part of a World's Fair held in New York. There's no telling how many times I saw that show!

I can still see him and Eleanor Holme cutting through the water in that gigantic pool.

I'm sure the years have dimmed the magic that's part of childhood make-believe. But I don't care what you say, they're just not making heros the way they used to.

Writer understands movie to be religious mockery

Open letter to R.C. Cob:

It is our understanding that the movie you are showing at your Vestavia location called "Life of Brian" is a mockery to the Lord Jesus Christ and plays him up to be a fool.

I do realize that you have the constitutional right of "freedom of press" and "freedom of speech". We, being Christians and loving our Lord, have those rights as well. So we, in our own way, are expressing our view of "freedom". We simply hate to see a movie come out like this because there are millions in this nation who are searching for happiness, peace and security, and those things can only be found through the Lord - by knowing Jesus Christ as your personal savior. So you see, it doesn't hurt Jesus or even us dedicated Christians as much as it does those who Satan manipulates. This movie could and very possibly have persuaded non-Christian viewers that the true Messiah was no more than a person such as this foolish "Brian". What a terrible tragedy.

We want to do our part in stopping Satan from accomplishing his mission through this movie. We will continue to pray about this matter and also pray that the Lord will touch you in a real way. We do not want you to be a part of Satan's plot to send thousands of people to eternal Hell. Remember the Lord loves you and died for you just like he did for us.

Hometown pickin' star honored in Alabaster

By David Moore

Wendy Holcombe's skyrocketing career has taken another giant step towards the stars.

The popular country singer and banjo picker from Alabaster, has signed a five year contract with ABC television network. The contract calls for guest appearances on Love Boat, Fantasy Island, Charlie's Angels and other shows over the next two years.

And after the first two years she'll have her own show.

And there's more, but the network's keeping it secret.

"All the good stuff I can't tell," Wendy told the Reporter last week in Alabaster. "And, I want to get on top of the building and yell it!"

Wendy Holcombe took a little time from her head-spinning schedule last Wednesday to stop by Alabaster City Hall to give Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek an autographed copy of her live album and show off the plaque he presented her the night before at the State Fair.

Wendy flashed the plaque proudly. "The four stars on it stand for the four years I've been in the business," she laughed.

The plaque reads: "'Wendy,' For your outstanding contributions to Country Music. Mayor Jack R. Zuiderhoek. Wendy Holcombe Day. Alabama State Fair, 10-9-79.

In case you didn't hear, Tuesday, October 9, was Wendy Holcombe Day in Alabaster.

Zuiderhoek, obviously proud of Miss Holcombe's background, said, "That's my favorite girl because she doesn't forget where she's from."

Besides her trip to Los Angeles where she met for two weeks with ABC TV writers, the fast budding star said she has recently played in Canada, Las Vegas, Mexico, New York, the Dakotas, West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois and Florida. From the doubtful look on her face, she was probably forgetting a couple of states.

Tandy Rice, owner of Top Billing and Miss Holcombe's personal Manager, has arranged a number of other TV appearances for her this season. Besides a session of 'Nashville on the Road' to be filmed later this month in Aspen, Colorado, the young star will also be featured on the Perry Como and Eddie Rabbit Christmas specials.

She will also be honored as the only non-member to play the Grand Ole Opry Christmas special, which she says she's very excited about.

She adds that next time she plays the Opry she wants to take Country Boy Eddie, who started her in television four years ago. "He's just like a second daddy to me," she said.

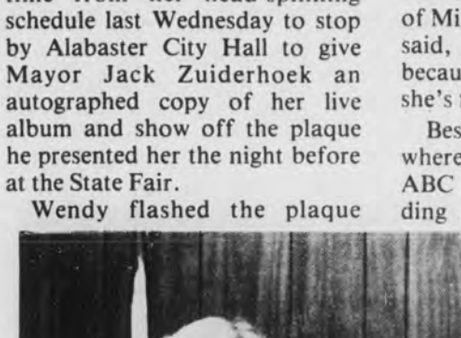
Though still registered at Thompson High School, Miss Holcombe gets her schooling from a tutor. "I don't miss school that much, but I do miss my old friends," she says.

Playing the state fair last week gave Wendy a chance to see "lots of my old friends". She said she even got an hour or so off to go ride a few rides with Cathy Brown, Cathy Hines, Wayne Babb and Gregg MacIntyre.

As if she didn't have enough good news to pass on, she also added that she's going to build a log house "complete with a big front porch, old timey cook stove, swing and fire place." Where? Alabaster, of course.

What else can be expected of the young star in the near future?

"Tom T. Hall is writing a song for me," she beamed. "It's called Alabaster, Alabama."



WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"Does the Bible Give Signs Pointing to the End of Time?

In a time when much emphasis is placed upon the doctrine of premillenialism--that is the belief that Christ will return to Jerusalem to reign a thousand years on the literal throne of David--much teaching is also done to try to affirm that signs show that the end of time is imminent and near. However, the Bible knows nothing of the man-made doctrine of premillenialism and thus knows nothing of signs pointing to the end of time.

The belief that certain signs indicate that the end of time is near comes from a lack of understanding to Matthew 24. This chapter is the culmination of warnings against the leaders of the Jewish nation. In Matthew 21:13, Christ speaks of the temple as "my house;" however, in Matthew 23:28, He speaks of "your house," which is "left unto you desolate." He then proceeds to answer two questions which are asked by the apostles. "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" (Matthew 24:3) The two questions thus are, "When shall the destruction of Jerusalem be?" and "When shall the end of the world take place?"

Jesus proceeded to answer the first question, concerning the destruction of the temple and the end of the Jewish state. He stated to the disciples that not one stone would be left upon another in the temple. When? Christ then gave signs pointing to the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. There would be false messiahs, wars, famines, earthquakes, the gospel would be preached to the whole world, which Paul stated took place before the destruction of Jerusalem. (Colossians 1:6, 23), and the abomination of desolation would take place. Luke stated that this was the Roman army, which destroyed the city. Those Christians in the city heeded the warning given by Christ to flee to the mountains. The tribulation of the time was so great that 97,000 Jews were taken captive by Rome, and 1,100,000 Jews died. Thus, Christ answered the first question by giving signs leading to the destruction of Jerusalem.

In answering the second question, Christ stated that neither He nor the angels knew the time when He would return, but only God knew. Thus, how could He give signs leading to the end of time? The best He could do was to say that His return would be as a thief in the night. (Matthew 24:36, 43, 44) He emphasized preparedness, since He could give no signs leading to the end of time. (Matthew 25:1-11) the so-called signs leading to the end of time are but figments of the wishful imagination of those who use faulty exegesis in Matthew 24 and who misapply other clear passages to try to support the erroneous theory of predestination.

Christians could tell when the destruction of Jerusalem could take place, A.D. 70, but Christians can no more predict when Christ shall return than one can predict the coming of a thief. He shall come unannounced.

Banjo picking Wendy Holcombe got a few minutes off her tight schedule last Wednesday to stop by city hall and show off the plaque she got commemorating October 9 as Wendy Holcombe Day in Alabaster. Let's face it. Farming's a tough business. You depend on high yields. In fact, with the cost of everything in the farming industry going up, you've got to have them.

I look at savings the same way I look at farming; getting the highest yield I possibly can. Because high yields in savings is like high yields in farming. It helps you on down the road; next year's planting season, farm expansion, college for the kids, retirement.

United Federal pays the highest interest rates allowed by law, whether it's on a regular statement account or an 8 Year Certificate of Deposit.

But besides high interest rates and high yields, United Federal offers still more; like friendly, personal and professional attention. The way I look at it, a savings and loan should be sort of a financial partner, honestly concerned about the welfare of my business. That's just the way United Federal operates.

Sure, United Federal gives you a lot of interest, but it doesn't stop with your money.

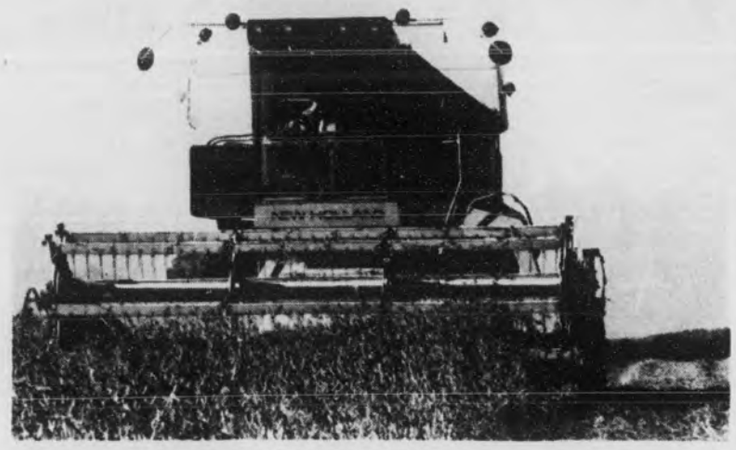
Farmers reaping best soy bean harvest ever



Harvest time

Farmers are now in the process of harvesting what will probably be the largest soy bean crop the county has ever seen. Last Wednesday, R.V. Spates of Harpersville was putting in some long hours on his $62,000 combine harvesting soy beans. (Photo by Moore)

by David Moore

This year's soy bean harvest promises to be the largest in Shelby County's history.

County agent coordinator George Gober told the Reporter this week that the average yield per acre is expected to run about 30 bushels, though several farmers have reported yields of 45 and 53 bushels per acre.

The state average this season may run 24 bushels per acre, the extension office said.

Some farmers have marketed this year's beans for up to $7.25 per bushel, Gober states, but adds that most of the beans are bringing $7 per bushel.

With some 6,500 acres of Shelby County planted to soy beans this year, the product is expected to make up approximately $1,365,000 of county's $19 million agriculture industry, according to Gober's figures.

Soy beans, along with cotton, are the county's two major crops, he said.

R.V. Spates of Harpersville, one of approximately 30 county farmers who planted soy beans in the late spring and early summer, began his harvest last Monday. The harvest is expected to continue into December.

Spates credited this year's bumper crop to good rainfall. Two years ago he said he averaged 29.9 bushels of soy beans to the acre, but last year that figure dropped to 2.5 bushels due to drought.

County goes to court

A teacher who was fired from Riverchase Middle School on August 14 has been reinstated by the Alabama Tenure Commission of the State Board of Education.

Odessa Jackson's hearings before the Shelby County Board of Education were lengthy and drew considerable interest last summer.

She appealed her firing to the Tenure Commission, which ruled on September 25, that "the cancellation was not reasonably supported by the reasons given by the Board and...the reasons given by the Board for the cancellation were so unsupported in fact as to be arbitrarily unjust." Her attorney was quoted in the AEA Journal as saying she was subject to "policital pressure from a small, vocal and well financed group of individuals who called themselves school trustees."

However, the Shelby County Board of Education has appealed the case to Circuit Court. No date has as yet been set for the appeal.

The Alpha Nu Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma society began the 1979-1980 year with a covered-dish dinner at the Shelby County Vocational Center.

Ann Head, president of the society presided over the meeting. The new members were welcomed into the organization. Ann McGaughy, first vice-president, presented the new yearbooks and discussed the meetings for the coming year.

Committee groups met to get their yearly business underway.

The November meeting will be held in the Columbiana library.

Goblin Rousers

CB monsters prove useful

Halloween monsters are checking out a Columbiana house where they'll be taking up residence Friday.

The house on the corner of N. Main and Carter Lane is being prepared by members of the Rebel Rousers CB Club and SCHS Athletic Boosters, to scare the wits out of visitors who are brave enough to venture inside.

Described as one of the biggest and best horror shows anywhere around, the 16 horrors, complete with sound effects and lighting, will be on display at 7 p.m., Oct. 19-20.

The house will also be open preceding Halloween on the 26, 27, 29, 30, and Halloween night.

According to Columbiana police, there was less vandalism last year in the community when the CB club opened their first horror house.

Proceeds from the event, will go to the Athletic Boosters.

Helena sets $300,000 budget

The City of Helena adopted a budget of almost $300,000 Monday night. Prepared and presented by Mayor Charles Penhale, the budget of $299,361 is based on all sources of income the city expects, including a guess on what the ad valorem tax will bring in.

More than a third will be spent on the police department, which is down for $116,061.

The budgets provides for three additional employees; dog control officer, a part time librarian and a full time paramedic-fireman. A fifth policeman was employed last month.

A ten percent salary increase for all employees was also included. The revenue sharing income of $18,333 will go to the fire department, which will include the salary of the paramedic-fireman, equipment, and all other needs of the department.

The sum of $5,000 will go to Helena School and the city is making donations to Shelby Academy yearbook, and the Pelham Band Boosters program.

In other action, the city voted to hold municipal court twice a month instead of once, and scheduled the Christmas parade for December 8 at 3 p.m. The contractor of the new city sewer system is reportedly searching the line for any leaks.

Evansville work begins

A new turnaround at the end of one of the roads is in the making as Whitten pushes dirt and shrubs out of the way. Montevallo's city council recently voted to spend $11,000 on road improvements in Evansville.

A meeting will be held at Pelham City Hall on Tuesday, October 23 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the formation of a Friends of the Library group.

Mrs. A. C. Jeeter, president of the Montevallo Friends of the Library will speak on the activities of that group, as will Mrs. Mayme Yarbrough, librarian at the Montevallo Public Library.

All those interested in helping the Pelham Public Library meet the growing needs of the community are invited to attend. If sufficient interest is shown, an organizational meeting will be held at an early date, according to librarian Mary Carver.

JANICE CLARK

"It's been an interesting five years," noted Janice Clark as she spent the last day behind her desk at the YMCA Friday.

Mrs. Clark started doing secretarial work for the Y on a part-time basis when the branch was opened in Siluria and Sam Carmichael held the position of director.

She continued with her duties under the second director, Bobby Dodd and has been working with Molly McGregor since she took over the top spot.

But now Mrs. Clark feels she needs to slow down for health reasons.

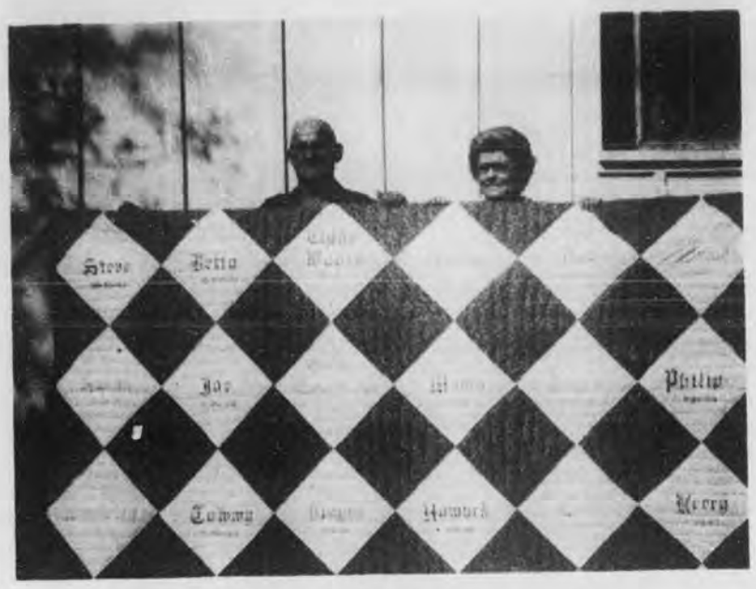
Somewhat reluctant to leave her post, Clark mentioned that she had thoroughly enjoyed her years at the Y. "I've met such interesting people," she noted, adding that some of them would be lifelong friends.

Staff members and friends gathered at the home of Detliff and Valley Balfanz Friday evening where a Good Luck party was held for Mrs. Clark.

Wrestling

The state arm wrestling championship is scheduled for next Saturday at Brentwood's Lounge in Pelham.

Weighing at 9 a.m. for the five weight classes: 4 men's and 1 women's Competition will begin at noon. Information: Tommy Bullard, 988-3721.



MR. AND MRS. CLYDE MOORE WITH QUILT

Family honors parents with handmade quilt

by Shelba S. Nivens

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Moore of "Moore Town" in the Mt. Era community were recently happly surprised with a very special memento of their family and their forty-ninth wedding anniversary. A king-size quilt, bearing the names and birth dates of their thirty-four descendants, was presented to them by their family, who had worked on the quilt over a period of several months. Names and dates were embrodiered on white squares, put together with squares of dark calico print.

Clyde Moore and Irene Whitfield were married on September 20, 1930, and made their home at Moore Town, which was settled by Clyde's ancestors. Two years after their marriage, they built the house in which they yet live.

Parents of Clyde Moore were Hiram and Melissa Roper Moore. Hiram Moore was one of the ten charter members of the Mt. Era Methodist Church, where the Moore family yet worships.

"There use to be a road that ran from down in here up through the woods to the Chelsea area, around old East Saginaw," recalls Mr. Moore. "And there were house places all along it." It was in the area around east Saginaw that his father, Hiram, was raised, he says. When the family pushed on farther south to settle what became known as Moore Town, the area was covered by virgin timber.

Hiram Moore was the son of James Moore. The father of James Moore had migrated from the Carolinas to Coosa County, Alabama. Clyde Moore says that he has been told that during the Civil War, some of the Moore boys went from Coosa County to Tennessee where they were sharp-shooters in the war.

Irene Moore is the daughter of Jesse and Jessie Glazner Whitfield. She grew up in the Dargin community, where the Shelby County airport is now located. "Our house was about where the overpass is now," she recalls, but the area has changed so much that she cannot recall the exact spot.

Irene worked for several years as manager of the kitchen at Shelby Memorial Hospital. She retired in 1977. Her husband worked, in earlier years, at the Childersburg Powder Palnt, then as a logger and a carpenter. He retired in 1972. Many people of the area will remember Clyde Moore as a gospel singer, who sang, for many years, in gospel quartets around Shelby county and surrounding counties.

Clyde and Irene Moore have five children: Betty Arledge of Montevallo, Dot Evans and Joyce Horton of Moore Town, Faye Vincent of Columbiana, and Howard Moore of Bessemer. They have fourteen grandchildren and five great grandchildren. On Thursday, September 20, twenty-four of these relatives met at the Bright Star Restaurant in Bessemer to honor them on their anniversary with dinner and the family quilt.

Parties honor Miss Revis

Miss Patricia Ann Revis, bride-elect of Allan Ray Barnett, was honored with a tea-shower at the home of Mrs. Walter Gaskin in Wilsonville on October 7th.

Receiving with the hostess and the bride-elect were her mother, Mrs. Alan Revis, mother of the groom-to-be Mrs. Robert Barnett, and grandmothers Mrs. N.E. Revis and Mrs. S.C. Jones.

The tea table was covered with white lace over pink and the centerpiece was of silk flowers and pink candles. Strawberry frappe and miniature cakes were served to the host of friends and relatives who called during the afternoon.

Co-hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Leon Lovett, Mrs. Don Beavers, Mrs. Austin Mitchell, Mrs. Sam Stoudenmire, Mrs. W.G. Oliver, Mrs. Sammy McEwen, Mrs. Sam Whitson, Mrs. C.W. Buchanan, Mrs. Gene Reed, Mrs. T.E. Edwards, Mrs. Raymond Davis, and Mrs. Jack Moody.

Miss Revis was honored on August 21st when members of her sorority the Omega Iota Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha surprised her with a kitchen shower.

The Club Room of the Longleaf Apartments in Riverchase was decorated to feature a rainbow with a pot of gold at the end containing an assortment of gold-wrapped gifts. Invited guests were Mrs. Alan Revis, Mrs. N.E. Revis and Mrs. Robert Barnett.

Miss Revis and Mr. Barnett will be married at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, October 21st at the Wilsonville Baptist Church.

Rev. William B. Todd, teacher of the class, invites everybody to attend.

Tango disco classes begin at Y

Louise Jones taught her husband how to disco dance and now the couple are showing others how to do the country's most popular dance.

Last year the pair teamed up to instruct a class at the Shelby County YMCA and this week they're starting another session at the Siluria facility.

The five weeks of classes will begin October 30, and last from 7:30-9 p.m. every Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Jones urges anyone who wants to learn the steps to join the class even if they don't have a partner. She related that basic tango disco will be taught.

"We like teaching beginners," Mrs. Jones remarked," it gives us a good feeling of accomplishment."

Having danced since the age of four, Mrs. Jones is an accomplished performer. However, her role during the class will be to explain the steps while her husband and a former pupil, Ginger Johnston, demonstrate them.

The reason for her being on the sidelines is that Mrs. Jones is expecting her second child. The couple's son Michael is three years old.

Students tapped to honorary

Michael Robert Fowler and Regina Harbour, both of Montevallo, were initiated into Omicron Delta Kappa at the University of Montevallo, during Founders Day activities Friday.

They were among 19 students who were inducted into the leadership honorary on the basis of high grades and leadership. Both have participated in several extra-curricular activities during their college years.

ODK is the top leadership honorary at UM.

Club offers 'insurance'

The University of Montevallo Physical Education Club has come up with a novel fund-raising idea for those who fear they will have their yards rolled on Halloween.

By giving the club a one dollar donation before Halloween, the members of the club guarantee they will come out and clean up any mess left by pranksters who scatter litter or roll a yard. They will not replace or repair anything, and will not repair damage caused by vandalism. But if there is just an unsightly mess, they are offering to clean it up.

They are making the offer only to residents of Montevallo and Calera. To line up for the service, call before 5: UM, 665-2521 Ext. 410 or after 5; Tammy Richardson at 665-4362.

Famed violinist to perform

Guila Bustabo, violinist with the Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, will perform at the University of Montevallo Monday, Oct. 22.

Her performance is a part of the UM Music department's guest artist series.

Ms. Bustabo has been playing the violin since she was two, and performed with the Chicago Symphony at the age of four.

She has studied with prominent violinists and toured Europe and the world.

The recital begins at 8 p.m. in the LeBaron recital hall and is open to the public free of charge.

VW's run good race at Shelby Speedway

Bobby Carter of Bessemer won the 100 lap VW race at Shelby Speedway last Saturday night. Track manager Jerry Handley said that the 100 lap race was one of the best races ever held at the dirt track.

Carter along with Bennie Brasher, Johnny Davis and Jerry Carter bolted out in front of everyone else and it appeared that no one would catch them. Carter was running flat out on the 67th lap when Brasher managed to get by him to take the lead, but could only hold Carter off for 11 laps as the Bessemer driver regained the lead.

Wayne Spratlin of Sterrett, completely demolished the guard rail in turn number four during the time trials, repaired his car, re-entered the race, wrecked twice more during the 100 lapper but after Brasher fell out, moved up to take second place.

Rick Majors of Brantleyville placed third in the race with Dennie Majors fourth, Johnny Davis fifth and Bennie Brasher sixth.

In the 25 lap bomber feature race, Steve Payton of Calera took the checkered flag with Dale Price second, Joe Gardner third, Bobby Lucas fourth and Warren Dixon fifth.

Terry Wesley of Hueytown won the 25 lap Modified feature race. Jim McDaniel took second with Clarence Jones third, Paul Walden fourth, and Billy Massey fifth.

Another big race is on the schedule for Shelby Speedway this Saturday night. A 100 lap Modified Feature race is planned and a good lineup of local drivers is set to vie for the cash and trophies that will be offered as prizes to the winning driver.

The gates will open at 5:30 with racing starting promptly at 7:30. Come early for good seats as a large crowd is expected.

Golf tourney set

A golf tournament is being sponsored by the Shelby County High School Athletic Boosters for Wednesday, October 24.

The fund-raising tourney will be at Oak Mountain State Park golf course and will begin at noon. Four flights based on handicaps will be fielded and trophies will be awarded to winners.

William Rasco at 669-6009 and Mark Bradley at 669-9289 are signing up those who wish to participate.

Ghost to haunt Y

There'll be a big change in the appearance of the Shelby County YMCA come Oct. 26. That will be the first day a Haunted House will be open in the Siluria facility.

Ghosts and goblins and all the spooky creatures that inhabit a haunted house will be roaming through the building the next two evenings too, from 6-9 p.m.

Proceeds from the event will be used to buy equipment for the Y's gymnastic team and to roof the racquetball court so they'll have a better place to work out.

Instructor Mary Byrum reports that the team will participate in their first meet Nov. 16.

Psyching up for the game

Pelham's preparation like lighting the fuse to a keg of TNT

by David Moore

Friday. October 5. THE game of the season for the Pelham Panthers. At 7:30 they'll square up against the Thompson Warriors.

But anyone who thinks a football game starts with the referee's whistle on the kickoff has his cleats on the wrong foot.

For the players and coaches, the game starts long before the kickoff. Not only does a team have to prepare physically for an opponent, but mentally as well. Before the squad hits the field it has to be keyed up, fired up, psyched up and riled up.

Pep rally

Pelham players file into the gym at the start of the pep rally. The noise went from unbearable to indescribe as the Panthers made their entrance.

Getting up for a football game is long, slow, and for the most part, quiet process.

Before the game, the feeling of anticipation among the players is like a long, slow-burning fuse flickering toward a keg of TNT. You know something is going to blow.

The fuse is lit at the pep rally.

More than 600 students are gathered in the Pelham gym. The walls are heavily papered with spirit posters. The students are there to yell. And yell they do.

The walls of the gym do little to cap the cheering thunder. Outside you hear the roar easily. Inside you can hardly hear the person next to you.

2:30 PM

Pelham head coach Steve Rivers sends the football team filing into the gym. The crowd goes crazy. If it was loud before there is no word for the noise now--except louder. Somebody wants to win.

The football team sits in two rows across the front of the gym. They appear to be as dispassionate as the crowd is frantic. But it is only an appearance. Inside, they are storing energy for the explosion which will come later.

Tackle Jeff Mathis and tailback Dale Busby, players of the week address the students. Their message is simple, direct to the point. And just what the crowd wants to hear.

"We're going to beat Thompson tonight!" Mathis says. The crowd roars.

"This game means more to us than anything. And we're going to win!" Busby's words are all but drowned out.

The band, cheerleaders, students, and maybe even a few of the posters on the walls--all cheer. But the football players sit quietly like batteries at the filling station juicing up a hot-charge. You feel raw energy in the air.

Above the thunder of the pep rally the coach explained that he had to keep the Panthers from getting too fired up over Thompson during the week's practice. As it worked out, he says, practice that week wasn't very good because the team was so up, anyway.

"If they're a little nervous, it's because they have a chance to beat Thompson this year," Rivers remarks, pointing out that Pelham's B-team has defeated the Warriors for the last two seasons.

Pelham's varsity, however, has never beaten Thompson, and last year's 42-18 route was serving as a painful reminder of that fact, like a splinter you can't get out of your finger.

Taping

Coach Steve Rivers applies tape to the ankles of one his players. The weekly ritual is a relaxing, boring, and important job. Three hours later the handywork will be destroyed by sissors as the players ready to go home.

After school the tension builds

3:00 PM

The last of the students amble out of the gym. The learning starts to return to your ears.

Rivers calls the team together. Seniors and starters, he says, are to report upstairs to review the film of the Thompson-SCHS game. The rest of the team is to go home, rest, eat and report back to school at 5:30.

Upstairs, Rivers tells the players it was a good pep rally.

"These people were sincere from way down deep. They're for you. They want to win tonight. And we don't want to let them down."

As he threads the projector, Rivers states, "In your head and mind you should be practicing while you watch this film."

For the next 15 minutes he points out plays and moves that his players can expect from the tough Thompson squad. After the film he tells the team to go down in the gym, get off their feet and rest.

"I'm going to think about what I need to do, and I want you to think about what you have to do," the coach says before dismissing the players.

In the gym, now dark and quiet, the players sit in small groups or by themselves. Each player has Thompson on the brain, and is packing his own keg with TNT.

Tim Chambless, strong end, sits in the bleechers stuffing knee pads in his game pants.

"Thompson is a big game no matter what," Chambless says. "I'm not nervous, just excited and ready to play. Sitting at the pep rally I could have run through the wall I was so anxious to play. But what really fired me up is when I hear the wild beat of their (Thompson's) fight song."

Tackle Scott McGuire, lying on a table in the locker, says, "Playing Thompson is an automatic high. I've been thinking about this game from the first day of summer. I get up just being by myself. I never think about losing."

Randy Springer--known to his teammates as "Zul"--sits alone in a corner of the locker room. Zul admits to being nervous, but says that after he gets on the field and loosens up he'll be all right.

"This is the most important game of my life. I've been ready to play this one for a long time. It's a lot easier to get up for Thompson than any other school.

"Right now I'm thinking about the assignment I have to do," Zul says. "When it comes time to it, I'll do it."

Pelham's sophomore quarterback, Steve Rye, says he started getting up for the Thompson game the week before. He says the pep rally let him know the students were behind him.

"I'm bad fired up," the young quarterback says. "More nervous than anything. I'm just trying to relax and control my emotions. I feel like I'm ready to go right now."

But it is a long time yet before kickoff. The pre-game fuse burns slowly. The clock, it seems forgets to tick.

4:30 PM

Rivers calls calmly down to the 30 squad members in the gym, "All right, let's go get some supper."

"After I eat I'll probably feel like I'm going to throw up," Zul says, at least half way serious.

The players drive to an Alabaster Steak House and file into a back room. Plates loaded with chopped steaks and potatoes are waiting.

The meal is eaten quietly, seriously.

Assistant coaches Tony Taylor and Ron Griggs talk about Pelham High, how it is the stepson of Thompson and how much a victory that night means. The comparison is made to the Auburn-Alabama rivalry.

After the meal, no one throws up. The team returns quietly to the school.

5:30 PM

The team members who went home after school rejoin those who stayed. Rivers has them down in the gym again. Some prepare their equipment.

Most of the team sits quietly. Waiting. Thinking. A few soft voices drift across the floor over the constant, soft whir of the vent fans.

Coach Rivers comments that he is past the age of butterflies in his stomach. Now, he says, it is more of a pain. He glances at the clock for maybe the hundredth time.

It is a long 55 minutes.

Final pep talk

Rivers points out the night's game plan against the Thompson Warriors. Underneath the stadium at Pelham, the roar of the crowd is reduced to muffled background noise as the coaches seek to correct first half errors.

At 7:30 the keg explodes

6:25 PM

The team heads down to the field house in a single file. The sun sets quietly in the cloudless sky.

"I'm cramped up and as nervous as I can be," says Ron Domian, number 74.

Inside, the field house, the smell of, atomic bomb salve takes a slight edge off the inner tensions which have built up over the afternoon. Finally there is something else to think about, and for a while the players busy themselves with equipment.

But if the inner tensions have eased somewhat, the outer signs of anxiety have increased. Some players sit on the benches tapping their feet nervously. Others stare intently at the plywood ceiling. Rivers paces.

Strong end Chip Pritchard hobbles into the room on crutches.

"Hey, how 'bout this guy?" Rivers exclaims. The team claps for Pritchard. They clap to help the tension.

"All right, let's go out and loosen up, Rivers says to the team. "When we come back in we'll do a little more serious talking. But I'm not going to have to say too much, am I?"

"No sir!" the team answers.

7:00 PM

The Panther backs and ends jog on to the field to the accompaniment of shouting and cheering spectators. They begin throwing the ball, stretching out the cramped muscles, loosening up.

Shortly, the line and Coach Griggs charge out on the field to the beat of the Pelham marching band drums. Griggs, the players say, is the sort who gets fired up over tiddly-winks. Football puts blood in his eyes. The backs clap and cheer for the line.

The explosion nears.

"Let's go! Let's go!"

"All right now."

"I feel kind of scared," grins tackle Jerard Johnson. "Come on, let's go!"

The team goes through drills. On the other end of the field the white clad Warriors do the same. Neither team seems to acknowledge the presence of the other, even though that's what is foremost in their minds. That's what they're there for--to beat the other team.

"The anticipation. That's the worst thing," Rivers says as his team drills. "Hey! Don't get too tired!"

After the drill Scott McGuire says, "I feel a lot better now. But I do have about 15 more butterflies."

7:20 PM

Rivers is at the blackboard back in the field house. The team watches and listens intently.

"Our first offensive play is going to be fullback at four on one, but we're going to check 30, check 30. Got that?"

"Yes sir!"

"One final thing now," Rivers says. "Mark this down somewhere because it's true. Whoever has the best kicking game is going to win. I promise.

"I want to keep them in a hole. Make them punt. Then we'll take it down and in for a score.

"All right. Let's have our prayer."

The team gathers close near the door and repeats the Lord's Prayer.

7:25 PM

The Panthers crowd in back of the giant poster stretched between the north and uprights.

The keg of TNT is packed as tight as it can get. The fuse which flickered so slowly all afternoon finally burns short. You can almost hear it spew.

"I want to see how they operate with their backs up against the wall in a big football game," Rivers tells the players. There is no hiding the excitement in his voice. "I honestly feel like we're going to win."

Rivers believes truly in his words. So do the players. You can almost hear the goosebumps break out on their bodies.

The fuse reaches the keg.

"They have never had to play from behind. I want to see some asses knocked!"

The Pelham Panthers crash through the goal posts, exploding in unison with a throaty roar.

Somebody wins. Somebody loses. That's football.

Aftermath

Pelham played Thompson a tough, hard-fought football game before an overflow crowd of spectators. The Panthers were up for the game. It meant the world to them. They wanted a win and wanted it badly.

But they weren't the only team that spent the afternoon psyching themselves up. Thompson, too, was ready. An Thompson, too, was tough.

When the clock ran out the scoreboard had only three points showing. They belonged to Thompson. Steve Smitherman booted a field goal with 6:20 left in the first half.

Coach Rivers prediction rang hauntingly true. The kicking game told the story.

After the game the faces of the Pelham players told a story, too: That of the team that got so high for the game, that when they lost they had a long, long way to fall.

Another come-from-behind victory

Vincent downs Montevallo

Vincent ran its record to 2-0 over Montevallo last Friday night. The Jackets have defeated Montevallo for two straight years and both victories were come-from-behind affairs.

The Jackets have come to expect a tough contest from Montevallo and last Friday was no exception as the Bulldogs played one of their best games of the year, only to see Vincent got tough in the late going and scored two touchdowns to win the game 21 to 15.

The game might have also proved itself to be a landmark as one of the most ferocious hits in high school football, that came on a kickoff late in the first half. Montevallo's Clay Cardone was cold-cocked by Vincent's Cecil Ford. The game was halted several minutes while Cardone was revived.

Vincent came from behind to win the game, but as Coach Gary Garrett said later, "We both made enough mistakes to lose two football games." Vincent turned the ball over five times, two of those giving Montevallo scoring opportunities.

Montevallo drove downfield late in the first quarter only to be halted by the Vincent defense. On fourth down, Montevallo attempted a coffin-corner kick and bounced in the middle of the field inside Vincent's five yard line.

On the Jackets' second play, Rodney Driggers mishandled a pitch, fumbling in the endzone with a teammate recovering and giving Montevallo a safety.

In the second quarter, Steve Melsoni picked up a Vincent fumble and returned it ten yards to Vincent's 27 yard line. It took the Bulldogs nine plays to turn the miscue into a touchdown though. With first and goal from the three, Montevallo ran four plays before cracking the Jackets defense. Clay Cardone carried for the touchdown. Jeff Hall booted the PAT making the score 9-0.

Vincent got one touchdown before the half, marching 72 yards in 8 plays for the score. Quarterback James Oden passed 22 yards to Tony Abbott for the touchdown with Rodney Driggers adding the PAT to make the score 9 to 7.

The third quarter saw both teams fail to move the ball. Two fumbles, two interceptions and two punts were the exchanges between the teams.

Montevallo got rolling in the fourth quarter, driving 57 yards in 12 plays. David Melsoni handed off to Wade Bice at the goal line, but the ball popped loose on Bice's back and Melsoni dove on top to recover the ball and fall into the endzone. Hall's PAT went wide making the score 15 to 7, with 9:38 left in the game.

Dwight Spradley returned the ensuing kickoff to Montevallo's 48 yard line and from their the Jackets went to work, snapping the ball seven times before crossing the goal line. Sidney Yowe sped 10 yards for the score. The two-point conversion attempt at tying the score failed and Montevallo still lead 15 to 13.

Vincent took advantage of a Montevallo fumble on the kickoff, recovering the ball on the Bulldogs' 32 yard line. The Bulldogs almost held off the Vincent attempt, but on fourth and 11, Oden scrambled out of the pocket and ran 23 yards to the Montevallo 10 yard line. On the next play, Spradley scooted the rest of the way for the touchdown. Vincent then faked a PAT and tried to run the ball, but fumbled into the endzone. A Vincent player alertly recovered the loose pigskin for the two-points, making the final score 21-15.

Montevallo had one final chance at scoring, but a fumble ended the opportunity and Vincent claimed the win.

Montevallo travels to Winterboro this week in the key area contest. If Montevallo wins, the Area race will be thrown into a three way tie with the Bulldogs receiving all of Winterboro's tiebreaking points.

"Mathematically we're not out of it yet" Coach Richard Gilliam told the Reporter.

Vincent faces a tough group of Panthers from pelham this Friday night in Vincent. "They're tough as nails" Garrett said of opposition.

Collects cash

"I've only been to three football games in my life" exclaimed Mrs. Eastis who picked up her reward for a perfect pick on last week's Football Cash. This week's entry blank is on page B-12.

Football Cash!

"I don't care a thing about football. I just filled it out on a lark. It must be luck or something. This is the biggest surprise of my life!"

Those were the comments of Mrs. G.H. Eastis of Wilsonville Monday morning, when called by the Reporter. She had a perfect pick on last week's Football Cash, correctly picking 12 out of 12 games.

What makes her predictions so lucky was the upsets in college and professional football that she correctly predicted.

Making no money but correctly picking 10 winners were Marlin Brasher of Sterrett and Willie Lacey of Calera. Twenty contestants picked nine winners in last week's Football Cash.

This week's entry to Football Cash is on Page B-12. Try your luck. As Mrs. Eastis found out, you don't have to be a wizard to win cash.

Thompson outlasts Childersburg 7 to 6 in defensive extravaganza

"We're lucky that we were only behind 6 to 0" coach Larry Simmons said of the Childersburg game. "They have a good football team and are by far the most physical team we have played."

Thompson saw Childersburg break for a touchdown early in the second quarter, combining three long runs with the last a 25 yarder for the touchdown. The PAT attempt went wide leaving the score 6 to 0.

That's the way the game stood at halftime as both teams' offenses tried without success to penetrate the defense. "It was a defensive standoff" Simmons commented.

In the final minutes of the third quarter, Thompson started rolling, with David Cofer and Randy Anderson nudging the ball downfield. Cofer connected 25 yards with Mark Gamble for the Warriors only touchdown in two games. Steve Smitherman broke the tie with a successful PAT which put Thompson ahead 7 to 6.

The win gave Thompson its seventh in a row with three games remaining on the 1979 season and all of them tough ones. The Warriors take this week off before culminating the season against Sylacauga, then B.B. Comer and finally against Pell City.

Montevallo welterweights celebrate

The Montevallo Welterweight league will hold its homecoming this Saturday. A parade through Montevallo will start at 1 p.m.

Football games will begin at 5 p.m. at Fisher Stadium with the crowning of the homecoming queens following the first game. The Montevallo teams will play Calera in the homecoming contest.

Bicycle club plans event

The Birmingham Bicycle Club will hold its 7th annual "Century Run", beginning and ending at the Shelby County High School parking lot next Sunday.

A non-competitive event, the Century course is a figure six from Columbiana to Westover via C. 47, then an up-and-back stretch to Pell City, then to Wilsonville, Shelby, and finally back to Columbiana. Rides on various parts of the course vary from 25 to 125 miles.

This figure six has more or less been permanently established as the Birmingham Bicycle Club's preferred century run because of the flat to rolling terrain and absence of any really steep hills. Generally light traffic is also a plus.

Organizers' cars and "Sag Wagons" will patrol the route to offer assistance and refreshments.

The ride begins at 7:30 a.m., to take advantage of morning cool temperatures before solar heat becomes a factor.

Anyone wanting to become a serious cyclist, or at least look at some, is invited to attend the event.

Last Sunday, the Alabama Wheelmen held a road race beginning at Genery Gap in West Shelby County.

About 25 wheelmen from several adjoining states participated in the race. Italian racing bicycles were the favored bikes of the winning cyclists.

Coosa Valley coaches confer with their quarterback last Friday night at homecoming for the Rebels. A jammed house witnessed the contest which saw the Rebels put on another good performance.

Chelsea falls again, Winterboro victor

The Hornets are not without their problems, but the biggest one seems to be the competition. "We're catching folks with senior ball clubs" coach Richard Conkle said. "We're young and inexperienced and don't have the speed which other teams have."

The Hornets fell to powerful Area leader Winterboro last Friday night by a score of 53 to 8.

Chelsea's lone score came in the second quarter on a 50 yard drive. Victor Smith tallied on a 15 yard run. Keith McCullars added the two-point conversion on an option play which at that time made the score 8 to 30.

Everything went Winterboro's way the first period, scoring 24 points. The first touchdown came on the kickoff, and the second was set up by a bad snap on Chelsea's first punt. The Bulldogs added six points in the second quarter, 16 in the third and 7 in the fourth to route the Hornets.

Chelsea has yet to win a game, losing six straight and scoring only 16 points offensively.

"We're still trying, the attitude's good and they're still hustling. I don't think you can ask more than that", Conkle said of his team.

This week Chelsea hosts unbeaten Billingsley, a team which leads the single A Area. The following week will be homecoming for Chelsea which plays Thorsby.

UM sponsors high school night

Attention, high school volleyball coaches! Here's your chance to make a little money for your volleyball program.

Beverly Warren, women's volleyball coach at the University of Montevallo, has announced that her team will hold a "High School Appreciation Night" on Thursday, Nov. 25. The Lady Falcons will host Tuskegee Institute at 7 p.m. that evening in what is always an exciting match.

All high school volleyball teams are invited to attend, at no charge, and the team with the largest contingent will be presented with a check for $25, compliments of the University of Montevallo women's volleyball team.

"This is something we want to do that we feel will benefit both our program and high schools," Coach Warren stated. "We always have tough matches with Tuskegee, so it should be an enjoyable evening, and we want to encourage a good turnout. Plus, the money is our opportunity to help out with a high school program, because the high schools have certainly contributed to our success with some of the players they have produced."

Another Eagle touchdown

Calera fans just can't stop from helping out the referees as these fans signal a touchdown before Bill Seay rushes over the goal line. The Eagles won another last Friday in Thorsby and this week take on Verbena.

Calera claims fifth win of year

The Eagles got their fifth win of the season last Friday in Thorsby. Calera manhandled the Rebels 35 to 0, with Bill Seay scoring three touchdowns.

Calera started lighting the scoreboard right after the kickoff. On the second play of the game, Seay burst for a 67 yard touchdown run. Johnny Ryan hit his first of five successful PATs.

After holding Thorsby to three downs, Calera readied to receive the punt, but a bad snap forced the punter to scramble and attempt a pass. Senior Fran Blanchard intercepted the desparation throw and ran the ball 27 yards for another Calera touchdown. Ryan's PAT made the score 14-0.

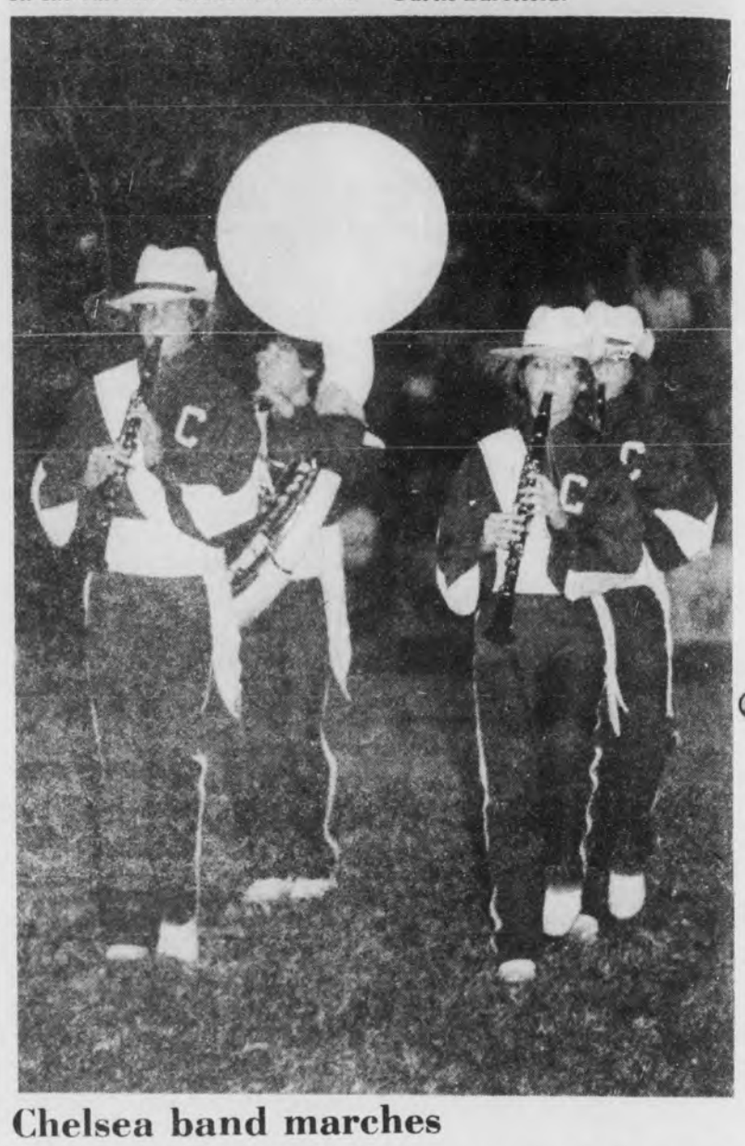
On the Eagle's second possession in the first quarter, Seay scored again. This time at the conclusion of a 54 yard drive. Seay's six yard run tallied six more points for Calera.

The third possession for Calera was also another scoring opportunity. Seay raced 25 yards for the touchdown and Ryan added the PAT making the score 28 to 0 at the half.

In the third quarter Calera added the game's final points as the second team offense marched 28 yards. Mike Roberson intercepted a Rebel pass and then got the call on a five yard run for the touchdown. Ryan put the finishing touch on the victory

Calera travels this week to play Verbena which has lost only one game, that one the undefeated Billingsley. "They are strong" coach Danny Alverson told the Reporter. "They have an explosive offense which scores a lot of points and they're tough on defense. We're expecting quite a battle."

In last week's game against Thorsby, Seay gained 157 yards on six carries. Blanchard tallied 54 yards and Ryan 35. Leaders on defense were Dale Smith, Lloyd King, Jeff Stewart and Curtis Barefield.



Chelsea band marches

Chelsea's band has made great progress over the past several years and this year boasts the biggest band yet. Although they may not number as many as other bands around, they have as much if not more 'heart' in the music and have the support of the faculty and students as evidenced every time they take the field.

Wildcats inched out in final seconds by Pell City 23 to 21

The Wildcats of Shelby County left Pell City stunned, last Friday night. The Cats saw Pell City toss a 51 yard pass for a touchdown as time expired in the game for the winning score.

"Our kids played their guts out" Coach Mark Bradley said of the contest. "They deserved to win. They know they whipped the best defensive team we've played this year."

Shelby County took an early lead over Pell City after recovering a fumble on the 30 yard line in the second quarter. On the second play, quarterback Dan Head tossed 30 yards to Jeff Keenum for the touchdown. Head added the PAT making the score 7 to 0.

Pell City got points on the board late in the half with a field goal, making the score 7 to 3 at the half.

After the break, Pell City came back to the field and grinded out a 79 yard drive that consumed eight minutes and counted for six points. With the PAT, Shelby County trailed 10 to 7.

That Pell City lead didn't last long. After the kickoff, Arthur Johnson broke the second play for a 73 yard touchdown run. Head's PAT put the Wildcats back in front 14 to 0 possession, they marched 46 yards for a touchdown. The big play of the drive was a 32 yard pass which gave fullback Guy Mitchell the short run for the goal line. With 10:55 left in the game, Shelby County lead 21 to 10.

That lead held up till three minutes remained in the game. Johnson fumbled on the 30 yard line setting up a Pell City score with 2:06 left in the game and the score 21 to 16.

The Wildcats started running out the clock to hold on to the win. With fourth down and two from Pell City's 33 yard line, Johnson got the call. Struggling for the first down, the freshman had the ball knocked from his hands with Pell City recovering with just 38 seconds left in the game.

On the first play the homecoming celebrating team gained 14 yards to the 49 yard line. The second play was a pass out of bounds to stop the clock with only three seconds.

The winning toss came after the buzzer had sounded. Pell City took the snap as the horn sounded, the quarterback threw as far as he could downfield. The receiver caught the ball amidst a host of Shelby County defenders, making a spectacular effort grabbing the throw that was short, falling into the endzone with the winning score. The PAT only served to rub the loss harder into the Wildcats.

The Wildcats are 3-3 on the year, and this week travel to Childersburg to play in the Tigers' homecoming. "They're huge and do a lot of different things that can cause preparation problems. I think it comes down to which team can get ready" Bradley said.

Childersburg also lost a close contest last week and now has a record identical to Shelby County.

Bulldogs defense moves in Montevallo's defense struggled against the tough Yellowjackets all night but couldn't hold back Coach Gary Garrett's crew.

Richard's Picks

by Richard Crosby

I had all the games picked right but the Shelby County game last week and in reality, it was also a correct prediction. This week I should bat 1000 so here's the scoop.

Shelby County at Childersburg-The Wildcats suffered a tough loss last week and it seems like the odds are not in their favor at seeking revenge against the powerful Tigers. It may be close but Childersburg has the upper hand. Prediction: Wildcats 12, Tigers 28.

Pelham at Vincent-The Panthers are tough crew and after licking their wounds for a week will be ready to get win number four for the year. This week Vincent gets knocked off by a big score. Prediction: Pelham 33, Vincent 8.

Montevallo at Winterboro-The Bulldogs from Shelby County meet the Bulldogs of Talladega County and the outcome will be elementary for Winterboro. They're undefeated and the same will be true after the game. Prediction: Montevallo 13, Winterboro 39.

Billingsley at Chelsea-The Hornets just never get a rest game and it feels bad to seem them lose another but that's what's going to happen Friday night. Chelsea will put up a valient fight but Billingsley is the tougher of the two. Prediction: Chelsea 8, Billingsley 53.

Calera at Verbena-The speed of this week's opponent makes them a dangerous one for the Eagles and the outcome will determine how important the Billingsley game will be. Sorry to say it won't have much impact as Calera loses its playoff hopes this week. Prediction: Calera 26, Verbena 37.

Methodist pastor Dan Kitchens (l) and Dr. Harry Phillips look at how the sanctuary of the church will appear after renovation.

In Columbiana

Methodists plan $90,000 project

by Bert Seaman

After talking about renovating their sanctuary for the past two years, Columbiana Methodists have gotten down to brass tacks on the project which is expected to cost $90,000.

At the Sunday night service Sept. 23, the congregation voted to go ahead with the work which will begin in a couple of weeks.

Building committee chairman Dr. Harry Phillips says that the church has already raised one third of the total cost of the project and he anticipates that another third will be raised by the time the work is completed. The church will borrow the remainder of the money.

Pointing out that the renovation will enhance the appearance of the worship area, pastor Dan Kitchens explained that the chancel will have a more "open" look and the choir area will be enlarged.

New lighting fixtures to match the existing colonial type central chandelier and new carpeting will also be put down in the sanctuary.

Additional wood trim will be added around the existing stained glass windows and the entrance area of the church will be lightened by putting stained glass windows in what is now a solid wall.

Another change in the narthex will be made by putting a wooden balustrade on the steps leading up to the balcony.

Kitchens emphasized that the colonial structure of the church will be maintained and he said the original peg hardwood floors will be refinished.

The work is expected to take approximately three months. And during that time services will be held in the fellowship hall.

Alabaster locksmith sells security

It's one of the most aggravating things in the world. You're standing outside your locked car, and your keys are dangling from the ignition inside.

The situation, however, is not as desperate as you might think. Simply call 663-2910-that's the number of John's Locksmith and Pawn Shop in Alabaster.

"I can unlock anything with four wheels on it," says locksmith and owner John Burlson. "I can make a key for just about anything that locks, and ignition keys pose no problems at all."

For further convenience, John's Locksmith offers 24 hour, seven days a week service calls.

That means that any time you have problems with car keys, house keys (even old skeleton keys), or locks that need locking right away, but won't, the solution is as close as the telephone.

Another common problem with keys is having replacements or extras made that won't fit or work. In fact, many people have come to expect a certain amount of this when they go to dime stores, etc., to have their keys made.

But being a professional locksmith, Burlson makes them right--the first time. He has to. It's his reputation.

The key to making good keys, says Burlson, is having good machinery and using it correctly. He says most keys will work if they're within 3/1000 of an inch. Just to make sure, Burlson checks each key with a micrometer.

As an added convenience to customers ordering a quanity of keys, such as a dozen he made recently for a new building at Oak Mountain, John Burlson throws in a couple of extra to boot. "That's to keep them happy," he explains.

Incidentally, he once made 100 keys for a swimming pool lock, and not one of them was returned because it didn't work.

The best part of John Burlson's key work is the price--50¢ for duplicating a single-sided key. "That's cheaper than anywhere in Alabama," he says proudly.

Burlson carries a complete line of Weslock products, and deadbolts, as well as parts for most locks. In addition, he can change locks to different keys to prevent having to buy new locks, and he does minor safe work such as changing combinations.

The bottom line to John's Locksmith and Pawn Shop is selling you security.

But as the name clearly implies, John's is more than a locksmith. The pawn shop, located in the same building, offers good buys on used stereos, TV's, watches, appliances, rings, musical instruments, rifles, shotguns and handguns. He also sells new handguns and new knives.

"You can expect to buy good, used merchandise for ½ or less of its original price," says Burlson. "I have handguns for under $100. And everything is throughly checked to see that it fully works."

John's Locksmith and Pawnshop is located at 108 Main Street, U.S. 31, South. The shop is open 10-6 Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, 9-1 on Saturdays, and closed Wednesday.

But when you find yourself in a pinch, you can always call him at 663-2910.

Library displays old bottles

Anyone hasn't dug through old dumps and around the sites of deserted homeplaces to find old bottles doesn't know what a fascinating hobby it can be.

It's easy to get hooked on collecting the old glass containers say families who have been involved for years in searching for the beautifullv hued and often odd shaped bottles.

One such family lives in Chelsea and bottles from their collection can be seen all this month at the Columbiana Library.

Mrs. Clara Brasher noted that the library has been particularly helpful in enabling her to identify the bottles and old glass the family has acquired, by ordering books on the subject.

One of the items Mrs. Brasher has on display is a vase which had been passed down through her family. After one of the specially ordered books on Rookware came into the library, Brasher found that the marking on the bottom of her vase meant that it had been made in 1915 and the name of the artist was also revealed.

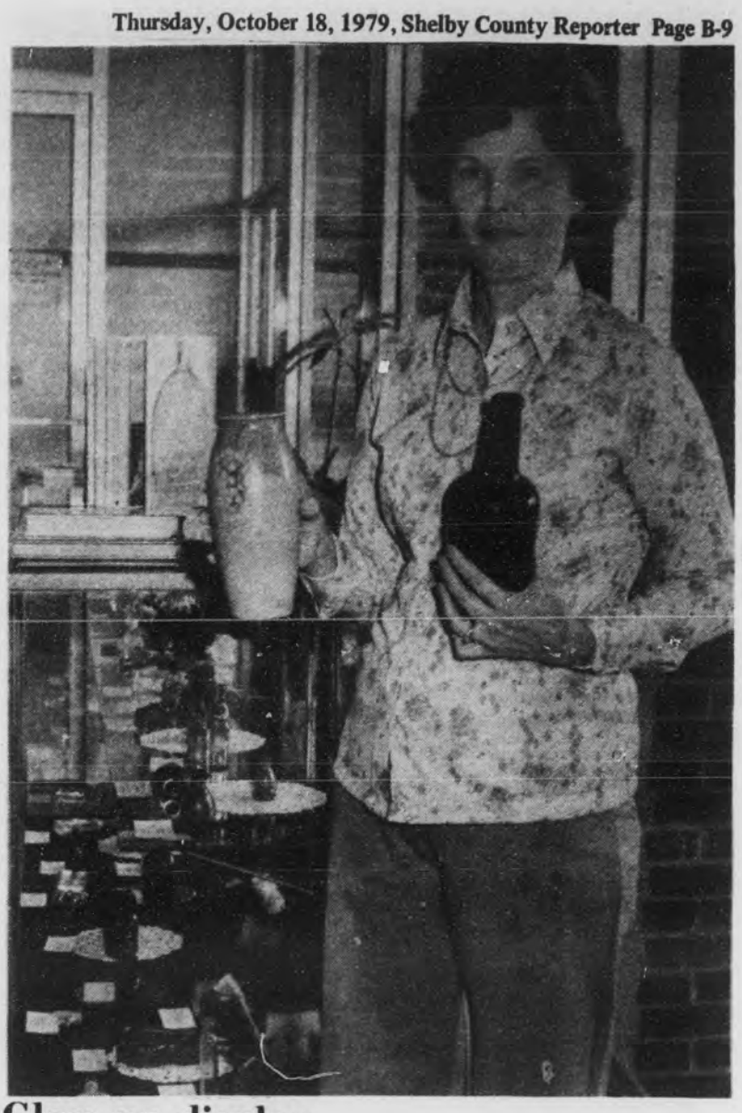
Although most of the bottles were found around the Chelsea area, one of the glass containers which held a remedy for kidney and liver ailments, was found in an old well in Tampa, FL.

There are several three sided bottles which contained poison and some figural bottles such as a Little Beau Peep. The containers range in size from tiny vails to fairly good sized bottles which held wine.

One of the Bunsteads worm syrup was made in 1855. Other bottles contained such substances as meat juice, cod liver oil, snuff, ink, and bitters.

The library is open from 12-8 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays and from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

One of the oldest bottles in Brahser's collection was made in 1772. A bottle of Bumsteads worm syrup was made in 1855. Other bottles contained such substances as meat juice, cod liver oil, snuff, ink, and bitters.



Glass on display

Clara Brasher holds an old family vase and one of the thousands of bottles she and her family have found on digging expeditions over the years.

Deceased DAR members honored

DAR markers were placed on the graves of Mrs. Willis Lyman and Dr. Katherine Vickery by Mrs. John Barron, Mrs. Jack Ward, Mrs. H.Z. Meadows, Mrs. George Seier, Mrs. Samuel Ash and Miss Eloise Meroney.

DAR places grave markers

In recognition of their contributions to the local chapter and to the state organization, official DAR markers were placed Monday at the graves of Mrs, Willis H. Lyman and Dr. Katherine Vickery.

The pilgrimage to the Montevallo Cemetery by members of the David Lindsay Chapter DAR followed a meeting at the Forbes House where Dr. Lucille Griffith served as hostess.

The chapters new regent, Mrs, Jack L. Ward, conducted the first fall meeting and placed the markers on the graves.

Mrs. Lyman was a charter member of the chapter, served as chapter regent, treasurer of the Alabama Society DAR, and chairman of its resolutions committee.

In addition to serving as regent, Dr. Vickery represented the state society at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Tuscaloosa.

DAR marker was placed at the grave of Mrs. T. H. Napier in 1972. She was a national officer and and an honorary life state regent.

New members of the David Lindsay chapter are Mrs. Harry Atchison of Columbiana and Mrs. Forrest Holly of Montevallo.

Local police complete course

Robert Eugene Kiker Jr. and Jesse Charles Payne, both of Montevallo, were among the graduates of the 42nd session of The University of Alabama Law Enforcement Academy.

Commencement speaker was Bill R. Myers, chief of the Birmingham Police Department.

Kiker is with the Calera Police Department and Payne is employed by the Montevallo Police Department.

UM groundskeeper to be nat'l keynote speaker

The director of grounds and horticulturist at the University of Montevallo, Sherrell White of Thorsby, will be one of the keynote speakers at the National Institute on Park and Grounds Management in Nashville, Oct. 31.

White will speak on managing a grounds department to professional park and campus landscape directors from all over the nation.

A former high school and technical school teacher, White developed the first technical school horticulture department in the state at George Rogers Community Vocational Center in Gardendale, and his course outlines and objectives are still used statewide.

The UM official has worked as a consultant to several landscape companies and cities and has also won several state and national horticulture awards.

MHS musicians win 3 trophies at band contest

The Montevallo High School Troubadours had it "all together" again last Saturday when they competed at the First Annual Midfield Alabama Marching Band Festival.

Judges liked the way the MHS group looked and were expecially complimentary on the quality of the band's music.

All three of the judges gave the Troubadours superior ratings, and both drum major Danny Delage and the Majorette corps also received marks of superior and the trophies that went with them.

The color guard were graded excellent in the competition at which 22 bands appeared.

In their taped remarks, judges called the Troubadours a "high stepping, nice looking group." One referred to the sound as "powerful," and a comment was also made on the "originality" of the music.

DID YOU KNOW?

Alabama Power started researching alternative energy sources in the mid-1940'S

Because of today's energy shortage, many companies are researching alternative energy sources. The initial United States experiment in underground coal gasification was first suggested and carried out by Alabama Power more than 30 years ago. And today, we participate in many forms of energy research, like our solar-powered office in Montevallo, all aimed at developing economical sources of energy.

unty adopts budget
nearly $6 million

by Marcia M. Sears

The Shelby County Commission took a new tack this year in writing the annual budget, which totals nearly $600,000 more than last year. This year's budget is $5,837,980. Last year the budget was for $5,238,991.

The new budget has undergone a major bookkeeping change and assigns actual costs to all departments. This means each department using county facilities is billed for its share of utilities, office space and janitorial service, in addition to salaries and equipment.

Commissioners spent several meeting periods going over the requests from each county department, but because they did not know, and still are not sure of the amount of income they can expect from taxes this year, the budget hearings were sometimes painful.

The county Tax Assessor could not provide exact income figures, because of the confusion over tax reappraisal.

No salary increases were included in the basic budget, but if the county receives enough or more income than budgeted, a round of 7 percent cost of living raises will be given to county employees.

Commissioners hope to avoid all the special requests for new purchases that have come to them in the past by using this budget method. They are insisting that each department must live within its budget, and any unusual expenses must be absorbed in that budget.

The sums budgeted for each of the county's various functions for the fiscal year 1979-1980 are:

Jail, $488,038; Sheriff, $759,808; Highway, $1,855,750; Prisoner Foreman, $27,555; Probate Judge, $220,005; Tax Collector, $75,306; Tax Assessor, $178,597; County Commission, $204,251;

Data Processing, $156,731; Planning Commission, $22,553; Health Department, $91,829; Pensions & Security, $24,288; Mental Health, $30,710;

Day Care Services, Inc., $8,000; Library, $61,548; Soil & Water Conservation, $10,279; Forestry Commission, $29,006; Beer Decals & Inspection, $349,430; Extension Service, $40,003;

A.S.C., $4,668; F.H.A., $3,780; Board of Registrars, $8,583; Tax Equalization Board, $6,350; Program on Aging, $12,575;

Birmingham Regional Planning Commission, $5,649; Aviation, $7,134; Civil Defense, $53,871; Animal Shelter, $17,865; Solid Waste, $209,078; Elections, $37,560; Circuit Clerk Office, $31,711;

Circuit & District Courts, $63,253; District Attorney, $27,736; Board of Education, $31,340; Juvenile & Insane, $61,237; Food Stamp, $3,268; Coroner, $7,024; Notes Payable, $547,569; In House Reappraisal Maint., $89,265; Index Fee Fund, $43,144.

Hysteria

The dictionary defines hysteria as wild, uncontrolled outbreaks of excitement or feelings. And at the Hysterical Society's fourth annual haunted house, that's exactly what's in store for you, what with cute surprises like this ape hiding around nearly every dark corner. The house, located next to the Pelham Cemetery on Bearden Road, is open weekdays from 7-10, Friday and Satruday from 7-12, Sunday from 8-10, and on Halloween from 7 til all spooks have been laid to rest. Proceeds go to pay for the Pelham football stadium. (Photo by Moore)

Gas burglars leave lake rescue unit dry

by Reporter Staff

A burglary within the last four weeks has left the Lay Lake Rescue Unit literally out of gas.

Three gasoline tanks were stolen from the Rescue Unit's boat, and all the gasoline was taken, and was siphoned from the Unit's three trucks.

"If we'd have been called out we'd have been in a mess" is the way Unit spokesman O.J. McCall described it to the Reporter.

The men discovered the theft on a routine examination of the Rescue Unit's equipment last week. The boats and trucks are kept within locked fences near Shelby. The Unit had not been called out on a rescue for some time so the men are not sure when the theft occurred. Value of the stolen gas and tanks was set at $215.

Members of the volunteer unit are now soliciting individuals and businesses for financial help to replace the stolen items. Sheriff's officers are investigating the theft.

Rezoning hearing set for Montevallo area

The request for a change in zoning near Montevallo's Hidden Valley subdivision was presented to the Montevallo City Council, Monday night.

The request originated with William Surface, owner of the property, and has been approved by the city's zoning board.

Council members accepted the request and set a hearing date of November 5, at 7 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall. The hearing will give interested residents an opportunity to express themselves for or against the proposed zoning change.

The proposed change would affect an area now zoned for agriculture and would change the zoning from agriculture to R-2 and R-3. A strip of ten acres is proposed to be changed to R-2 the remaining land would be changed to R-3. The ten acre strip would lie between the present Hidden Valley Subdivision and Spring Creek Road.

Hidden Valley is presently zoned R-1.

R-1 is for single family dwellings. R-2 permits multiple family dwellings. R-3 permits apartments, condominiums, row houses, fraternities and sororities.

In commenting on the proposed changes, council members noted that there is a housing shortage in Montevallo as evidenced by the number of faculty and staff members of the University of Montevallo who are obliged to live outside Montevallo and commute from as far away as Tuscaloosa and Birmingham.

In other business, council members denied an application for an on-premises beer license for a proposed game room in the Vallo Plaza shopping center. In denying the request filed by Rita and W.C. Sloan, council members noted that all the existing businesses in the shopping center protested granting the license.

An application for an off-premises license was approved. This application is for Hamm's Humble Station located on Spring Creek Road.

Both applications were forwarded to the Alabama Alcohol Beverage Control Board in Montgomery.

Ken Cochran, a UM student representing the school's Student Government Association, appeared before the council to inquire about city rates on natural gas. City Clerk Don Hughes explained that the university is the largest user of gas on the municipal system. Because the volume of gas used by the university is so large, the rate is about half the rate paid by the average residential consumer, according to Hughes.

Councilman Grady Parker,

Looking up

Drilling rigs can be startlingly tall, as this view from the platform base illustrates. Pulleys, lines, scaffolding, and a series of tubes to pipe mud down the hole dominate the scene. Although it seems like a long way from the ground to the top of the rig, it is at least 5 times further down to the bit.

Officials seek to land industries for county

What lures to use, how to use them and how to land the best ones.

This was the subject. But, it wasn't a meeting of the Isaac Walton League. It was a meeting of some 50 top Shelby County and municipal officials.

The lures and the "best ones" do not refer to fish, but to industry.

The meeting, sponsored by the Shelby County Rural Development Committee, was held Wednesday in the Community Services Building in Columbiana. It featured a panel of five specialists outlining ways communities attract industry.

J. Claude Smith, Westover, presided at the day long meeting and outlined reasons why new and expanded industry is essential to Shelby County.

"Shelby County is growing like a weed," Smith said, "growth is coming no matter what and we need to be aware of this and keep and eye on it," he added. "If we don't watch out," he said, "we're going to become Birmingham's bedroom community and we need industry of our own, if for nothing else, to provide a better tax base to provide the necessary services for our residential areas."

"The idea behind having more industry is that it brings in more jobs," said V. Wilson Lee, economist with the Alabama Cooperative Extension Service of Auburn University.

For every 100 new jobs that are created when an industry moves into a town, Lee said, retail sales in the area go up about a half million dollars.

The most recent census figures show there are at least 2,000 more commuters to Birmingham than from Birmingham. All panelists agreed that these 2,000 people could be working in Shelby County, if there were more industries here to hold them.

Ted Levi of Alabama Power Company's industrial development office, told the county officials that there are more than 700 factors involved in attracting new industry to any community. Three of the most important factors, according to Levi are: determine what kind of an industry would fit into the community; use existing industries to help attract the potential new firm; advertise the community's availability through newspapers, banks, real estate companies and public utilities.

Thomas Ryan, also from the Alabama Power Company said the job of landing a new industry is so big and complicated that no one person or one business can do it. "It takes a cooperative ef-

Snowden tells club budget is 'bare bones'

Probate Judge Tommy Snowden announced adoption of a 'bare-bones county budget', when he addressed the Columbiana Kiwanis Club on October 18. He said the budget was worked out with the heads of departments and approved by the County Commission. Financing was less certain he said, as estimates of tax income had varied from a 53 percent increase to a 20 percent decrease from last year. A priority review could produce changed estimates of income, possibly forcing some revision of the budget, he noted.

On other subjects, Judge Snowden confirmed plans for a lawsuit against the builders of the jail, based on evidence of faulty construction. He was pleased with progress at the county airport, stating that Lear Jet service would be available there, and that improvements in facilities would be privately financed from rent offsets.

He supported proposals to reactivate a defunct Industrial Development Board as well as other plans to coordinate countywide efforts to bring new production jobs into local communities.

Sheriff James Glasgow has agreed to talk with the Columbiana Kiwanians at its next meeting on Thursday, October 25.

Part time bailiffs ask pay raise

The part time bailiffs want a raise.

There are four part time bailiffs that serve the courts in Shelby County and three of them appeared before the County Commision Monday asking for an increase in their pay, which is now $20 per day. They work about 50-60 days a year.

Alvin Stinson of Columbiana was spokesman for the group which included Kiah Mitchell and Herman Whitfield. Stinson said he is aware that the state is supposed to pay the costs of operating the courts, which include the bailiffs, but that no raise had been provided in the recent court changeover.

He said the bailiffs had taken up the matter with State Representatives Sonny Moore and J.T. "Jabo" Waggoner and they had suggested taking it up with the Commission.

Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden said he thought it was a matter for the state legislature, but he and the other members of the Commission were unanimous in support of an increase in pay.

County United Way at half-way point

Shelby Countians are doing their part to make the 1979 Greater Birmingham United Way Campaign a success, county chairman Jim Vickrey said today.

"We are at the half-way point in the drive, and so are the collections," he said, "putting us right in step with the tri-county effort."

To date, $84,988 of the $160,185 Shelby County goal has been pledged or contributed -- about 53.7 per cent. The entire campaign (Jefferson, Shelby, Walker Counties) total is now at $4,369,957, or 54.0 per cent of the goal of $8,071,729.

"Our local team leaders are doing a splendid job," Dr. Vickrey said. "And our friends and neighbors in Shelby County are responding in a commendable way.

"I'm especially pleased to be able to report that the public employees section of our county-wide efforts has already reached the 121 per cent-of-goal level."

The campaign began in late September and is expected to end this month.

Valium vendor convicted

A Montevallo man was found guilty in Circuit Court this week of selling drugs.

The jury brought in a guilty verdict against Walter Taylor who had been accused of selling three valium tablets for 75 cents apiece.

No sentence has been set as yet.

Howard Sims was foreman of the jury in the case. Other members of the jury were: Frank Eugene Game, Alice Kitches Sikes, Terry Daniel Linholm, Loren Dale Ford, Norman Dale Weaver, James Rankin, James Davis Ledbetter, Anne Marie Miranda, Anita Linville Yates, Edith Vick and Donna Lovelady.

fort on the part of the entire town," he added.

The area east of Highway I-65, according to Ryan, lends itself toward residential development. The area west of I-65 is more suited to commercial industrial growth. County and municipal officials should capitalize on these natural divisions, he said.

The two Power Company officials and representatives of the Southern Railway, the Seaboard Coast Line and the Alabama Development office all pledged their assistance in helping the county or any of the municipalities attract new industry.

Shelby County Commission Chairman Thomas A. Snowden, Jr., agreed to take steps to produce a brochure regarding the county's plus factors and stated that he would take steps to re-establish the county's Industrial Development Board.

chairman of the city's police and fire committee, reported that the fire department's snorkel unit is now back in service. The snorkel spent last week in St. Joseph, Mo., undergoing repairs. Parker noted that the Snorkel Company made all repairs at no cost to the city. The truck was driven to Missouri by firemen Joe McGaughy, Karl Perkins and Sidney McGaughy.

Clerk Don Hughes outlined progress on a current project to upgrade roads in Montevallo's Evansville area. Hughes told council members that nearly half the work has been completed and that all roads will be fourteen feet wide with at least a twelve foot running surface. Culverts are being installed and when complete the roads will have a five degree crown and will have an all-weather surface. "Work is almost complete," he said, "on the so called upper Evansville Road." Preliminary work on the lower road will begin this week.

In other reports Hughes stated that $8,000 in labor was spent in upgrading the municipal cemetery during the summer months. .

Hughes also stated that Park and Recreation Director Ott Knight hopes to be able to employ at least two CETA wokers for the new recreation building and the park.

Montevallo natives named Outstanding Young Women

Diane Lawler and Susan Edfeldt Culpepper, both natives of Montevallo, have recently been notified of their selection as Outstanding Young Women of America.

Culpepper teaches in the Home Ec Department at the University of Montevallo and Lawler is a voice instructor at Jax State University.

After graduating from Montevallo High School, both women attended the University of Montevallo. Lawler went on to pursue musical studies at Converse College in Spartanburg, S.C. where she graduated in 1974.

She was selected to study at the American Institute of Musical Studies in Graz, Austria. When she returned she enrolled at the University of Illinois where she obtained her Master's degree in 1976.

While at Converse, Lawler represented Spartanburg in the Miss South Carolina Beauty Pageant. She was accorded the honor of "Total Performer in Vocal Work," by the National Federation of Music.

After obtaining her degree in elementary education from UM, Culpepper earned her MS in Child Development from Florida State.

In addition to teaching kindergarten at the Child Study Center at UM, she also instructs Child Development classes in the college of Home Economics.

She serves on the campus Justice Council and is advisor for the Student Home Economics Association. An active member of University Baptist Church, Culpepper serves as a deacon and teaches church training classes for pre-schoolers.

Culpepper is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Edfeldt and Lawler's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W.L. Lawler, Jr.

Board of Education adopts $14 million annual budget

The Shelby County Board of Education decided to be cautious in working up their 1979-80 budget due to the uncertainty of the amount of tax money that will be received.

In adopting the $14 million budget last week, it was noted that figures were based on a smaller increase than the county's tax assessor or probate judge have predicted will be taken in.

Superintendent of Education Charles Knowes reported that $2,126,880 was expected from the county, $9,921,464 from the state and $948,369 from the federal government.

Expenses in the budget, which was balanced at $14,372,607.64, include an increase in pay for substitute teachers who hold a teacher's certificate. That expenditure was set at $110,000 while other instructional salaries amounted to a total of $8,602,395.

Under capital outlay, the board approved the purchase of 15 new school buses and an additional bus for handicapped students which came to a total of $279,191.

A fund of $20,250 was set aside to provide financial assistance for the Professional Development Program.

It was pointed out that one of the reasons for the Board's money troubles last year was due to proration and also the failure of enrollment to grow at the rate anticipated by the state.

Because there weren't as many students as expected in the county, school officials said that the local Board paid the salaries of 16 teachers that they had thought state money would cover.

Another item that contributed to the Board's financial difficulties during the past year was the bill from the County Commission for their share of the cost of the statewide property reappraisal program.

Reports of child abuse rising dramatically

Reports of child abuse and neglect to the Department of Pensions and Security are now exceeding 1,200 a month, Commissioner Gary Cooper said today.

Cooper said that reports coming into the state office from the 67 county offices totalled 3,744 for the first quarter of 1979. This represents a more than 25 percent increase in the number of reports received during the same period last year, when 2,975 reports came into the state office's Central Registry.

"Reports of child abuse and neglect have increased tremendously in just the last few years," Cooper said. "In all of 1974, we received only 244 reports as compared to 3,347 in 1976 and 11,011 in 1977, the year in which reports first rose to an average of almost 1,000 a month. In 1978, we received 13,887 reports, and the total will probably be much higher for 1979."

The increase in the number of reports, Cooper explained, does not necessarily mean that child abuse and neglect themselves are on the increase in Alabama, although it is possible that they are. Rather, he said, the increase is more than likely attributable to greater public awareness of the problems and of Pensions and Security's role in dealing with them. A strengthening of Alabama's reporting law four years ago, along with good cooperation from county offices in making reports to the Central Registry, are also important factors.

"We've tried to keep our reporting system very simple and uncomplicated," Cooper added, "and we believe that the ease with which county offices can make reports has contributed to an increase in the number." He said that some states with more complicated reporting systems do not receive nearly the cooperation from their local offices that Pensions and Security does.

Reports of neglect--failure to provide such essentials as food, shelter, and supervision--significantly exceed the number of abuse reports. Also, Pensions and Security is receiving more reports of sexual abuse of very young children than it has received in the past.

"The most serious cases of abuse and neglect occur in children under six years of age," Cooper added. Results of this abuse are often broken bones, black eyes, concussions, scars and bruises.

Under the law, the Commissioner said, Pensions and Security has a responsibility to receive reports of suspected child abuse and neglect, to investigate those reports and to provide protective services when needed. Although every effort is made to keep children and parents together, sometimes removal from the home is the only alternative.

"Some of the services we provide to the family are counseling, day care and foster care," Cooper said. "Even when children must be removed from their own homes, we try to work with the families to prepare them for the time when the children can be brought back home."

Alabama law requires certain groups coming into frequent contact with children--such as teachers, social workers, doctors and nurses--to make reports of suspected child abuse and neglect. Anyone can make a report, either to the county office of the Department of Pensions and Security or a law enforcement authority. Reports are always investigated to determine whether they are founded and whether a need for services is indicated.

County okays new sheriff's cars

The county authorized the purchase of four new automobiles for the sheriff's department Monday. Two cars will come from Strickland Chevrolet and two from Sherman Holland Ford based on low bids. Costs of the automobiles will be assigned to the sheriff's budget, and under the budget, there will not be any additional money for automobiles all year. Chief Deputy James Jones thanked the Commission for agreeing to the purchase.

Under the new federal CETA program, both the sheriff's department and the highway department will be able to hire several CETA workers. Interviews will be underway this week.

One of the first conflicts on departmental billing arose in the County Commission Monday when Engineer Jimmy Ray and Solid Waste Supervisor discussed how to assign landfill costs. Ray's highway department has always been responsible for the machinery and men at the landfills, and often both men and machinery have to be moved to the county chert pit. The problem of how to assign costs to the highway department and the landfill operation fairly caused considerable discussion.

One of the new county bulldozers is being kept at the chert pit most of the time, because it is not needed as badly at the Westover landfill as at the chert pit.

Hours at the county landfills will change with daylight savings time, according to supervisor Carlton Franks. He said the closing times would be set at 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. This means the three landfills will be open from 7 to 6 through the week, from 8-4 on Saturdays and closed on Sundays.

Scavengers have returned to the landfills, and Franks told the Reporter the State Health Department is supposed to provide stricter regulations for the county to follow.

Problems of expense at the county animal shelter were detailed by Engineer Jimmy Ray to the Commission Monday. He said it costs the county an average of $1.25 per animal per day. Law requires that most animals be kept for a week or more before they can be put to sleep.

The county charges an adoption fee of $5, but Ray said there are very few persons who adopt dogs from the shelter.

He suggested raising the fee charged to the cities that use the shelter from $5 to $10 per animal.

Ray noted that in one month, 83 animals had to be put to death. Commissioner Harold Davenport suggested the mayors be contacted before the cost is raised.

Chief Deputy James Jones raised the question to the County Commission Monday as to who should pay for the ambulances that transport bodies to Cooper Green hospital for autopsies. He said there were three such occurrences since May and the bills run from $56 to $60. He said the district attorney is responsible for autopsies, but often deputies must send the bodies on to Cooper Green and cannot wait for formalities. The Commission said it would look into the matter, but assured Jones that the ambulance services would be paid.

Tags for boats are available at the courthouse this year, according to a reminder from State Water Safety Patrol Officer Raymond Webster.

He said it would be helpful for boat owners to bring their registration cards to the probate office when tags are purchased.

He reminds boat owners that the certified boat registration must be aboard each boat now and in the future. In the past, water patrolmen have been issuing warnings if they found boats being operated without registration. But now, he said no matter who is driving the boat, the registration papers should be aboard. If not, citations will be issued.

A further change in the law requires that when anyone buys a used boat, the transfer papers must be prepared within 15 days of the sale, he added.

Good Morning

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

For Dan Head, Good Morning's favorite teenager, who was irked by the way his team lost to Pell City.

Phil Garner started out in the world series by throwing a ball ten feet over the shortstop's head, and ended up as probably the most valuable player in the series.

In sports, you have to keep plugging, taking the good and the bad, and hoping most of it will be good. Maybe this week Lady Luck will tip-toe down your street.

Back of our house, in the tall oaks and sweetgums, the little grey squirrels and dozens of kinds of birds do all the things wild things do to pass the time.

In the top of one sweetgum a swarm of hornets built a nest. It was big enough for a hotel, and looked a lot like a hotel from the ground, although I don't know for certain, since that's as close as I ventured, having been stung by a hornet 60 years ago.

Several people, looking at it, predicted we'd have a cold winter. That the higher the hornets built their houses, the colder the winter would be.

I didn't think too much about it until today when I went over to see Edward Brasher who was home from the hospital. And in their backyard Edward and Ophelia have a hornet's nest on the very bottom limb of a small oak.

Maybe if the weather gets too cold at our house we can spend the winter with them at their house which is, as the crow flies, a little over two miles away.

If you don't know Lawrence Elliott you've missed something pretty special in this world. His wit is as refreshing as a breeze in August, and I guess there's no way he'd lose it, no matter what.

For most folks, it's easy to be witty when the sun's shining, just letting the words tumble out as they go skipping along. But let the rains come and it's a different tale.

But not Lawrence.

He'd been in the hospital a week and suddenly, without warning, he took a turn for the worse. He was in Intensive Care when John Martin, his son-in-law, went in to see him.

"John," he said, fumbling with the tubes running in and out of him, "I'm in one heck of a fix." And then, changing the subject, he added: "Heaven sent that colored boy to Auburn. Right straight from Heaven to our football team."

And tonight, a week later, Lawrence is getting better and better. And that colored boy is getting better and better too. As well as the whole Auburn football team.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

When I left the house Sunday afternoon, I was wearing my son's jeans and my daughter's shirt. But for the first time in ages, I was riding in my own car.

In my family, everything, including our vehicles, get passed around so much it's sometimes difficult to keep track of who has what.

My oldest daughter switched cars with me several weeks ago. I think it was because she needed the trailer hitch on my car. Anyhow, we haven't gotten around to switching back again.

Then on Sunday, my son had to have her station wagon which I've been driving and he left his car for me to drive.

Now the plot thickens. During the afternoon my younger daughter drove up to get my car which her sister has been driving, but it was at another location. So she and her husband went to get it, leaving their car with my oldest daughter.

Follow me so far?

When they arrived back at the house, they loaded up a horse they were taking off for training and invited me to accompany them on their journey. And that's how I happened to get a ride in my car again.

Unfortunately, when we got back home, they were unable to find their car which contained some items my son-in-law needed "first thing" in the morning.

However, I'm happy to report it all worked out all right and their car was returned as dawn broke the next day.

Getting back to my attire, I recently heard someone lament the fact that her husband still had some clothes he had worn in 7th grade.

Well, I admit, it's a good idea to weed out your closet occasionally, but Sunday, I was glad we still had some old clothes that hadn't been thrown out.

The clothes dryer has been on the blink for a couple of weeks, and although I made a hurried trip to the dryer in town Satruday, the jeans I planned to wear were gone by the time I went to put them on.

Rummaging through some discards, I came up with a pair of jeans I think my son had worn in 8th or 9th grade and the shirt was one my daughter had worn in high school.

Teenage pregnancies will cost county $2 million in 20 years

If you add up the costs involved when teenagers have babies in Shelby County, you will come up with the figure of $2,282,620 for the next 20 years.

These are only for expenditures that government will be asked to make and do not include what it will cost the individual families.

This figure was released this week by the Alabama Health Department's Bureau of Maternal and Child Health/Family Planning.

In an interview with the Reporter, Health Educator Ed Meehan in Montgomery said the average cost throughout the United States for medical and welfare costs of teenage mothers and their babies for the next 20 years is $18,000 per each teenage pregnancy.

The figures were compiled by a New York firm and included in a report to the U.S. House of Representatives. The report says, "There is probably no more serious health and welfare problem confronting the united States today than the high rate of adolescent pregnancy."

In 1977, the number of babies born to girls between the ages of fourteen and nineteen in Shelby County was 159. The number of first births to teens was 122; and there is a probability that there will be further pregnancies occurring among these same girls. Using the $18,000 average per teenage birth, it is anticipated that over the next twenty years $2,282,620 will be spent in Shelby County, in this connection.

The analysis concentrates on available statistics in two areas: medical costs and welfare costs It does not concern itself with the many intangible costs of teenage pregnancies occurring each year: heartbreak, sickness of mothers and babies, family breakdown or blighted hopes.

There are facilities available to assist teenagers who are pregnant, in delivering healthy babies, and also to assist teenagers who are not pregnant, in developing responsible attitudes toward parenthood. Both males and females can contact their County Health Department office in order to either receive help or be directed to the proper source of assistance.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

The question of the 'Rapture'

The Question of the "Rapture"

Though the doctrine of the "rapture" is widely taught in the religious world today, the doctrine is not taught in the Scriptures. In fact, the term "rapture" cannot be found in God's word at all. And, the Scriptures teach against the doctrine.

This doctrine, which is a part of the man-made teaching of premillenialism, may be defined as the belief that the saints will be taken into heaven for seven years, during which time the sinners will undergo great tribulation on earth. Then, Christ will come to earth and reign on David's literal throne in Jerusalem for a literal thousand years. The Bible knows nothing of such doctrine, which demands that the resurrection of the righteous and the resurrection of the unjust take place at different times.

The Bible knows nothing of such doctrine. Acts 24:15 speaks of the "resurrection both of the just and unjust," not at different times but at the same time. Christ's teaching is, "The hour shall come in which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice, and come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5:28,29) Note that Christ stated that both the good and the evil would be raised at the same time. Christ also said, "I will raise him (the righteous) up at the last day." (John 6:40,44) And, in John 12:48 Christ said that His word would judge him (the one who rejects His word) in the last day." Note that the righteous would be raised the same day the wicked are judged. I Corinthians 15:23-26 teaches that Christ must reign until death is destroyed, at which time he "shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God," not begin His reign. Death shall be destroyed when the good and evil are raised at the same time at the last day.

One does not wonder why the word "rapture" is not in the Bible when he realizes that the doctrine is contrary to the teachings of the Bible, thus having no higher authority than man.

THS hosts band competition

Band members from 13 schools exhibited their musical and marching abilities on the Thompson High School football field Saturday.

It was the first time for the school to host a marching band competition and according to band director Elson Hood, it was "highly successful."

The Montevallo Troubadours received straight superior ratings for all their units and the Calera Eagle Marching Band came out of the competition with an overall superior rating.

With the exception of Shelby County High School, all of the county bands participated in the event. Even though they didn't compete, the Marching Southern Sounds from THS gave an exhibition for the crowd.

Between $2,500 and $3,000 was raised from the competition which got underway at 3 p.m. and concluded with the presentation of awards at 8 p.m. Trophies were presented by Senator Lister Hill Proctor.

Thompson Band Boosters are planning to make the band competition an annual event.

Hosts perform

The Marching Southern Sounds Band showed their stuff for spectators at the marching band competition they hosted Saturday. Lisa Zuiderhoek, above, performs with the majorette squad. Featured twirlers Marnie Frestovan and Kelli Wyatt also contributed their talents to the show.

Editor returns

Julia Rotenberry (left) greets her childhood friend Jeanne Appleton Voltz at King House on the University of Montevallo campus when Mrs. Voltz returned to make a speech on Founders Day. A onetime editor of the Alabamian, she is now Foods Editor of Woman's Day magazine.

UM alumna revisits her roots

by Marcia M. Sears

It was a heartwarming return for friends and former teachers when Jeanne Appleton Voltz came back to Montevallo for the University's Founders Day festivities.

It was not just that she is a "hometown girl who made good" in the outside world, she is highly regarded and loved by those who knew her as a young woman growing up in Montevallo, and finishing college there.

As Foods Editor of the largest circulation woman's magazine in the world - "Woman's Day - Mrs. Voltz has attained a position of influence reached by very few.

She was asked to head up the Alumni Fund Drive this year, and her acceptance of that difficult post is what brought her to Montevallo last week.

In an interview with the Shelby County Reporter, Mrs. Voltz recalled her childhood days on Highland Street in Montevallo, when her father was principal of Montevallo High School and later, superintendent of Education for Shelby County. She marveled that "The oak trees my sisters and I used to water as children are arching across the street now."

How does she spend a typical day now, we asked her? Living three blocks from Lincoln Center in New York City, she said she gets up early like most New Yorkers, at 7 a.m., prepares her own breakfast and reads the New York Times.

Then she walks to work at her office in Times Square and is at her desk by 8:45.

Phones start ringing at 9, and when California wakes up, more telephones are ringing by 12 she smiled.

"As food editor, I talk to each of our five home economist editors. Women's Day has the most creative home economist in the world. Everything in our magazine is tested on kitchen ranges just like the ones used in homes. We talk about what ideas they are working on, and I get out the letters. We all sit down and taste foods at lunch, which often means a "mixed bag" menu. Since lunch is part of the working day, we take a break after lunch.

"In the afternoons I read copy, confer with the editor and other people. We purchase lots of manuscripts. Sometimes I will telephone a writer and ask the writer to update or expand the material, or whatever."

Mrs. Voltz does not have time to do much writing any more and does no primary blue pencilling of copy. That is left to an assistant. "I spend lots of time pushing on people - employees, competitors, compatriots, people in related fields...and spend lots of time at nutrition meetings."

She is called on to review diet books, responding to the enormous interest in diet and self fulfillment books.

What does she notice about changes in the American family? "Americans know less about food than they did in the 1940's," she replied without hesitation. "They don't know what they're eating.

"They think if they eat one good meal a day, that's it. There is more eating out, and it is viewed by many consumers as 'This is the night I can eat what I want' without regard for nutrition."

On the other hand, she said that the major food choices at home are made to please the family. Among 'Woman's Day' readers, if the husband or children don't like it, forget it. "Our readers are still interested in family fulfillment," she avers.

But she notes that the average American family is spending less time in food preparation. "Our everyday meal takes less time to prepare, although there's another group into gourmet cooking--but that's a hobby, like jogging."

Women are thinking there are other things to give their children, like 'meaningful time' family recreation, reading, biking, and activities, she notes.

Mrs. Voltz now devotes much of her time to studying trends in family lifestyles, and demographics, in order to keep the foods sections of her magazine in tune with and leading the times.

For a few hours last week she had the opportunity to renew her 'roots' in Montevallo and share with a new generation of college students and alumni her enthusiasm for life.

But she let slip one sentence that may have shown a little nostalgia, "Oh, I wish I could make a living in a small town."

We're the best

Members of a Welterweight team proclaim their superiority as they ride through Montevallo during Saturday's parade. Marchers, firetrucks, rescue vehicles, floats and even a giant pig all took part in the gala event.

C'mon team!

Enthusiastic cheerleaders showed crowds along the parade route in Montevallo how they cheer for their Welterweight team when they take the field.

Monroeville man made UM alumni officer

Monroeville businessman and civic leader Jack Ronald Bates has been elected vice president-elect of the University of Montevallo Alumni Association.

Bates, who has been active in alumni activities for several years, was elected by the UM Alumni Council Friday during Montevallo's Founders Day activities. In 1978, he was named UM Alumnus of the Year.

In Monroeville, he is chairman of the board and president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association and is a past president of the Monroeville Chamber of Commerce, past chairman of the city's Industrial Development Board and a past director of both the Monroe County Red Cross and local Kiwanis Club.

He will begin his two-year term February during UM's traditional College Night-Homecoming and will step up to the presidency in February, 1982.

Boo!

Even a couple of spooks like Allison Sides and Chris Long can't scare the grin off clown Laurie Owens. These Thompson Elementary students are just a couple of the entries in the school's costume contest which will be held October 30 during the Halloween Carnival. Starting at 5 p.m. with a spaghetti supper the carnival will also feature games, prizes, movies, cake walk and a haunted house. (Photo by Moore)

Valley plans carnival

This year's Valley Elementary Halloween Carnival promises to be bigger and better than ever.

Set from 3-8 p.m., Friday, October 26 at the school, the carnival will feature unique train ride, a space glide ride, horror movies and a barbeque supper. There will also be a silent auction, junque-and-jewel shop, bingo and lots of other activities for children and adults.

The carnival is sponsored annually by the Valley PTO to enable the group to purchase such articles for the school as duplicating machines, window shades and student workbooks.

Many local businesses have contributed prizes for the carnival attractions.

Free shots offered to fight fall flu

Fall brings football and flu.

Anyone can get influenza, but the virus-caused resporatory disease hits hardest those who are 65 and older and those who have heart trouble, lung disease, kidney disease, diabetes, anemia or other chronic illness. Some 692,000 Alabamians are in this "high risk" group.

For most people, influenza is inconvenient. The flu virus attacks and inflames the respiratory tract, and the victim coughs, sneezes, and has chills and fever, aching head and painful muscles.

Young, healthy flu victims usually recover fully within a week, but those in the high risk group may find flu a tough or impossible disease to beat.

That's why the Shelby County Health Department and a statewide group of other health professionals and volunteers encourage those in the high risk group to protect themselves from flu with immunization.

Maxine Smith, Health Services Administrator announces that flu shots are now available at the Shelby County Health Department. A special clinic has been set up for November 1, 1979 from 8 a.m. until 7 p.m. at the Health Department in Columbiana.

Influenza vaccine will be given free of charge at these clinics to persons for whom it is recommended.

Anyone in the high risk group is urged to see his physician or local health department for influenza immunization.

Pea Ridge group travels to historic Virginia sites

Pea Ridge Senior Citizens have returned from a tour of the historic areas of Virginia.

The group had a smooth trip after the bus broke down and was repaired in Alabaster. The 39-member group went on to Roanoke, Virginia on their first day out.

Among the places they visited were Stonewall Jackson's place of burial, the Robert E. Lee Hotel and Washington and Lee University in Lexington.

They next spent two days touring historic Williamsburg and according to member Ethel Cochran, "The places we saw are too numerous to mention, but we did go through the Governor's palace and ate lunch at the King's Arm Tavern.

After leaving Williamsburg, they visited Jamestown, Richmond and Appomattox, where they toured McLean house.

The last night of the trip was spent at Natural Bridge where they saw the play "Drama of Creation."

Mrs. Cochran says the trip was declared the best the group has ever taken.

They appreciated the help of Wyman Brown who planned the tour and made reservations, and trip coordinator Hester Lawley.

The next trip is planned for New Orleans in the spring.

Home Decorating with Becky

DON'T BE AFRAID TO ASK

Sometimes, women are reluctant to ask for help in choosing and arranging furnishings for their homes.

But we don't want you to be afraid to ask us for this help.

We are ready, willing and able to do it, and in fact, we invite you to come in and talk over your particular decorating situation.

We want you to know that we have the experience in helping people like yourself with furniture and other furnishings.

And it doesn't matter if you have a big budget or a small one. We've helped many people who must work on a limited budget. We can work around existing furniture that you now have and want to keep, suggesting, for example, just the few pieces you might need at this time to brighten your home, or we can, of course, help if you want a whole room-full or a whole house-full of furniture.

We've helped newlyweds just starting out as well as those who've been home makers for many years.

The main thing to remember is that no matter how small your budget may be, you should not hesitate to come in and talk over your furnishing needs and hopes. We can evaluate your family's way of life and suggest furnishings tailored to your specific situation. Remember, don't be afraid to ask. Stop in.

Voice of experience

Irvin Stone, a 78 year old Four Mile resident, gives some expert advice to the afternoon class in building construction at the Area Vocational Center. This is his first experience in classroom instruction.

Potato astounds gardener

by Bert Seaman

Although he's gardened for years, a Wilsonville man was astounded last week when he uncovered a sweet potato which weighed five and a half pounds.

James Kidd said he couldn't believe it when he saw the monstrous vegetable and immediately ran inside to show it to his wife.

"I don't know what could have made it grow so big," declared Kidd, "unless it was the peat moss I gathered from the woods and put in the beds."

Another unusual sight Kidd turned up in his garden this year was sweet potatoes growing in clumps. There were several bunches containing 15-20 potatoes, he noted.

Although the Wilsonville man harvested eight hundred bushels of sweet potatoes. And he pointed out that almost the entire crop came from the sprouts on one potato which his wife had placed in a glass of water.

Displaying his prize sweet potato, which is 15 inches in length and six inches in diameter, Kidd mentioned that one year he had raised a string bean that was 16 inches in length.

The big bean came from the garden he grew when he and his wife lived near Kennedy Airport in New York, Kidd reported.

In the 50X100 foot garden Kidd has adjacent to the home he's building in Wilsonville, he grows peas, corn, okra, tomatoes, string beans, cucumbers, pepper and turnip greens.

Unusual potatoes

James Kidd of Wilsonville holds the giant 5½ pound sweet potato he found in his garden this year. He also holds one of the clumps of potatoes he discovered when he dug up his crops last week.

Doctor opens office

Ginger Alred, M.D., recently opened her Internal Medicine practice in the Shelby Office Plaza behind Shelby Memorial Hospital.

A native of Clanton, Alred received a B.E. degree from Vanderbilt University and her M.D. from the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB). She completed an internship at UAB in internal medicine, this past year.

Alred chose to practice in Shelby County because, "it's one of the fastest growing areas in Alabama," she said.

Builder takes up teaching

They say there's no substitute for experience. And if that's the case, students in the building construction class at the Area Vocational Center have about the best teacher available.

Irvin Stone made his living doing construction work for nearly 30 years before he retired in 1966. And even after that, the builder, who is now 78, did some contracting work on his own.

But stepping into the classroom is a new experience for him. However, Stone says that teaching students the rudiments of the building trade isn't too much different from supervising the men he's been in charge of on construction jobs. "I use the same psychology," he admitted.

Filling in for the regular instructor, Robert Holston, who is recuperating from a heart attack, Stone arrives at the school at 7:30 every morning to get ready for his classes.

Except that the cement floors in the area where he works are hard on his legs, the new teacher says he's enjoying his duties immensely.

Speaking about the students in his morning and afternoon class, which include students from all seven high schools in the county, Stone said, They're the best bunch of boys I've ever been with."

In the five weeks he's been instructing, Stone has supervised the boys in building coldframes and doghouses. They have also put up cabinets in the small engine room at the school.

Even though he stopped working on a steady basis at the age of 65, Stone said that instead of being retired, he's "retreaded."

When the Four Mile resident leaves the classroom, he expects to continue doing odd jobs that involve his carpentry skills. And his leisure moments, Stone noted, will be spent pursuing his favorite pasttime of fishing.

90 and getting better

Minnie Storey was the object of love and affection from her many friends in Wilsonville last Saturday on the occasion of her 90th birthday. They planned a special dinner at the Methodist Church and then surprised her with a "money tree." The sprightly nonegenarian sported a pin saying, "I'm not getting older, I'm getting better." Over 50 persons, including 7 nieces and one great-niece came from miles around to help her celebrate. (Reporter photo)

The meeting of the American Medical Records Association is for the purpose of continuing education.

Maylene man goes hunting for gold

by David Moore

What he looks for is the shiny, yellow stuff. Gold. And he finds it, too. Right here in Alabama.

"It does something to you when you find that yellow stuff. It gets in your blood," says Dave Christie. He sounds like a prospector straight from the hills. All he needs is a pack mule, beard and dusty hat to complete the picture. He already has the gold pan.

Christie, 51, who lives in Maylene, got interested in panning for gold when a friend took him to northeast Alabama six years ago.

"It put my eyes out the first time I saw any gold in the bottom of my pan. I got excited," he says with a gleam in his eyes.

Christie and his friend found gold that first day. Since then, he says, he's never come back empty handed.

"I always come back with gold. Not a whole lot, but enough to go back looking for more."

Unfortunately, Christie explains, he hasn't had time to pan for gold in the last two years. During the days he runs a filling station on Hwy. 13. At night he works as a foreman at the Dickey Clay company's Hopewell plant.

Chritie says he's been watching the gold market with keen interest lately. And little wonder. An ounce of the precious metal on the international market brings about $400. The last time Christie panned any gold it was bringing $35 an ounce.

"Yep," he says. "I want to get back to panning real soon."

In four years of panning Christie claims to have found a total of an ounce of gold.

The place he's had the most luck is at Arbacoochee, five miles south of Heflin in Cleburne County. At one time the town boasted a population of some 6000 gold miners.

In the 1830's and '40's Alabama and Georgia were the principal gold producing districts in the U.S., according to the National Geological Survey. It states that 49,495 ounces of gold were produced in the state from 1830-1959. But production dropped drastically after 1849 when people started yelling about big strikes at Sutter's Mill. The miner packed off to California.

But the gold is still here, buried in the hills and streams of Alabama.

Christie says that when looking for gold, quartz and black sand are two good signs to watch for. But neither one carries a written guarantee.

Christie explains that quartz veins catch the heavy gold flakes and hold them. Plant roots sometimes do the same, he says. All you have to do is separate shiny stuff from the dirt.

Thats where the gold pan comes into play.

Rotating the pan filled with dirt and water, Christie explains that the trick is to separate the gold, letting it sink to the bottom of the pan, while sloshing out the discard.

"I don't ever get in a hurry because I don't want to loose any of those shiny little slivers," says Christie. It takes him about 15 minutes to go through a pan of dirt.

When he's made his final wash, he takes a toothpick, carefully removes the glitter from the bottom rim of the pan, and puts the tiny bits of gold in a small glass cylinder with water. With a little luck and know-how, Christie says a person can pan about $20 of gold a day.

Christie says that he has heard of an old-timer who claimed to have panned gold out of the Cahaba River. Naturally Christie checked out the rumor, but to no avail. That doesn't mean there's no gold in the Cahaba, but if Christie couldn't find it then there's probably no one in the county who could.

(Christie, it might be noted, alleges that there is one man in Shelby County who owns a German Gold Needle, a metal detector so accurate in locating gold that it has been outlawed for fear of driving gold prices sharply downward.)

Apparently, the only other gold story connected with Shelby County has to do with a 35-foot deep pit in Shelby. County forester David Stone says he has heard rumors to the effect that the six by eight-foot square opening was dug as a gold mine shaft. Located just north of the Waxahatchee Creek on Hwy. 145, the diggers of the old shaft left no obvious clues as to their true intentions.

Christie says he has never heard of any gold mining in Shelby County. He has heard storys about commercial gold mining now going on in Arbacoochee, but information on such matters is usually slow to leak out from under the hat.

Christie says he sometimes has dreams of finding a seam of gold and striking it rich. One day he plans to go out in search of that dream, too.

"When I retire this is going to be my hobby: I want to travel the U.S. in a camper, looking for gold."

And even if he finds no gold in his pan, Dave Christie will have at least had glitter in his dreams.

Gold!

You don't find gold in handy little glass cylinders like the one shown in Dave Christie's pan, but Christie says he has recovered about an ounce of the precious metal in his occasional outings. The cylinder in the pan contains gold Christie has panned in Alabama.

Vincent proclamation

Vincent upsets Pelham with 21-15 victory

by Richard Crosby

Vincent grabbed 14 points in the first seven minutes of play last Friday night and then toughed out the rest of the game against Pelham to take a 21 to 15 victory.

The Jackets took the opening kickoff and drove downfield with quarterback James Oden passing 20 yards to Rodney Driggers for the first touchdown. Driggers booted the PAT to make the score 7 to 0 with 5:55 left in the first quarter.

On the ensuing kickoff, Pelham fumbled on the return with Vincent recovering. Seconds later the Jackets had their second score of the night as Sidney Yowe bulled into the endzone on a 10 yard run. Driggers again added the PAT to make the score 14 to 0.

That same score prevailed to the halftime break as both teams struggled offensively as the defenses dug in.

"Coach Garrett had his boys ready to play at the start of the game and I didn't have ours ready" Coach Steve Rivers said of the game. "We were down 14 points before we got ready to play and after that it was a close ballgame.

"We weren't mentally ready" Rivers added."Our kids kept trying and battling but got too far behind early."

As the third period got underway, Pelham put together a 65 yard drive. Quarterback Steve Rye passed 22 yards to Tracy Sweeney for the Panthers first touchdown of the night. Woody Woodson attempted the PAT and missed. It was his first missed extra point of the year and left the score at 14 to 6.

In the third period Vincent capitalized on a Pelham miscue. The Panthers were lined up to punt when the snap went over the head of the punter. After a scramble for the ball, a pass was completed for Pelham but a penalty called the play back with Vincent taking over on the 25 yard line.

Dwight Spradley got the call for the one yard run into the endzone several plays later. Driggers again toed true to make the score 21 to 6.

Pelham got geared up again as the fourth quarter started. The Panthers drove the ball 67 yards for the score, with workhorse Dale Busby busting into the endzone. A try for the two-point conversion failed and with 9:47 left in the game, Pelham trailed 12 to 21.

It wasn't until the game was almost complete that the Panthers got their final points of the night. With fourth down and 11 inside Vincent's 20 yard line, Woodson booted a 25 yard field goal with only 51 seconds left in the game. That made the score 21 to 15.

Pelham attempted an on sides kick that failed and Vincent ran the clock out for the victory.

"We're always happy to win one" coach Gary Garrett said. "Pelham has a real good ball club and it was a close game all the way. The breaks were in out favor."

Vincent faces rival Shelby County High this Friday night in Columbiana. "They're a mystery to me" Garrett commented."They're a much better ball club than the past few weeks have indicated. They have some talent and this is an age-old rivalry.

"If we do our share, it's going to be a good football game. I haven't coached a team that has beat Shelby County in Columbiana."

Pelham, meanwhile, tackles Mortimer-Jordan in a tough contest away from the home field for the Panthers. "We're going to work on correcting some mistakes we've been making and get our kids ready to play." Last year the Panthers lost to M-J who this year posts a record of 4-2-1.

Football Cash

T.R. Martin of Columbiana won the Football Cash for last week. He narrowly beat out W.T. Arnold of Calera for the cash. Both men had correctly picked 11 winners with Martin coming the closest in the tiebreakers.

T.R. MILLER

A bunch of entrants can claim rights to third place. Among the many were Mike Wakefield, Peggy Posey, Mike Dorough, B.A. Thames, Robert McAllister, Wayne Shaw, Frances Scoggins, Mike Morgan, and F.C. Hall.

Only three more winners can be named in Football Cash this season and this week's entry we've reverted to High School and College games.

To try your luck, cut out the entry form on Page B-12 and mail it in or bring it by the Columbiana or Pelham Reporter office or drop it by the WBYE Radio studio in Calera.

Shelby Raiders lose to Autauga Academy

Shelby Academy fell to powerful Autauga Academy last Friday night before the Raiders homecoming crowd. The 26 to 6 loss gives Shelby a record of 2-5-1.

Clifton Garrett scored the only Raider touchdown of the night on a five yard run. The Raiders took the second half kickoff and drove 60 yards for the score.

This week the team travels to Chambers Academy.

This week prior, Shelby Academy won its second game of the year, defeating Springwood Academy 23 to 7.

Clifton Garrett scored one touchdown while quarterback Dirk Carson accounted for two and place kicker Ben Stancil kicked one field goal and two PAT'S.

The week before, Shelby came from behind to down Warrior Academy 7 to 6. The Raiders watched Warrior score in the first period and then game back in the second with Garrett racing 74 yards for the touchdown and Stancil booting the go-ahead point after.

"We're improving every game" stated coach Dewayne Kergin. "Our offense has started moving the ball and gaining confidence. Injuries have hurt us the first part of the season. We don't have any depth and against Talladega we had runningbacks playing as linemen."

"We've started to get players back off the injury list" Kergin continued. "If we can stay healthy I expect us to finish the season strong."

Shelby Academy carries a roster of only 21 players and Kergin commented that the offense is built around Clifton Garrett, the team's runningback. "He's averaging over 100 yards a game" the coach said. "So far this season he has gained over 600 yards and he missed almost two games."

Before going into the homecoming game against Autauga, Shelby sported a record of 2 wins, four losses and one tie. The optimism of coaches Kergin and head coach Harry Rawlinson are for the team to win the final four games of the year to finish with a winning record.

Chelsea loses seventh game to powerful Billingsley 45-0

by Richard Crosby

Chelsea suffered its seventh win of the year last Friday night at the hands of the powerful Winterboro Bulldogs. The 0-7 mark is the worst record for coach Richard Conkle since he started coaching.

"They're tough and are a good football team" Conkle said of the Area leading Bulldogs.

This week Chelsea holds homecoming and the rival on the football field will be the Thorsby Rebels. "We've got a good chance to win one this week, but we've got to get some folks healthy and back on the field. Right now it looks like a crutch brigade on the sidelines.

"We've still got the spirit, that's not the problem. When you don't have any speed, size or quickness you're just lacking."

Chelsea faces Thorsby this Friday night and than meets Minor Christian before finishing the year with rival Vincent.

Speedway reschedules race

Shelby Speedway did not run last weekend due to illness. The race will be run this Sunday afternoon at the local speedway with the gates open at Noon, time trials at 1:30 and racing starting at 2 p.m.

A 100 lap Bomber feature race will be the headline event at Shelby Speedway with a full lineup of cars expected.

On November 4th, a 100 lap Modified Race will be held at shelby Speedway. Even though these will be the featured races on Sunday, a full schedule of racing will be held with events in all three divisions.

Montevallo meet tougher bunch of 'Dogs in Winterboro

by Richard Crosby

Winterboro proved itself to Montevallo last Friday night with a 26 to 7 win over the Shelby County version of the Bulldogs.

"They appear to be the best team we've played" Coach Richard Gilliam said of the winning team. "They have a good balance of passing, receivers and blockers. I think they'll represent the Area well in the state playoffs." Winterboro clinched the Area title with the win over Montevallo.

Gilliam pointed out an interesting note of the state playoff schedule for Winterboro. The Bulldogs play Lincoln the final game of the regular schedule and then play the same team again in the first round of the state playoffs. Both games will be played in Lincoln.

"It'll be interesting to see both games" Gilliam commented.

Montevallo's loss to Winterboro came at the hands of an outstanding runningback for Winterboro in the name of Thomas Calhoun. The shifty runner had already amassed 1100 yards for the season before the Montevallo game and added more than a hundred last Friday night.

The senior scored the first three touchdowns for Winterboro, taking the first one in on a nine yard run after Montevallo fumbled on its own 27 yard line. The second score for the football star came minutes later on a 42 yard run.

In the second quarter, Calhoun raced for 19 yards to complete a 34 yard drive that was set up by an interception of a Montevallo pass. The score remained 19 to 0 at the half.

In the third quarter, Chris Studdard scored for Winterboro on a 10 yard run. With the point after, Winterboro enjoyed a comfortable 26 to 0 lead over the Montevallo Bulldogs.

Late in the fourth quarter, Montevallo got on the scoreboard with David Melsoni throwing a 46 yard pass to Scott Studdard. Jeff Hall added the PAT to give Montevallo its seventh point of the game.

Montevallo got the ball back on an on-sides kick and marched 49 yards for another apparent touchdown as time expired. A quarterback sneak on the one foot line was considered good by everyone on the goal line but the officials ruled otherwise and the game ended.

This week Montevallo hosts Calera for the annual fight between the two neighboring communities. "We're going to do the best we can. I still think we're improving" Gilliam said of his team. "They do have class" he added of his tough Bulldogs who have only posted one win in seven games.

Offensive standouts against Winterboro were Rance Gaddis, Wade Bice, Scott Lightfoot, Kerry Thompson and Derrick Stewart. Defensively, Coach Gilliam named Jeff Hall, Jerome Jones, Clay Cardone, Rex Wallace, Steve and David Melsoni as his better performers.

Calera whips Verbena 21-9 for season's sixth win

by Richard Crosby

The win wasn't as easy as the score indicated, but the Calera Eagles did whip Verbena 21 to 9 last Friday night for the sixth win of the season.

Verbena showed muscle early in the game, taking the opening kickoff 69 yards for the game's first score. A 43 yard touchdown pass accounted for the first six points and a good PAT made the score 7 to 0.

Calera came back in the second quarter with a touchdown scored by the defense. Raymond King blocked a Verbena punt, picked up the loose pigskin and raced 39 yards for the score. Johnny Ryan booted the PAT to knot the score at seven each.

The Eagles gave Verbena two more points minutes later. Calera fumbled a pitch into the endzone with Bill Seay recovering to give up a safety, making the score 9 to 7 with under six minutes left in the half.

That error was righted on Calera's next possession. After holding the fired-up Verbena squad, Bill Seay broke in the clear for a 58 yard touchdown run. Ryan missed the PAT making the score at the half Calera 13, Verbena 9.

A scoreless third quarter saw both teams fighting for field position. Verbena moved within striking distance of the Calera goal line late in the third quarter and into the fourth, but the Eagle defense refused to submit and held the opposition at bay on the four yard line.

From there, Calera put together a 96 yard drive with Bill Seay carrying for the final ll yards for the score. Fran Blanchard passed to Alan Brittian for the conversion and the final points of the game. The final score showed Calera with 21 points and Verbena with 9.

"Basically we didn't throw the ball very well" coach Danny Alverson said of the game. Calera only collected seven yards passing on eight attempts.

"Our offensive line blocked well in the second half, especially on that long drive for the clinching touchdown. We're real pleased with the win and just hope we can get ready for Montevallo this week."

The Bulldogs and Eagles will square-off in Montevallo this Friday night for one of the biggest games of the year for both teams.

"They scare me" Alverson told the Reporter. "They've beat us for the last four years. We thought we had a chance of winning eash year but Montevallo always came out on top. Coach Gilliam does a great job and he's a tough coach to prepare for. Montevallo hasn't been out of a game this year despite their record and we're looking for a tough fight."

Richard's Picks

Some strange scores from last week's games may have proved some of my forecasting prowess. Although I didn't pick all the games I came close in some unusual ways.

In the Chelsea-Billingsley game my prediction was 53 to 8. Subtract Chelsea's 8 points from Billingsley's 53 and you get 45 points, the actual difference in the game.

In Shelby County's prediction, I gave the Tigers from Childersburg 28 points and that's what they scored.

Well, enough about last week and now for this week.

Calera at Montevallo-The Eagles have lost four straight to the Bulldogs, just looks like the Bulldogs have the Eagles' pegged Not so this year though. Calera is out four losses and Montevallo will see Calera score a touchdown for each year. Prediction: Calera 28, Montevallo 0.

Vincent at Shelby County-Just because Vincent hasn't beaten Shelby County in Columbiana for quite a few years is no reason to count the Jackets out. But, the Wildcats have a score to settle for last year and if the coaches can get some fire in their eyes, revenge will take place Friday night. Don't look for an easy win for whichever team wins, you'll have to stay till the end as Shelby County wins late 15 to 13.

Thompson at Sylacauga-The past two years have been nightmares for the Warriors when it comes to playing the Aggies. Even though Sylacauga hasn't won a game this year the game is going to be the closest one yet for Larry Simmons and crew. Prediction: Thompson 3, Sylacauga 0 in overtime.

Thorsby at Chelsea-I really want to see the Hornets win a game and this week they'll have their best chance if they get some folks healthy. Look for Chelsea to get the ball moving early and keep going with a comfortable win. Prediction: Chelsea 26, Thorsby 8.

Pelham at Mortimer Jordan-The Panthers are after win number four and it may be tough, they have the talent and desire to get it. Two more wins will give the Panthers their first winning season ever in varsity competition and the class of '80 wants that bragging right. Prediction: Pelham 28, Mortimer Jordan 13.

Wildcats buried by Childersburg

by Richard Crosby

Shelby County High lost its fourth game in as many weeks last Friday night as the Childersburg Tigers completely dominated there homecoming game. The 28 to 0 loss gave the Wildcats a 3-4 record for the year.

"It was a team loss" stated coach Mark Bradley who was at a loss to explain the lackluster performance of his charges. "Obviously we weren't ready to play. We gave very little effort.

"It's just one of those times where you stink up the field" Bradley concluded.

Childersburg got off to a 15 point lead in the first period, scoring on the opening drive and then grabbing a fumble and racing 56 yards for another touchdown.

Late in the first half the Tigers got their third score of the night to make the count 21 to 0 at the half.

Childersburg's defense manhandled the Shelby County offense the entire game, keeping the homecoming crowd delighted. The Tigers got their final score in the fourth quarter on a 23 yard pass play. The win gave Childersburg coach John Cox his 204th.

This week Shelby County faces tough Vincent in one of the county's biggest rivalries. "Vincent has a good team" remarked Bradley. "They have a surprising number of quality players and athletes for a 2A school and look impressive on film."

Vincent will be looking for its seventh win while the Wildcats seek to halt a four game losing streak.

Volleyball teams prepare for Area Tournament

Area volleyball tournaments will be underway Thursday morning at both Thompson and Vincent. Thompson will host the 3A Area Tournmanet which includes teams from Shelby County High, Pelham, Pell City, Childersburg, Sylacauga, B.B. Comer, and host Thompson.

The 2A Area Tournament in Vincent includes teams from Chelsea, Winterboro, Talladega County Training School and Vincent. Montevallo, last year's Area winner and State Champion in 2A will not defend its title as girl's athletics at the school have been cancelled.

Both Area tournaments begin play at 9 a.m. and will continue until the champion is decided in the double-elimination affair.

Houseparents wait for family to arrive

by Bert Seaman

A family of five has finally moved into the $175,000 spacious brick home near Harpersville. But twelve of the occupants are missing.

The completely furnished home is the Sheriffs' Girls Ranch and it was expected that house parents and the girls would start moving in soon after the facility was dedicated in April.

However, until this month, mildew has been collecting in the dwelling put up by the Birmingham Home Builders' Association and furnished by the Ladies Auxiliary.

But when the lease on their nearby home expired this month, Dick and JoLynn Kelton, who were employed last year as houseparents, moved into the home with their three youngsters.

The reason the home hasn't been occupied has been due to the lack of operating funds. Before a ranch can be opened, one of the requirements is that there be $30,000 in the budget to run the facility.

And that money hasn't materialized. According to Ranch Director Tony Birchfield, "This has been a terrible year for us financially." (There are five other ranches in the state.)

Noting that the $150,000 raised from the recent Barbara Mandrell Golf Tournament has gotten the Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranches" out of debt and on top again." Birchfield expressed hopes that brighter days may be just around the corner.

As a result of the money shortage, the Keltons employment was terminated at the end of August. But because they wanted to be available when the ranch opened, the couple elected to stay on without pay.

When they had to move out of their home, Sheriff Buddy Glasgow asked them to move into the Girls' Ranch home so the premises wouldn't be deserted.

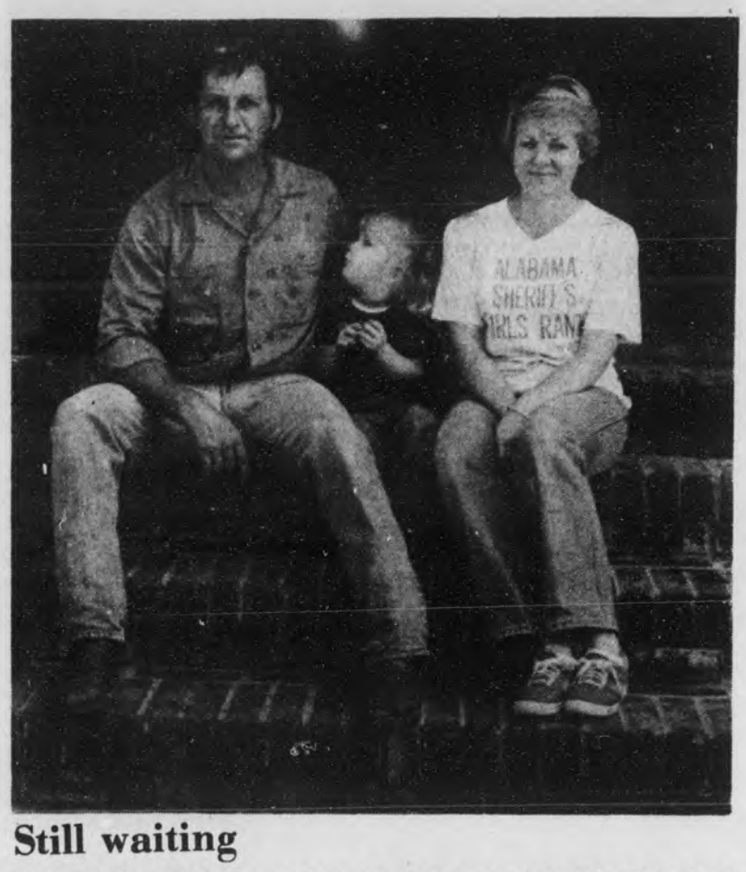
Birchfield said he hopes the ranch will be able to open around the first of the year. But there isn't any assurance that will happen.

So far, according to the Shelby County Sheriff, there is only $10,000 in the operating budget for the ranch. While he and Talladega County Sheriff Jerry Studdard will be working on fund raising events, Glasgow urges individuals to send in contributions so the girls who need the care the ranch can provide can move in.

Unless funds are specifically earmarked for the Polly Brush unit, money that is collected for the ranches goes into the general operating fund. That means that none of the money collected from the recent golf tournament will go toward opening the Shelby County ranch.

Pointing out that a barn and storage building need to be put up, Kelton said that donations of rough lumber are needed. The house-parent, who has been overseeing the 480 acre ranch since he arrived, also mentioned a need for barbed wire and fence posts.

Anyone who would like to make any sort of donation to the ranch may contact either the Keltons at 672-7756 or Sheriff Glasgow at 669-4181.



Still waiting

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Kelton, houseparents at the Sheriff's Girls Ranch near Harpersville sit on the steps of the $175,000 home with their two year old daughter Kristi. The family moved into the facility this month but lack of funds prevent the ranch from opening.

Czech native teaches at UM

After 16 years of singing opera in Germany and other European countries, Shari Boruvka came to the University of Montevallo to teach voice this fall.

Born in Czechoslovakia, she escaped with her family in 1949 shortly after the Communist takeover. In 1950 her family moved to New York, where she finished high school. Talented in art as well as music, she received a bachelor of arts degree in 1958 from Pratt Institute.

But her interest in music continued to grow.

While working for an advertising firm in New York, she took voice lessons and decided to study music further. "My voice teacher convinced me that I should sing as a career."

So she quit her job in advertising and attended Juilliard School of Music to study voice.

In 1962, she received a Fulbright Scholarship to study in Germany, where she went to school two more years.

The dramatic mezzo-soprano continued to live in Germany. She specializes in operas by Wagner and Verdi.

Shari Boruvka wants to remain a professional performer as well as a teacher at UM.

"I chose to come to UM," she explained, "because of the friendly and cooperative atmosphere in the music department."

"At UM," she said, "I will have the opportunity to perform professionally." While here, Ms. Boruvka plans to perform with the Birmingham Civic Opera.

The ADO circulates a monthly report available buildings in an attempt to attract new industries to the state. On the current list are 145 structures of all kinds and sizes.

The three buildings in Shelby County that are currently not in use, but are available to new industries are the Siluria Textile mill, with 233,000 square feet; a new metal building in Riverchase with 57,600 square feet; and a former boat manufacturing building in Alabaster with 19,080 square feet.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Hop an air taxi for a quick trip anywhere

Commercial pilot Rick Harmon makes his final approach, completing a charter flight at Shelby Airport.

One of the most beneficial services offered at Shelby County Airport by Lane Aero is the air taxi service.

In the business world, one maxim proven true time and time again is, "Time is money." And when it comes to business trips, there is no better way to save on travel time than by flying.

Many business negotiations, however, are made in towns not served by commercial airlines. And with the recent deregulation of airlines, flights to many smaller towns are being cut back.

This is where the air taxi service pays off.

"We're here for people who need rapid transportation," says Lane Aero President Larry Chapman. "The 20% cut in airline service will greatly increase the need of the air taxi service."

He goes on to add, "We can line up a plane and a pilot for the person who needs to get somewhere fast. We're not restricted to major cities, either. We can fly people into 13,000 airports around the country. And we don't have to go through Atlanta first. We can take you straight into the out-of-way places."

As a hypothetical situation, take for instance a local businessman who needs to close out contract negotiations with two clients, one in Dothan and one in Muscle Shoals.

By car, this man would have to spend 10 to 12 hours of otherwise productive time driving, and the trip would probably require an overnight stay. The whole trip, too, would be contingent on the availability of gas.

Using Lane Aero's air taxi service, however, the businessman could fly out of Shelby County Airport, have the first client meet him at the Dothan airport, sign the papers, (maybe even take him for a quick flight,) and be in Muscle Shoals for lunch with the second client.

And for building confidence in clients through image, there is little comparison between flying in from out-of-town and pulling up in a car. Just as time is so important, so is the image a businessman makes on his clients.

The cost of air taxi service is not as high as one might think--especially considering the advantages it offers. Rental charges on a single engine plane which will transport three people is 55¢ per mile. For a light twin-engine plane for five people, the cost is only 80¢ per mile.

Should the board of directors need to do business somewhere together, cabin class planes which will accomodate up to seven people are available for $1.05 per mile.

Lear Jet charters from Skytel Company out of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, can be arranged to almost anywhere in the Western Hemisphere with as little as 90 minutes notice.

If a person needs to travel, and time is of the essence, then the solution is Lane Aero's air taxi service. For more information, call 663-4805.

Light twin engine planes are available for air taxi rental from Lane Aero.

Extension Homemakers hold fashion show

by Reporter Staff

It doesn't have to cost a fortune to stay in style - at least not when you can sew.

Some of the outfits modeled by members of Extension Homemaker Clubs during an annual meeting Thursday, cost as little as $4.09 to make.

A fashion show was one of the highlights of the event which was held at Hargis Retreat.

The luncheon meeting also included the installation of officers and the recognition of past presidents and several other members.

Before lunch was served, a talk on "Changing Family Roles," was given by Mrs. Cathy Foree, Extension Family Life Specialist. Musical entertainment was provided by Tom Stoker and Frank Murphy from Columbiana Baptist Church.

Mrs. Dolly Hodges narrated the fashion show which included several garments which had been recycled. Two childrens' outfits were modeled and the most expensive garment shown was made at a cost of $7.91.

New officers for 1979-80 are: Maureen Kelley, president; Nina Kent, vice-president; Frances Shaw, secretary-treasurer; Marguerite Williams, reporter; Cleo Barden, parlimentarian; Maxine Vernon, cultural arts-family life; Cricket Lovett, health-safety; Elaine Erwin, citizenship-safety.

Mrs. Lida Wood, 92, of the Columbiana Club was recognized as the oldest member, and Debra Minor Rooks, 23, from the same club as the youngest member. The longest tenure of membership was claimed by Mrs. Nannie Lee Wyatt who was president of the Klein Club for 43 years.

'Postal Alert' to help seniors

Senior citizens in East Shelby County will soon be covered with a 'Postal Alert' program.

The Shelby County Program on Aging with the cooperation of the East Shelby County Postal Service has added this service to the many which already being offered.

This service will be available to all persons age 60 or over. The program will be offered only in East Shelby County as a pilot program to measure public response, and if successful will be offered to all of Shelby County.

Citizens who qualify for Postal Alert will inform the Aging Office of emergency procedures in the event of an accident. If the postal delivery person notices mail piling up in their mail box, the Aging office will be notified and will investigate the reason for the mail's not being picked up.

A spokesman for the Program on Aging told the Reporter that in Jefferson County, several senior citizens were found ill or had fallen without being able to contact outside help. Postal Alert should also be an effective way of helping senior citizens who live alone.

For more information call the Aging Office at Vincent 672-7053.

New rules add chaos to taxpaying season

by Marcia M. Sears

If it's any consolation, there are counties in this state that are in a more confused tax situation than Shelby County.

Some counties have not even mailed out their ad valorem tax notices yet, and may not get them out until the first of the year.

Homestead Exemption

But that assurance may not give much comfort to those Shelby Countians who have already stood in a long line to reclaim their homestead exemption this year.

A ruling by the State Attorney General just last Thursday says it is not necessary to re-claim the homestead exemption if it had been claimed in previous years and if there is no change in ownership of the property. The homestead exemption gives a considerable tax break to home owners, and therefore is claimed by all those who qualify for it.

The only exception to this is the taxpayer over 65 who has an income of less than $7,500 per year. That taxpayer must re-sign each year for his or her homestead exemption.

There is another serious problem facing many county taxpayers however, and that has to do with the classification of property.

Residential vs. Commercial

Many persons have found their property tax bill to be much higher than they thought it should be. In many cases, the higher tax is correct, but in many other cases, the property has been classified as "commercial" when it should have remained "residential."

Several taxpayers have already caught this difference and raised the roof about it. A new ruling, just out of the State Department of Revenue makes it possible from this week on, for taxpayers to get back their 'residential' classification, for this tax year, if they had been listed 'commercial.'

The difference amounts to half the tax bill.

How can a taxpayer find out what his classification is?

There are three ways to find out if residential property has incorrectly been classified "commercial."

One way would be to contact the tax assessor's office in person or by telephone, but that is time consuming because the office is swamped with taxpayers.

A second way is to mail Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds a note giving name, address, telephone and the number that appears on the top left hand side of the tax bill. Mrs. Reynolds says she will check on it, and telephone the answer after five o'clock. Her address is the Courthouse, Columbiana, AL 35051.

The third way is to look at the notice that was sent to property owners by the Shelby County Board of Equalization in July or August of this year. That notice lists both the appraised and assessed values of the property. If the assessed value is 20% of the appraised value, it is listed as 'commercial.' If it is only 10%, then it is considered 'residential.'

The residential rate applies only to a single-family dwelling occupied by its owner.

A duplex, apartment or multiple dwelling is taxed at the commercial rate even if the owner lives in one of the units.

The reason for so many incorrect classifications goes back to the old system of record keeping, according to Mrs. Reynolds. When it came time to reappraise all the property in the county, the only information the tax workers had was the homestead exemption or the 'forest land' designation. If they saw a homestead exemption, they assumed the property was 'residential' and classified it as such. All other property automatically received the 'commercial' designation.

What To Do

If a taxpayer feels his property is classified incorrectly as 'commercial' he or she can get it reclassified as 'residential' on the spot by submitting some kind of proof, such as a utility bill, that shows the property was occupied by the owner on October 1, 1978.

If a taxpayer has already paid his taxes this year, and now finds the classification was wrong, he can go to the tax assessor and request a credit. On presenting the credit letter to Fay Quick, Tax Collector, a refund can be made. Mrs. Quick said she refunded some $300 to a man Monday, who had earlier paid a tax of $600 based on the wrong classification.

Calera launches flood study

by Bert Seaman

Work will get underway next month in trying to find the cause of flooding along Buxahatchee Creek which has caused damage estimated as high as $85,000 in one year in the Calera area.

As the result of a meeting of federal and state agencies Monday morning and a public hearing at Calera City Hall that evening, a survey of a six mile area of the creek will be undertaken.

The flooding problem was called to the attention of the Shelby County Soil Conservation District in 1977 by Calera Mayor George Roy. It was found that funds for the project were available under Public Law 566, the Small Watershed Act.

Engineers from the SCS will do a ground survey of the creek and look for obstacles that could be causing the flooding in homes, businesses, streets and the town sewer system.

Calera officials say that flooding within the town limits is due to the inability of the town's drainage system to remove the storm water fast enough.

After the survey is completed, it will be determined to what extent the creek will have to be dredged or widened. Agency representatives attending the Monday meeting determined that the work would present no environmental or ecological problems.

All of the 35 people attending the public hearing, which included residents of the city, were all in favor of the project. Another hearing will be held after the analysis has been completed and solutions will be suggested.

The decision on the course of action to be undertaken will be made by the sponsors of the project. They are the Soil and Water Conservation District, the County Commission and the town of Calera.

Robber with gold tooth hits Pelham station

by David Moore

He had a gold-capped tooth with a star on it. He also had a gun and wanted money.

Tuesday, October 22, he hit the U.S.A. Oil Station on Hwy. 31, just north of Pelham.

Tim Yancey, 19, of Green Park South was working alone as cashier of the self-serve station when around 11 p.m. a man approached the pay booth. He later described the man to Pelham police as being black, about 6'1" and between 30 and 35 years old. The man, Yancey said, had a gold capped tooth with a star on it.

The man asked Yancey if he had a radiator hose for the car he had parked nearby in front of the Smoke Shop. When Yancey said no, the man persuaded him to walk over to the car and check under the hood for him. Yancey described the car as a 1970-73, light colored Oldsmobile or Cadillac.

When Yancey peered under the hood the man pulled a revolver on him and instructed him to go around to the back of the building and lie down.

Yancey told police that the man kicked him in the back of the head, took his wallet containing four dollars, and told him

Intercom ruins burglary attempt

by David Moore

Little boxes have big ears. But the man who broke into Hill's Grocery in Westover Monday night didn't know that.

Mrs. Sussie Hill, lives next door to her store on Hwy. 55, told the Reporter she was sitting in her bedroom around 10 p.m. reading a quilt book when she heard noises coming over her intercom. She said she had purchased the small, boxed unit for the express reason of detecting prowlers in the store.

Mrs. Hill said at first she heard someone bump into a metal stool, then heard someone tampering with the keys on the cash register or adding machine.

She tried to phone her son, but his cat had knocked the receiver off the hook, so she called the Sheriff's Department.

"They can talk about our Sheriff's Department all they want," said Mrs. Hill, "but I want to tell you they had six cars here in just several minutes."

The call was answered by three deputy patrol units and the Harpersville, Vincent and Wilsonville police departments.

Deputy Larry Doss found a man with a sack of groceries hiding in the attic insulation.

According to a Sheriff's spokesman the man taken into custody identified himself as Lewis Richard Lambert, 23, of Maine, but officials had not been able to varify that information at presstime. The spokesman said that the white male spoke with a thick, French-Canadian accent.

The man was charged with burglary and taken to the county jail.

According to Deputy Tom Barnes, the man had gathered about $10 worth of groceries in a bag before being apprehended.

"He didn't quite get through shopping," Barnes said.

Mrs. Hill said that the man had taken no beer, cigarettes or money, usually the first things to go during a robbery.

"If he was just hungry and had asked for food, I'd have given it to him," she said.

Calera flooding

Representatives of state and federal agencies inspected areas in Calera flooded by Buxahatchee Creek Monday. Looking over an area north of the town along Hwy. 31 are Roy Lowe, U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife, Mason Dollar, biologist, Soil Conservation Service, Ray Swicegood, SCS, Gerald Miller, EPA, Neal Harkins, Calera Maintenance Supervisor, Ben Carr, City Engineer.

Vacation comes to end for prison escapee

by David Moore

If you asked him, he would probably say his five-and-a-half month vacation just wasn't long enough.

Ricky Hale, 20, of Alabaster, escaped from county custody last May, when he was taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital complaining of a sore wrist. His vacation started when he slipped out of the examination room.

But that vacation ended Sunday, at 11:30 a.m. when Alabaster police and county investigators arrested Hale at the intersection of Hwy. 11 and U.S. 31.

APD Sgt. Larry Rollan received a tip Sunday morning that Hale was at a certain location. Rollan, officer LeRoy Davis, and deputy Tom Barnes, driving to the location in an unmarked car, spotted Hale at the Hope found guilty of stashing pot in jail

During his trial last week for the illegal possession of drugs while in prison, the defense attorneys for Phillip Hope argued that the marijuana found concealed in his clothing could have been forced on him by another inmate.

But after deliberating for approximately two and a half hours, the seven man, five woman jury found Hope guilty of Violation of the Uniform Controlled Substances Act.

Circuit Judge James Sharbutt will set Hope's sentence Nov. 8. The 24 year old Shelby resident was convicted of murder in August and sentenced to life imprisonment for that crime.

A pouch of Red Man chewing tobacco containing 4.4 grams of marijuana was found stuffed into Hope's underwear during a routine search of the jail on June 7.

Trying to show that someone had given Hope the pouch, attorney J. Louis Wilkerson called attention to the fact that it was not found when investigator Tom Barnes patted Hope down before searching the cell area.

Barnes testified that after completing a search of the cells, he strip searched Hope and found the pouch stuffed in his undershorts.

When she took the stand, Mary Rhodes, an analytic chemist with the Alabama Department of Forensic Sciences in Birmingham, reported that the pouch which she received in a sealed envelope June 22 contained 35 cigarette papers and 4.4 grams (one seventh of an ounce) of marijuana.

Both the jury and Judge Sharbutt examined the pouch and smelled the contents.

In their closing statements, Wilkerson and his partner Charles M. Purvis contended that there was reasonable doubt. "Was it his (the pouch), they asked the jury? "And did he know what was in it?"

Hope's statement of surprise, "I wondered what you were looking for," when the investigator found the packet indicated that their client was innocent, his lawyers claimed.

In her closing statements to the jury, Assistant District Attorney Patti Smith, who prosecuted the case asked the men and women who would decide the case what they were going to do about the drug problem in Shelby County.

"When a crime is committed," she declared, "everyone asks, 'why don't they do something about it?' Well, you are the 'they'," she told the jurors.

A Coosa County jury found Hope quilty in August, of the March, 1978 murder of Louie Earl Jones. At the time of his drug trial, he was serving time for that crime at Kilby prison in Montgomery.

Glasgow gives Kiwanis Club state of department address

Sheriff James Glasgow outlined his views and problems before the Kiwanis Club of Columbiana at its weekly evening meeting October 25.

The Sheriff conceded that crime is rising everywhere, and that the public needs to be on guard and work together to control the increase. He welcomed the reinforcement of ten slots expected from the Comprehensive Education Training Act (CETA), which he said will still leave him nine positions short of the national average for comparable counties.

He emphasized his need for an additional six officers trained in evidence, drug control and other specialties. With active criminal cases ranging above 60 and jail inmates at or near the maximum of 77, he feels that existing resources are being fully utilized.

The Kiwanis Club will continue to invite county leaders in a program to involve members more closely in community affairs. Scheduled for early meeting are representatives from the Red Cross, from the city beautification program and from the Shelby County Rural Development Committee, and a special meeting honoring farmers as part of the annual Farm City week.

Ventilator shaft offers inmate temporary breath of freedom

by Reporter Staff

He escaped from the Montevallo jail through a ventilator measuring eleven inches by twelve inches.

Less than 48 hours later he was picked up by police in Birmingham.

He is now in the Shelby County jail in Columbiana.

The subject of the escape and capture is Anthony Cunningham, 17 of Homewood.

The episode began when Cunningham was stopped by Montevallo police officer Jesse Payne for driving a car without tail lights. A quick check showed the car Cunningham was driving had been reported stolen.

Cunningham was lodged in the Montevallo jail pending the receipt of stolen car charges from Birmingham police.

Sometime between 4 and 4:30 Saturday afternoon, Cunningham managed to wriggle his 168 pound frame through the small, rectangular ventilator above the locked door.

As authorities reconstruct Cunningham's actions, he apparently walked into the enclosed parking lot of Leach Pontiac, picked out a car and waited until after dark.

Sometime during the early night hours, he started a 1978 Chevrolet that had just been repaired by the garage and rammed the car through steel gates leading to Montevallo's Valley Street.

Montevallo police then inserted the description of the car in the NCIC machine (a computerized device that alerts police to stolen property) and waited. Monday afternoon Montevallo was contacted by the Birmingham Police Department saying that Birmingham Police Officer Linda Graham had picked up Cunningham, still driving the 1978 Chevrolet he had taken from the automobile lot in Montevallo.

A Montevallo officer was dispatched to Birmingham to return Cunningham to Shelby County.

He is now in Shelby County jail in Columbiana where he faces several additional charges, such as escape, car theft, and $1,300 damages to the steel gates.

he would be shot if he got up.

Yancey did as told.

The man returned to the cashier's booth, emptied the money drawer of approximately $150, and left in the light colored car.

When Yancey attempted to call the police, he found there was no money left in the register or his pockets, but he managed to borrow a dime for the phone from a customer who pulled into the station moments later. The customer left before the police arrived.

Yancey told police that he believed the customer could provide further information as to the suspect's car, but at presstime, neither Yancey nor police had been able to locate the customer.

The robbery was investigated by PPD Sergeant A.S. Florence and Lt. Charlie Brown, and further investigation is expected.

EVERYONE WELCOME!

Steering committee adopts plan for monthly teacher meetings

After three meetings, a 45 member steering committee has come up with a new plan for the Professional Development of teachers and other employees of the Shelby County School system.

Approval to begin the program again was given by the Board of Education at their Wednesday meeting.

The panel had voted last month to discontinue the program which called for weekly after school meetings every Thursday until a newly elected steering committee could come up with a more feasible plan.

Under the new setup, system-wide meetings will be held every third Thursday and each local school will plan its own meetings. Folders which teachers sent to the central office with their plans for individual development will be returned to them to work on as they see fit.

Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles, who recommended the program be restarted, reported that his office would be sending literature to each school with suggestions for setting up a Professional Development plan.

Vincent teacher Wayne Sumners, who was one of the most vocal opponents of the original plan, was elected chairman of the new steering committee. Central staff member Evan Major is continuing to serve as program coordinator.

A hearing for Willie David Johnson, a tenured Riverchase Middle School teacher was to have been held at the Wednesday meeting. However, instead of appearing, Johnson sent a letter of resignation.

The school's principal, Dr. Bobby Anderson, had recommended that the contracts of Johnson and another teacher, Odessa Jackson, be terminated.

Mrs. Jackson was dismissed after her hearing in August but Johnson's hearing was put off due to the lack of time with school about to begin.

The Board learned last month that the Alabama Tenure Commission had ruled in favor of Jackson and required that she be rehired. But they are appealing the decision in Shelby County Circuit Court.

Three new teachers were hired at the Board meeting and four others were employed to replace those who had left the classroom for various reasons.

A maintenance technician and mechanic were also replaced and a gas pump operator was added for the SPMH Center buses.

Before contemplating any changes in school attendance zone lines, the central staff decided to clearly define the existing lines.

Building and Grounds Superintendent Ted Lansford went over the boundaries of the Shelby County High School attendance zone for board members using both a map and a written description.

Lansford and Bus Transportation Superintendent William Carter gathered and assembled the information. The two men have already begun to work on the Montevallo School zone area.

United Way passes half way mark

More than 54 percent of the Shelby County United Way goal of $160,185 has already been collected, county chairman Dr. Jim Vickrey reported in the weekly meeting of the Jefferson, Shelby, Walker United Way.

As of Thursday, Oct. 25, $86,987 had been collected by the seven division chairmen in the county.

With two more weeks left in the campaign, Vickrey says he is confident that the county will reach its goal.

"We are making steady progress, although the pace has slowed," he said. "I want to commend again all of those Shelby Countians who are working hard to make the campaign the success it is.

"In particular, I would like to thank Danny Huffman and Donny Matthews, our 'sponsored executives,' for their part in making the effort go."

Chairman of the county divisions are John Lauriello, North Shelby County; Linda Crenshaw, Columbiana-Wilsonville; Don Hughes, Montevallo-Calera; Reid Crotty, Alabaster-Helena; Kyle Lansford, public employees; Patsy Johnson, Pelham-Riverchase; and Steve Sears, professional group.

The public employees section has reached 121 percent of their goal, $5,476 more than $6,630 reported.

The law officers jumped out of their car and surrounded the car in which Hale was riding. They were assisted moments later by investigators Reed Smith, John Pratt and Lt. James Edwards.

The driver of the car, Michael Gentry, a 19 year old black male from Alabaster, was charged with aiding and abetting.

Hale was also charged for a small amount of marijuana found in a cigarette wrapper in his sock.

Hale had been serving a ten year sentence in county jail for bur glary and armed robbery when he escaped last May.

VA retiree recounts memories

by Reporter Staff

Serving Shelby County's veterans has been the job of William Clark of Four Mile for almost 16 years. He retired recently and talked with the Reporter about some of the work his job entailed.

He helped veterans apply for any of the many benefits that were available to them. Most of the veterans he saw were from World War II, because, "There are more of them." But Korea and Vietnam veterans were also often needing his services.

Overseas duty was not a requirement for obtaining veterans benfits. "Having been in the service one day makes you a vet." Clark notes.

Educational benefits available for veterans have changed from the GI bill of WW II days to a variety of aids today. Clark enjoyed helping men and women veterans see that they obtained whatever educational benefits were available to them.

Hospitalization is another benefit that veterans of their dependents often needed help with and Clark provided the assistance they needed.

A veteran himself, Clark joined the Army in 1942, on George Washington's birthday. He smiled when he recalled that although he lived in Anniston at the time, he was not assigned to Fort McClellan in Anniston, but rather, was sent to Fort McPherson, Georgia, for his basic training.

Clark went overseas first to Ireland, then to England during the war. He was in on the initial invasion of Africa and came on up through Italy as the Army advanced.

Although he has officially retired, he is still filling in at the office in the Community Facilities building in Columbiana until the Veterans Administration can appoint a new fulltime person to take over the position.

He has seen many changes during the years, and his office has been moved several times, as the county expanded. The office he is leaving is the brightest and most modern he has had - a far cry from the hard-to-heat room he occupied in the old Columbiana City Hall for several months.

Clark says he is going to take it easy and enjoy his retirement.

River development planned

CaWaCo is the name given to a Resource Conservation and Development project for a five county area comprising the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission of Shelby, Jefferson, Chilton, Walker and Blount counties.

The letters "Ca" is for Cahaba, "Wa" is for Warrior and "Co" is for Coosa, all rivers flowing through these counties.

The project itself is a community and county effort to better use and develop the resources of the area. To Shelby County this project means the possibilities of providing better and more community services, beautification and erosion control on school grounds, road cuts or any other community benefit project that the people of Shelby County want to push for.

It could mean recreation facilities, flood control, county wide water system or waste treatment facilities. The money is limited, but through a council formed from County Commissioners and local Soil & Water Conservation Districts funds from other federal and state agencies plus low interest loans can be requested and efforts pooled to get the job done.

Probate Judge Thomas Snowden, Jr., was recently elected Chairman of the CaWaCo RC&D Council. Judge Snowden, L.W. Garrett, Chairman of the Shelby County Soil & Water Conservation District and District Conservationist, Robert Kelley of the Soil Conservation Service represented Shelby County at the Council meeting.

As chairman, Judge Snowden will represent all counties involved in the project at the state and federal level. He and Mr. Garrett will also work closely with county governmental bodies and the Rural Development Committee to determine what jobs or projects the people of Shelby County want.

For any information concerning this project call 699-7136 or Judge Snowden at 669-2191.

Beef, poultry prices hold foodbasket line

With inflation continuing its pressure on consumers, Alabama food shoppers found budget-saving bargains in meat and poultry items during October. The price decreases for these items helped keep the retail food price increase at less than one percent for the past month, according to the Alabama Farm Bureau Food Price Survey.

The October market basket of twenty items was shopped for $23.97, which is a sixth-tenths of one percent increase since September. Seasonal increases in produce and a moderate upturn in dairy prices contributed to the overall increase, said Dick Fifield, survey director.

With a 1.6 percent decline in beef prices, food shoppers could find special bargains in T-bone steak and ground beef. "Pork chops were also a good buy with a decrease of five cents per pound and both poultry and egg prices declined 3.3 percent," Fifield said. "Since shoppers spend nearly one-third of their food dollars for meats, these meat prices should have a significant impact on their food budget."

The continuing increase of pork and poultry production have kept these prices down, said Fifield. "This is not such good news for the producers. The high grain prices coupled with low prices received by producers have really hurt some farmers. When it takes two pounds of feed to make one pound of poultry, it is hard for producers to meet expenses."

Fifield said the only answer is for the livestock producer to eventually adjust his production level to the demand, preventing over-production. "But, this is a difficult adjustment which, in the meantime, will allow shoppers to reap the benefits. Those consumer groups who were enraged about meat prices last winter should now acknowledge that our agricultural system does provide abundant, inexpensive food items."

Northwest Alabama had the lowest market basket price this month with $23.42 northeast, $23.78; central, $24.19, and south, $24.48.

'Pennies' fraud pursued

A high level of unemployment is usually accompanied by increased fraud in the state's unemployment compensation program. The prospect of "easy money" is apparently an irresistible temptation for many claimants as economic pressures build, points out William J. Davis, director of the Alabama Department of Industrial Relations.

Davis warned, however, that the department has one of the most active fraud detection units in the nation. The department uses computers and a team of investigators to ferret out those claimants who abuse the system.

Fraud is currently costing the state unemployment compensation program about $3 million annually in benefit dollars. Eventually, the department will recover about 50 percent of the fraudulent overpayments. "They unemployment compensation rip-off is probably the most common white collar crime in Alabama today," Davis continued.

Fraud is committed most frequently, the director explained, by claimants who initially have a legitimate claim for benefits but who continue to draw benefits after they resume working. Such violations will usually be detected by the computerized "cross match" system, which matches employer wage data with claims information. The computer identifies those persons who are simultaneously earning wages and drawing benefits.

Making a false statement for the purpose of obtaining jobless benefits is a misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum fine of $250 and/or a jail sentence of up to three months. Each false statement constitutes a separate offense. In addition, the department may assess an administrative penalty which eliminates or reduces future benefits.

Troopers to go after DWI, speeders

A statewide Selective Traffic Enforcement Program (STEP) began in Alabama in October. An $832,500 funding of state trooper overtime pay will reap nearly 88,000 extra man-hours in the crackdown on the DWI and/or speed violator on many segments of Alabama highways.

The first of four intense enforcement periods will end December 31. Activity is now taking place in the Opelika, Dothan, and Decatur districts.

January 1-March 31, 1980 will target the districts of Mobile, Huntsville, and Anniston; March 1-May 31, 1980 pull in Birmingham and Montgomery; and overlapping programs again will take place with the April 1-July 7, 1980 activity in the Selma, Tuscaloosa, and Evergreen districts.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana a member of the FDIC.

When Bro. Jim Merrell and I visited Mr. and Mrs. Juzan on Goodwin Street we always went next door to visit Mr. and Mrs. Curt Falkner. Why, I don't know, really.

You see, visiting shut-ins was our job at the Methodist Church, and Mr. and Mrs. Falkner belonged to the Baptist Church.

But we visited them every other Thursday morning.

And when Mr. Juzan passed away and Mrs. Juzan went to live with her two daughters, Lila Bristow on East College Street and Loreen Falkner on Silk Stocking Street, one for a month and then the other for a month, we still kept seeing Mr. and Mrs. Falkner on Goodwin St.

And when Mrs. Juzan passed away and they put her beside Mr. Juzan in the cemetery at Summer Hill, we were still visiting Mr. and Mrs. Falkner on Goodwin Street.

But time is a gypsy. And she pitches her tent in many places before a fellow's race is run. Like the Thursday when it came time to visit again, and Bro. Jim and Esther had moved down Alexander City way, and I was starting out on my first trip alone.

I went to see Mrs. King over the mountain and Mrs. Bentley on the Wilsonville road and Mrs. Ellis on East College Street and Harold Harlin two doors down the street and Mr. and Mrs. Hap Hatchett on East College Street and then to Mr. and Mrs. Curt Falkner's house on Goodwin Street.

And suddenly it occurred to me why Bro. Jim and I were still visiting the Falkners when he moved away, and why I was still doing it today. We had fallen in love with them and they had fallen in love with us, and there just wasn't any way to stop visiting them every other Thursday morning.

And then time ran away again. Mrs. Falkner, who we loved so much, passed away in the hospital at Alabaster. For weeks she had planned to have Bro. Jim come back and take part in her funeral. And, too, she had planned to have Bro. Stroud, her former pastor, come back from Montgomery and take a part.

But it didn't work out that way. Bro. Jim took suddenly ill the night before the funeral and Bro. Stroud was in an automobile wreck on his way to Columbiana.

I was talking with Mrs. Marie Atchison, Mrs. Falkner's daughter the next day. She was broken-hearted. She talked about the preacher who, at the last minute, took charge.

"He did wonderfully", she whispered. "But he didn't know mother. We wanted so much to have somebody who knew her. Who could say the things about her we wanted to hear."

I didn't answer for a while. I had to think. And I had to have time.

"For a lady," I said, "who lived her life as beautifully as your mother lived hers, in a town where everybody knew her-- why would it be necessary to remind them of it--These people who knew her so well, and were aware of how beautiful she had lived her long life among them."

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Animals are fun to have around. Unless they're accident prone.

It seems that a goodly number of the furry, four legged creatures that have either lived in or outside our home have either been run over, caught in barbed wire or otherwise banged up, gashed or mangled.

We have had animals wearing bandages, splints and with stitches in various and sundry areas of their anatomy. However, until a couple of weeks ago, we had never come against the problem of amputation.

The animal that needed his leg removed was a cat. But the vet had told us he would put a pin in the injured leg when he performed his examination, so we were unprepared for what was to come.

After operating, the vet found the injury was too severe to repair and he informed my daughter the cat would either have to be put to sleep or its leg would have to be taken off.

So while she tried to reach me to get my reaction to the dilemma, the cat lay zonked out on the operating table. Unfortunately, when she called the office, I was out watching a parade.

When I came in and found her message, I couldn't locate her. So poor pussy spent a long afternoon on the sterile table.

The decision about what course of action to take was difficult becuase it was a strange cat that had just showed up at our house with the injured leg.

After a conference of about two minutes, my daughter and I decided we couldn't bear to tell the vet to put the adorable little creature to sleep, so he went ahead with the amputation.

I had misgivings about it though. Envisioning this poor little animal trying feebly to make his way through the house gave me the willies.

When he came home, however, my fears were put quickly to rest. That little buggar can go faster than any four legged cat I've ever seen!

He can run rings around the last cat we had. Poor Baby Huey was the last of a long line of cats that first showed up at our barn when my children were young.

Anyhow, Baby Huey was caught in a screen door when he was a kitten and the injury affected his gait. On occasions he'd walk sideways and when he'd run, his back end would often pass his front end.

Our new feline has been dubbed Tuesday by my granddaughter. That's a silly name, isn't it? I much preferred Firday, but there's no changing a three year old's mind.

The gash in our horse's leg has finally healed after three months, so we're keeping our fingers crossed that all will be well in the animal world for awhile.

Maybe I'll even be able to get the vet bill paid off by the end of the year if nothing else happens.

Group boosts conservation

Recent years have seen a dramatic increase in the number of people who flock to our woodlands and streams to enjoy the peace and beauty of nature. In many areas the sheer numbers of people are destroying the values which attracted them in the first place, adding a new problem to the difficult task of protecting our natural heritage.

On Tuesday evening, November 6, the Birmingham Chapter of the Alabama Conservance will present a program entitled "The Wilderness Ethic". Its major feature will be a slide tape filmed in the Pacific Northwest, emphasizing practical ways in which individuals can avoid unnecessary destruction of natural values while enjoying our threatened resource of wilderness. Then, representatives of the Alabama Trails Association will present a brief slide presentation on hiking and camping in Alabama, spotlighting nearby areas which can be both enjoyed and protected through "The Wilderness Ethic".

The program is free and open to the public. It begins at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, November 6th at the Red Mountain Museum Auditorium on 22nd Street South. Free parking in the Museum lot.

Alabaster Rotarians hear 'hypnosis is just a state of mind'

by David Moore

"There are still a few people who think we swing little magic coins and wear black capes," Dr. Hilda Tant told the Alabaster Rotary Club Thursday afternoon. "But hypnosis is just a state of mind."

A native Alabamian, Dr. Tant studied at the University of Kentucky School of Medicine, Harvard and MIT. She is currently director of the Motivation and Hypnosis Center in Birmingham. She was invited to speak to the Alabaster Club by Rotarian, Dr. Stacy Childs.

To be hypnotized, she explained, is to be relaxed and more alert, which enables one to function to the best of his or her ability.

"It doesn't say that you can win all the time, only that you play to the best of your ability," Dr. Tant said, adding that hypnosis provides one with a mental replay of an instance to learn how to react to future, similar situations.

"Hypnosis is a way of putting in a goal and focussing your energies on it," she said. Dr. Tant noted that she had obtained results in hypnotizing people who had decided to quit smoking or lose weight.

She cited several cases she had worked in conjunction with police and lawyers concerning the use of hypnosis to enable subjects to recall facts they had blocked out of their minds and thought they had forgotten. Dr. Tant said she has worked with the Pelham Police Department on cases.

The doctor said she has also had great success using hypnosis to relieve pain in cancer victims, and as a substitute for anaesthesia during operations and dental work.

The mind, she pointed out, releases a pain controller if one relaxes and inserts thoughts of comfort into their thinking.

By the use of hypnosis and imagination, one can remove limitations he or she might put on themselves, Dr. Tant said. She explained that to concentrate on what you don't want is the wrong approach to solving any problem. In your thinking, she said to "be sure to put in what you do want."

Touching on the untapped powers of the mind, Dr. Tant said that God didn't give Orville and Wilbur Wright wings, but a brain instead.

The average human uses only a tenth of his brain's capabilities. But, Dr. Tant said, hypnosis can be used to increase that percentage. She added that you get out of your subconscious what you put into it.

Dr. Tant told the Rotarians at the well attended meeting that "hypnosis is a God-given talent and ability we all possess."

ON SOUTHERN RAILWAY, THIS COMPACT CAR TRAVELS 145 MILES ON A GALLON OF FUEL.

"Guess how far it could travel on a truck."

L. Stanley Crane, Chairman, Southern Railway System, Washington, D.C. 20013

The railroad is the most efficient user of fuel in the transportation industry. Bar none.

And the Southern Railway is one of the most efficient railroads in the country.

For instance, on the Southern, a 3,089 lb. compact car can travel 145 miles on one gallon of fuel. How far could a truck carry it on the same amount of fuel? Well, the railroad is four times more efficient than trucks, 60 times more efficient than planes; and even more efficient than barges. So it's easy to see that trucks can't carry freight anywhere near as far as railroads can per gallon of fuel.

What does this mean for the future? Well, it means that trucks will be used less and less for long hauls.

More and more products will ride on the Southern, and trucks will be used for distribution at the other end of the line. Because, in the coming years, only the railroad will have the energy-efficiency for long hauls.

We have the energy for the long haul.

MMS raises $2,000 in fall fund drive

Being king and queen for a day at Montevallo Middle School means not having to attend classes. It also means receiving a crown and royal robe in a special ceremony as students, teachers and parents look on.

The school's annual fall festival is the culmination of a fund raising drive by middle school students with the top money raisers receiving special recognition and prizes.

A little over $2,000 was collected during this year's drive, with Penny Stoudemire winning first place for the girls and Bob Peete copping the top spot for the boys. They received their royal trappings during a ceremony Friday morning.

Runners up were: Tammy Beane, Bart Dennis, 1st; Sheila Tripp, Jon Carter, 2nd; Suzie Montgomery, Scott Austin, 3rd; Nancy Shinnick, Eric Burrage, 4th; Roy Lucas, Michelle Kelly, 5th.

Middle School principal Frances Anthony congratulated students for going all out to make the drive the most successful one the school has ever put on.

Steve Price from radio station Kicks 106 emceed the program which was arranged by faculty member Gayle Robbins and her aid Brenda McQueen.

During the afternoon, students participated in such activities as pitch-a-dish, bingo, surprise walk, coke bottle toss and disco dancing. The fall festival was directed by faculty member Randy Whealton.

Sixty four students took part in the fund raising drive which is put on to booster the physical education fund, the library fund and the general fund.

Prizes in the competition were donated by parents and a number of local merchants.

Top fund raisers

Finalists in the drive to raise funds at Montevallo Middle School were Bob Peete, Mr. MMS, Penny Stoudermire, Miss MMS, and runners up: Tammy Beane, Bart Dennis, Sheila Tripp, Jon Carter, Susie Montgomery, Scott Austin, Nancy Shinnick, Eric Burrage, Roy Lucas and Michelle Kelly.

Persons wishing to help or donate to this cause may call the Spring Creek Church on Highway 12, near Montevallo at any of the following numbers: 665-4183, 665-4184, 665-4185.

Chelsea Club asks coach to resign

The Chelsea Quarterback Club voted Tuesday night to ask Chelsea High School football coach Richard Conkle to resign.

At the meeting, a two-thirds majority concurred in the request. A reason advanced for asking for Conkle's resignation as head football coach was "inefficiency as a coach" according to Quarterback Club spokesman Bob Bearden.

Conkle is expected to make a response to the request by next week.

FACTS ABOUT VENEERS
Years ago, some people were against using wood furniture with veneer construction.

But with improved manufacturing methods and materials, veneered furniture can actually give you more economy, beauty and strength than ever before.
In veneering, slices of grained wood are sandwiched together with the grain of each ply going crosswise to its neighbor, actually making it much stronger and less apt to warp.
Much veneer used in furniture is "five ply", although three and seven ply panels are sometimes used. The most costly woods are often used for veneers. It enables manufacturers to use scarce and beautiful woods in a more efficient and economical way.
The greatest advance in the use of veneers took place when new glues and adhesives were perfected to produce a more secure bond essential to aircraft and marine construction. This process was then applied to furniture construction.
Perhaps the greatest advantage of veneers to the furniture user is that it makes possible more beautiful graining of wood at a popular price.
Meanwhile, to see beautiful furniture of all kinds, we invite you to come in and browse with no hurry and no obligation. We'll look forward to seeing you.

DID YOU KNOW?

Our residential customers use more electricity than the national average. 24% more.

In 1978, the average residence in the U.S. used 8,849 kilowatt-hours. Alabama Power customers used an average of 10,939 kilowatt-hours. One of the reasons for higher use in Alabama is the lack of adequate home insulation. Another reason is the increasing use of air conditioning and other convenient electric appliances.

Learning, games and entertainment all in one!

YOUR PERSONAL COMPUTER, the Apple II Plus from Apple Computer, Inc., is the perfect tutor. From basic math and word skills programs for early learners to colorful high resolution graphics which illustrate geometric concepts to older students—the Apple II Plus handles them all. What's more, this can be done in color with sound effects to match. Then, when the learning is done, the Apple can entertain with such popular games as Breakout and Startrek.

Personal computer gives child the gift of speech

Since personal computers caught the public eye in 1975, there has been speculation about the day when our lives would revolve around these wondrous machines.

Few people, however, would dispute that such a dream has preceeded reality by a considerable margin.

At the end of 1978, the industry had installed less than 250,000 units. Most people have never seen or touched a personal computer.

Indeed, most people don't know what a personal computer is. Yet for all this, personal computers are striding rapidly into American life.

Would the real personal computer please stand up?

A home computer is a device that serves the average person without prior training or detailed instructions.

It does tasks, such as watering the lawn and maintaining temperature control.

And, like a television set, it is incorporated into the popular culture. But, the role of the TV is understood, and a support network exists (broadcasters, repair shops, retailers) for the product to be readily put to work in a useful function.

People don't buy television sets; they buy entertainment and information.

A personal computer, on the other hand—like a calculator or a tool kit—is a device whose size and price allow it to be operated by knowledgeable individuals for personal use.

It is not yet a consumer appliance; nevertheless, many persons use such machines every day to handle tasks, such as text editing and scientific calculations.

Out of such use will come the knowledge and support required to make computers a consumer item.

So what's it good for, anyhow?

The mass market (unlike engineers and accountants) is not satisfied with dealing in numbers.

As it begins to use the computer, its first demand will be for a "friendly" machine.

It's one thing to sit an engineer in front of a stack of printout. If interested enough, he or she will break the code.

But, for a demanding audience, take a ten year-old child. Born in the television age, raised upon the sophisticated graphics of Sesame Street—how can a traditional computer hold a child's interest?

Yet, it probably will be important for that child to grow up understanding computers.

Fortunately, this vast market is spawning computers that can satisfy such an audience.

The most progressive of these personal computers is the Apple II, made by Apple Computer, Inc.

This machine was the first personal computer to combine "one box" packaging with such unique human interface elements as 15-color graphics; 6-color, high-resolution graphics; sound (and speech) synthesis; and joystick hand-control inputs.

These humanizing elements have made possible some fascinating applications.

Chris is seven. Cerebral palsy has left him unable to control his body. He is as intelligent as his peers, but can neither walk nor talk.

He is unable to communicate except by grunts and by the movement of his knee. For him, an Apple computer brought the gift of dialogue.

Chris' father is an engineer with personal computer knowledge.

He developed a system that could present words or letters on a video screen, allowing sentences to be constructed by means of a moveable cursor which could be controlled by a knee switch.

Thanks to this machine, Chris can "speak." He can build sentences on a screen to talk to his friends. Chris can now reach out to affect things that he can't reach from his wheelchair.

Using a standard Apple interface to remotely control AC devices, Chris can now turn on or off lamps, entertainment equipment and other household items.

Chris thinks it's a miracle. It's not; it's a personal computer, on its way to becoming an appliance.

Keeping up with the Jones'

Everyone talks about keeping up with the Jones', but have you ever tried to follow their television viewing schedule?

Mr. Jones used to set his alarm clock every night so that next morning he could jump up, turn off the alarm and switch on the TV to the Today Show while he dressed to go to work.

But now he has a television set that can be programmed to automatically turn on at 7:00 AM on the proper channel, becoming his new alarm clock, Monday through Friday.

Junior Jones is the next one up in the morning. As soon as his father leaves for work, Junior watches cartoons.

The Jones' don't like Junior to "play" with the TV controls, so they have programmed their set to switch from the Today Show channel to the cartoon show at 8:30 AM. When the cartoons are over, the set turns itself off.

During the course of the day, Mrs. Jones keeps busy with household chores, but she does have one favorite daytime serial.

Before, she sometimes got so busy she missed the program. But now, Mrs. Jones has programmed the time and channel of her show, and it comes on automatically every day.

In the evening, the Jones' enjoy prime-time television, So, last Saturday, they scheduled the ones they wanted to watch during the week.

On this particular night, they watch an hour-long family show at 7:30 on Channel 5, and the TV set switches to a good movie from 8:30 to 11:00 on another channel without anyone touching the controls.

Mr. Jones, an avid fan of the Tonight Show, relaxes on the sofa and enjoys the opening monologue. But there are times when he falls asleep before the show is over.

Now he doesn't have to worry about the set running all night or waking up to see the test pattern. He's programmed the set to turn off automatically at 1:00 AM.

Although the family is fictitious, the programmable television is not. The manufacturer, RCA, recently introduced an AutoProgrammer with Seven-Day Memory.

The 19-inch ColorTrak receiver, with special microprocessor and electronic memory, allows the user, through simple keyboard commands, to automatically tell the set what programs are desired during the coming week.

Other features include an AC security outlet for plugging in a lamp that can also be scheduled to turn on and off at selected intervals. That's an attractive feature for people who leave a home unattended.

Be a television star

Those evenings that friendly neighbors dread, home movies of summer vacations or other family events, can now be turned into welcome social events that leave everyone in a happier frame of mind.

The new secret ingredient is a portable video cassette recorder and camera that add flexibility and convenience to television viewing in the home.

The get-together can begin with a surprise video taping of the guests' arrival. From this point on, everyone gets into the act by serving as star, director, producer or cameraman.

Outdoors, the new portable VCR system from RCA can record up to one and a half hours of future TV entertainment.

When used in the home for off-the-air recording, the SelectaVision portable system can tape four hours of your favorite programs.

Either way, indoors or outdoors, you have the ingredients for a video party with undivided attention from your guests.

Then you can slip in the tape of your summer vacation before they realize what's happening.

Audio and video—have it your way!

Consumer electronics products tailored to individual needs

By DAVID LACHENBRUCH
Editorial Director
TELEVISION DIGEST

(TM)High technology tailored for human needs. That best describes the new consumer electronic products now being demonstrated at area audio and video dealers.

The influence of the computer is evident in every family of these new products. The tiny microprocessor—a mini-computer on a thumbnail-sized chip of semiconductor material—and other sophisticated integrated circuits make it possible to design equipment which can accomplish functions never before attempted in products for the consumer.

In color television, for example, tuning is now completely automatic.

Whether remotely controlled or tuned at the set's control panel, the picture now pops in on command in natural color without any fine-tuning or knob-twiddling.

The majority of models feature electronic tuning, and many are pushbutton controlled.

The new technology gives you freedom of choice in screen size—from tiny battery-operated color sets with screens measuring five inches or less diagonally to bigger-than-life seven-foot projection screens.

Black-and-white television hasn't been neglected in this micro-electronics revolution.

Some are designed as complete mini home entertainment centers, with built-in audio tape recorders, AM and FM or even shortwave radio systems.

New in hi-fi

In the new audio products, the sound can be just about as life-like as you want.

Digital tuning in some receiver models completely does away with difficulty in locating stations.

As in the new TV sets, you just push a button or scan-tuning bar and there's your station.

Cassette recorders automatically adjust themselves to the type of tape you're using, rewind at the end of the tape and even let you locate specific musical selections by mini-computer control. Record turntables and changers have reached the same level of automation.

Of course, there are many highly sophisticated hi-fi components to accommodate you, and to reward you with sound of previously unattainable clarity.

If your home doesn't have space for large audio components, there are new components for you, too.

Miniaturized high-fidelity stereo components now deliver unbelievably good sounds from tiny packages, providing another increase in freedom of choice.

If you prefer your sound all-in-one, you can have it your way once again. Today's new compact stereo systems are capable of delivering sound rivaling that of high-quality components.

Also, the same good sound you've become accustomed to at home is now available in the automobile, thanks to new autosound components and ensembles.

Digital displays

Even the portable radio is coming under the influence of the computer. Portable clock radios display the time on clear digital screens. Others have all-electronic pushbutton tuning of the type originally developed for color TV sets.

The little wristwatch has been completely changed by the microelectronics revolution. New models include stopwatches, alarms, multitime-zone memories and perpetual calendars.

And, for those who might forget the annual battery change, no need to worry—solar watches which use the sun's energy to charge the batteries make this a once-in-five-years chore.

Electronic watches are available with either digital or conventional dial-and-hand faces.

Home computers, using either their own built-in screens or designed as accessories to the family TV, have increased in versatility through the availability of many new plug-in programs to meet family requirements or just for entertainment and, of course, they can also be programmed by the user.

Video games have come a long way from the table-tennis-and-hockey machine of just a few years ago, and they now feature a wide variety of sophisticated animated pastimes similar to those found in the most up-to-date amusement arcades. And the games are changed merely by snapping in a new program cartridge.

Many programmable home video games can easily be upgraded to computer status with the addition of special programs, keyboards and additional memory banks widely available.

The little calculator has become a tiny computer. There are versions which play endlessly entertaining or mind-stumping games.

Others serve as pocket memo pads, storing phone numbers, appointments and birthdays.

Traveler's aid

Among the fastest-selling are those which can serve as language translators, electronic cookbooks, bartenders' guides or tax helpers at the change of program modules.

The latest ones can even talk to you through the application of a new marvel known as the "speech synthesizer."

One of the most successful new wonder products is the home videocassette recorder, or VCR.

It can store up the TV programs you miss for viewing later, let you make your own color-picture-and-sound home videotapes with an accessory camera, or show you recent movies in your home theater.

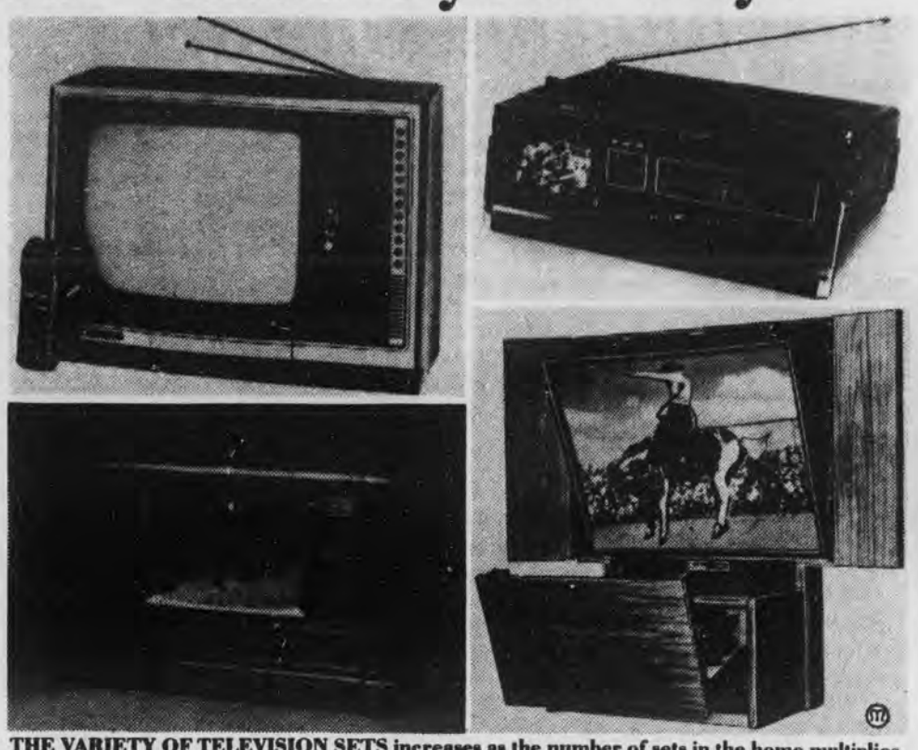
This year, playing time has been extended and new features added in deluxe models, including slow- and fast-motion and still-picture as well as remote control of many or all functions.

Battery-operated portable and set-and-forget pre-programmed models are available under many brand names.

Just coming on the market in a few areas is the videodisc player, which can display pictures and recreate sound, both in highest fidelity, from discs, which resemble phonograph records.

Who says computers are "impersonal?"

The mini-computer has increased and diversified the products of the consumer electronics industry and generated audio and video products suited for the widest variety of requirements for information, education and just plain enjoyment.



THE VARIETY OF TELEVISION SETS increases as the number of sets in the home multiplies. Striking color TV consoles, popular portables and versatile combination sets, with AM/FM radio and/or cassettes, are among the new design for 1979-1980. Color TV sets with 'brains' get best picture automatically

By DAVID LACHENBRUCH
Editorial Director
TELEVISION DIGEST

The marriage of television to the electronic computer has produced a new generation of color TV sets which are designed to provide the best picture every time—automatically.

Most models of the new 1980 color sets have incorporated computer functions in their tuning and color-adjustment systems to take care of all the work, leaving the viewer to do nothing but enjoy.

For example, the vast majority of consoles, and many portables and table models, now feature all-electronic tuning.

This system does away with the last mechanical components in the TV set, not only making channel-selection much easier but eliminating one of the major causes of service calls.

A large number of tuning systems use the computer principle of "random access"—which simply means any channel may be selected at random, without the necessity to tune through any others.

This is usually accomplished by pushbutton (or "touchbutton," which even saves the effort of pushing). For example, you can tune directly from Channel 12 to Channel 36 to Channel 7.

More improved tuning

Another popular tuning feature is high-speed channel-scan, which lets you tune all occupied channels in sequence, automatically skipping any channel which isn't on the air in your area.

With the advent of electronic tuning, wireless remote control is becoming an increasingly popular feature at a lower price premium.

New sets adjust color and tint automatically, either by reacting to a special "vertical interval reference" (VIR) signal which is sent out by many stations along with the picture, through a series of computerized color-consistency circuits, or a combination of both.

New TV sound

For the first time, many major television manufacturers have sharply improved the sound systems in at least some of their sets.

This is designed to make full use of new high-fidelity network systems, which employ satellite or microwave relays to transmit far better sound along with network programs.

Some TV set manufacturers have added separate audio amplifiers, of the type used in hi-fi systems, to improve sound reproduction.

Others use "synthesizers" to provide the directionality and clarity normally associated with stereophonic sound.

The improvement in both picture and sound for 1980 have been at least partly influenced by the growing demand for superior instruments to recreate the ouput of home video recorders and videodisc systems.

Both systems are capable of producing extremely high quality pictures, and the videodisc (now in the introductory phase in some areas of the country) can supply pictures and sound which are superior to normal broadcast reception.

The variety of television sets continues to increase as the number of sets per home multiplies.

Color portables with screens five inches or less in diameter are designed to play indoors on house power or outside using their own batteries.

Giant screen TV

Projection color sets are a separate category in themselves.

These giant-screen models project a picture onto a screen which is separate from the picture tube, in a manner similar to projecting a motion picture.

Among specialized new color sets for 1980 are those which may be pre-programmed to turn off, switch channels and turn off up to a week or more in advance, so you never need miss your favorite shows just because you forgot.

Other new sets let you watch two or more channels at one time on several screens or a small picture inserted in the larger one.

With a special closed-circuit TV camera, these sets let you keep and eye on Baby or monitor the front door while you're absorbed in the Nine O'Clock Movie.

The black-and-white set has become "everywhere television." You can take it wherever you go. Screens range from as small as 1½ inches to 22 inches.

The newest product is the "mini-combo," a complete entertainment center in a compact package. Most of these units also contain audio cassette recorders and AM-FM radios.

Inflation fighters

Best of all, for the consumer, a combination of technology and strong competition among TV set manufacturers has resulted in products whose prices label them as "best buys," products which have not suffered from the inroads of inflation which are manifest in almost every other aspect of America's daily life.

The Consumer Price Index for all products has more than doubled the index for television sets in the past 12 years, clearly establishing the video value.

Survey shows popularity of TV

(TM)More television sets are owned today than either telephones or automobiles, according to an RCA survey.

There are approximately 140 million color and black-and-white television sets in American homes, compared with 120 million residential telephones and 119 million family cars.

The television set achieved its dominant position in America despite the fact that black-and-white television is just 33 years old, and color television celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

The automobile is about 80 years old and the telephone has been around for more than a century.

RCA said 1978 marked the first time that the number of color TV sets in use exceeded the number of black-and-white units.

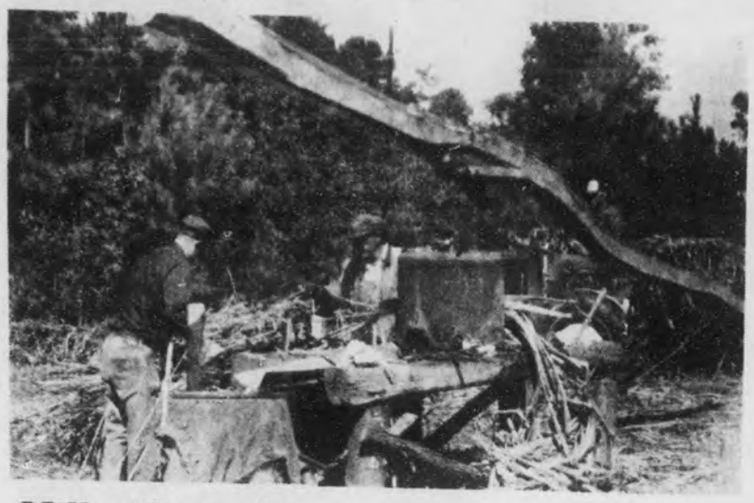
Helena man revives sorghum making art

Modern technology has come a long way in 50 years. In fact, most of the present day generation hasn't an inkling of how sorghum syrup used to be made.



Mill still works

The tractor driven by John Cox takes the place of mules that powered the mill when it was used 20 years ago. Grover White and Leroy Jenkins are feeding the cane into the mill.

But if a Helena man has his way, all that will be changed.

Tullus Cox decided that young folks ought to know about things like that and his solution was to recreate the process of a bygone day.

This year Cox had the syrup making process filmed and he plans to take it to all the schools in the county that are interested in seeing how families once produced their own syrup.

Next year he wants to set up a day where anyone in the county who wants to have a firsthand look at the exacting process and enjoy the social atmosphere that goes along with it, will be able to do so.

When Cox first got the idea of letting young people in on the commonplace procedure that he engaged in for "20 years straight," he leased an acre and a half of land south of Calera and planted cane.

He was also able to get his old mill back in operating condition and set it up near the field. A temporary pit was built and the copper pans he's used 20 years ago were cleaned up and installed.

After Cox and members of his family harvested the cane, they hooked a tractor to a crossbeam on the old mill and started squeezing the juice.

When it had boiled to the proper consistency, the juice was poured into cans to be used by members of the family and friends.

"We should be able to get about 300 gallons from what we've harvested," remarked Cox. He proudly noted that he and his father had once produced 2,800 gallons in a season.

During the recent syrup making process, Cox and his helpers arrived at the mill every morning at 6 and stayed at their task until 8 in the evening. "This used to be a big social event," he reported.

Old fashioned way

Tullus Cox keeps a watchful eye on bubbling syrup pans. The distilled product can be seen running from a spout. The type of land on which the cane is grown makes a difference in the way the syrup tastes, Cox says.

UM physical ed club named top in state

The University of Montevallo's Physical Education (PE) Club was named the top collegiate club in the state recently, winning he first annual Baughman Award.

The UM club won the award during the Alabama State Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation annual conference at Samford University.

Tammy Richardson of Selma, club president, said the club was selected because of its wide range of activities -- from raising $4,000 for a scholarship fund to working with local school students during special activity days, working in a district Special Olympics and helping construct playground equipment at an area elementary school.

They even sent 20 members to the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance national convention, Miss Richardson said.

The Baughman Award is named in honor of Dr. Willis T. Baughman, a retired University of Alabama physical education professor and former state, regional and national officer in PE organizations.

Highest award

Ray Nolen, 10, son of Linda and Jack Nolen of Alabaster received the Arrow of Light award at Cub Scout Pack 394's meeting last Thursday night. The Arrow of Light is the highest award a Cub can receive, and Nolen is the first scout from the pack so honored. A former member of Webelos Den 2, Nolen was inducted Thursday night into Alabaster Troop 20. A total of 77 various awards were given out at the meeting. (Photo by Dave Woodrow)

The four term Congressman from Illinois, has recently made good showings in both the Florida and New Hampshire primaries.

The Shelby County Republican Party is hosting Crane's visit.

Bob Dewey, chairman of the county Republican Party urges all new residents and unregistered voters to take advantage of the voter registration to be held November 6-8, from 5-9 p.m. at Valley Elementary School. Calera romps to 42-7 win over Montevallo Calera revenged four years of losing to Montevallo last Friday night by whipping the Bulldogs 42 to 7 in Montevallo. The Eagles' Bill Seay rushed for over 200 yards and three touchdowns in a game that was closer than the score might indicate.

Calera scored first with a 45 yard drive in the first quarter. Seay carried the final three yards for the score with Johnny Ryan booting the PAT.

In the second quarter. Calera marched 74 yards for another touchdown. The eight play drive ended with Ryan passing 48 yards to Raymond King. Ryan missed the PAT with 6:05 left in the half, leaving the score 13 to 0.

Calera fumbled the opening kickoff of the third quarter, giving the Bulldogs field position on the 16 yard line. Four plays later, Montevallo scored with Rance Gaddis running the final yard. Jeff Hall booted the PAT making the score 13 to 7 with 9:05 left in the third quarter.

Late in the same period, Calera fumbled to Montevallo again but the Bulldogs returned the favor seconds later. Bill Seay raced 38 yards to get the Eagles out of a hole to start a 73 yard drive. Nine plays later Ryan again connected to King, this time for a 20 yard touchdown pass. Fran Blanchard ran in the conversion on a fake PAT making the score 20 to 7 with 28 seconds left in the third period.

For six more minutes, Montevallo fought above its head, but a pass interference call took the wind out of the Dogs. The next play, Seay burst for a 51 yard touchdown run on a dive play to give the Eagles the go-ahead boost. Ryan added the PAT.

On Calera's next possession, Seay again broke for a touchdown. This one coming on the second play and good for a 66 yard run. Ryan added the PAT making the score 35 to 7.

Late in the fourth period, Montevallo fumbled on the 31 yard line. Ten plays later with only 13 seconds left in the game. Richard Russell scored on a one yard run. Ryan booted the PAT making the final score 42 to 7.

Calera's forcing unit dominating us all night" Coach Richard Gilliam said of the game. "Their quickness and reaction stopped us even when it looked like we had them fooled.

"We're certainly tickled to death to win the game" coach Danny Alverson said for Calera. "Our defense had a great game in holding back Montevallo.

"Our seniors really wanted to win this one and in the fourth quarter they just went out and got it" Alverson added.

Leading the Calera defense was Dale Smith, Jeff Stewart, Lloyd King, Curtis Barefield and Kirk Ross.

Montevallo defenders earning praise from coach Gilliam were Cray Cardone, Jeff Hall, Rex Wallace and David and Steve Melsoni.

This week Calera travels to Maplesville before meeting Billingsley the following week. That game will decide the Area championship. Montevallo mean while faces West Blocton this week before meeting homecoming challanger T.C.T.S. the following week for the season finale.

Vincent volleyball team wins Region, heads to state

Vincent's Yellow Jackets won the Region Championship in volleyball last Saturday at Vincent. The Jackets defeated Lincoln 15-13 and 15-12 for the title and right to advance to the state tournament which will be held this Friday at Bradshaw High School in Florence.

Vincent won the Area title on Thursday, defeating Talladega County Training School and Chelsea in a double elimination tournament which was also held at Vincent. Named to the All Area team were Sharon Peterson and Patricia Brown from Vincent and Cindy Rich and Flora Hawkins from Chelsea. Hissy Williams from T.C.T.S. and Janie Jones from Winterboro were also named to the team.

Members of the winning Vincent volleyball team are: Patricia Brown, Mary Ann Bradford, Sharon Peterson, Sondra McWhorter, Jeffie Peterson, Teresa Peterson, Regina Jordan, Wanda McCrimon, Kelvie Kelley, Doris Brown, Loretta Perkins and Sherry Kelley.

Coach for the team is Debbie Jackson.

Vincent capitalizes on Wildcat miscues

Vincent held true to form against Shelby County last Friday night, capitalizing on Wildcat mistakes and turning them into touchdowns for a 20 to 10 win. "We made two mistakes in the kicking game that got us beat" Coach Mark Bradley said of the contest.

Vincent scored in the first quarter with James Oden racing 19 yards for the touchdown. The drive was kept alive by a roughing the kicker penalty against Shelby County. Rodney Driggers added the PAT for the 7 to 0 lead.

Shelby County came back in the second quarter with a 73 yard drive that totaled 12 plays. Arthur Johnson got the call for an 11 yard run which garnered the six points. Dan Head booted the PAT to tie the game at 7-7.

Vincent went back on top minutes later as Rodney Driggers blocked a Shelby County punt. The Jackets drove 25 yards for the go-ahead touchdown. Dwight Spradley burst for the final four yards and Driggers added the PAT making the halftime score 14 to 7.

In the third period, Shelby County put together a 70 yard drive. Dan Head kicked a 26 yard field goal to make the score 10 to 14.

That score remained until the final two minutes. Shelby County failed to get another sustained drive going. In the fourth period with less than two minutes remaining, the Wildcats tried a fourth down play which needed 15 yards for a first down. The play failed and Vincent took over. On the first play, Sidney Yowe broke for a 49 yard touchdown run which put the game on ice. Driggers missed the PAT to the left but the game was over.

"We haven't won in Columbiana for as long as I can remember" Coach Gary Garrett told the Reporter. "We're just real happy to win one. Columbiana has a good ball club but we do too."

Shelby County accumilated 297 yards offense to Vincent's 104 in the game. Runningback Arthur Johnson was lost for the season with a shoulder separation.

This week Vincent takes a vacation before meeting Chelsea for the season finale. Shelby County travels to Clanton to play Chilton County. Vincent, now 7-2 and without a playoff hope seeks to end the season with one of its best records with a win over the Hornets in the East County rivalry.

Shelby County, 3-5, hopes to end a five game losing streak in Clanton and then whip Leeds to end the year with a break-even record.

Thompson wins in overtime

Thompson came from behind last Friday night to win one of the toughest games of the season. The Warriors whipped Sylacauga 24 to 21 in overtime to keep a perfect 8-0 season record with two games to play.

The Warriors scored a dramatic fourth quarter touchdown to tie the game and send it into overtime. Winning the toss in overtime, Coach Larry Simmons elected to give Sylacauga the first try at scoring from ten yards out. On the first overtime play for the Aggies, Mark Gamble intercepted a pass.

Thompson then took three tries at penetrating the Aggie defense without success. On the fourth play, senior place kicker Steve Smitherman booted a 17 yard field goal for the winning edge.

The game marked the third straight that Thompson and Sylacauga have played in overtime. The previous two encounters, Sylacauga came out the winner.

"We didn't play too good on defense" Simmons commented, adding "But it was one of our best games offensively, combining passing and running."

Thompson got the early lead in the game, scoring in the first quarter on a drive that covered 56 yards. Todd Harris got the call for the one yard touchdown run. Smitherman added the PAT making the score 7-0.

Sylacauga came right back and tied the game early in the second quarter but that only fired up Thompson to come back and score again before the half ended. David Cofer ran three yards for the score and Smitherman kicked the PAT making the score at the half in Thompson's favor 14 to 7.

The Aggies took over in the second half, running over the Thompson defense for two unanswered touchdowns to take the lead 21 to 14.

Thompson finally got back on the scoring track in the final minutes with a 94 yard drive for a touchdown with only 1:48 left in the game. The Warrior staff elected to kick the extra point rather than try a two-point play that would have won the game in regulation time.

This week the Warriors host B.B. Comer, a team with only a 1-7 record but much tougher and highly regarded than the record indicates. "They have a big tough physical team" Simmons said of this Friday's foe. "They line up and try to run over you. We are going to have to play good to stay with them."

The Warriors will end the season against Pell City. The winner of that game will earn a berth in the state playoffs and meet Stanhope Elmore in the first round.

Chelsea whips Rebels for season's first win

The Chelsea Hornets won their first game of the year last Friday night in a homecoming contest at Chelsea. The Hornets came from behind to whip Thorsby 34 to 27 in the final seconds of ballgame.

"We fought from behind all night" Coach Richard Conkle said of the game. "We had good effort and never quit."

Thorsby got the game's first score early in the first quarter. Chelsea marched back 50 yards with Phil Blackerby scooting the final seven for the touchdown. The conversion attempt for two points failed, leaving Chelsea behind 6 to 7.

Thorsby scored twice more before the Hornets got back on the scoring track. Keith McCullars broke loose on a 49 yard touchdown run late in the second quarter and then added a conversion run to make the halftime score 21 to 14 in favor of Thorsby.

The Rebels ran back the second half opening kickoff to jump out to a 13 point lead but Chelsea retaliated with a 65 yard drive with Victor Smith running the final yard for the touchdown. The PAT failed leaving Chelsea trailing 20 to 27.

Chelsea added another touchdown in the final minutes of the third quarter. Blackerby burst the final three yards for the score but again the conversion attempt failed as Thorsby held on to a slim one point edge.

The Hornets drove the ball in the final minutes of the game, scoring with 24 seconds left on an 18 yard pass from McCullars to Jeff Gulledge. McCullars ran a successful conversion to give Chelsea a 34 to 27 winning margin that held for the final seconds.

The win was the first of the year for the Hornets who had lost seven straight games in the 1979 season. This week they will get another win as a game scheduled against Minor Christian was forfeited. After the week off Chelsea will face Vincent at Vincent for the season finale.

Leading rushers for Chelsea were McCullars with 121 yards, Blackerby with 97 and Chris Thomas with 41. Defensive leaders were Jack Shaw, Keith Garrett, John Bearden and Tony Isbell. Shaw blocked two Thorsby punts in the game.

UM wins three matches

Sweep matches from Tuskegee Institute, Jacksonville State and Troy State last week.

"We certainly looked much better this week than the last couple of weeks," Coach Warren acknowledged, "particularly against Jacksonville and Troy. Beating those two back-to-back (the three hooked up in a trimatch) is quite an accomplishment, because they are two fine teams.

The Lady Falcons got a measure of revenge in the Tuskegee match on Thursday, winning three straight games 15-11, 15-10, 18-16. TI had beaten Montevallo three in a row at Tuskegee earlier this season.

On Saturday, UM downed Jacksonville, the host team, 15-10, 15-13, and Troy 15-4, 12-15, 15-4.

The perfect week upped Montevallo's record to 26-10, with three matches and one tournament remaining in the regular season.

New spotlight law

Hunters should be aware of new laws concerning spotlighting deer. Besides the fact that the act itself is illegal, game officers can confiscate not only the spotlight, but also the vehicle, and any other equipment in the lawbreaker's possession.

If found guilty, the confiscated equipment will become the property of the state and disposed of in state auctions.

District Conservation Enforcement Officer Ed Lightsey told the Reporter that the changes in the law make it easier to make a case against the offender and that the courts have gotten tough about enforcing the laws.

In the past, many offenders were given light sentences, but those days are nearly a thing of the past as judges have stiffended fines and penalties and confiscated equipment used during the act.

Trammel wins

YMCA tourney

In the finals of the Shelby County YMCA's Tennis Tournament Sunday, the first place trophy in the men's singles division went to Paul Trammel. Tom Underhill received the second place award.

At the conclusion of men's doubles play, the two some of Sonny Perkins and Paul Trammel defeated George Kennedy and Roger Davis to win the first place trophy.

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

BY EARL FRANKLIN KENNAMER

The Reporter's Hunting and Fishing expert talks about herb cooking this week, and how he learned to prepare wild game for premium flavor when he was a soldier in Europe.

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Most of us, except Gourmet magazine readers, never got involved in herb cooking until European influences of World War II. Oh, we knew about dill in pickled cucumbers. There was curly Italian parsley that adorned my steak or fish dish in restaurants. After the war I ate the parsley with gusto. Then there were sesame and caraway seeds on buns and cookies. Mustard is also classified as an herb, but I've eaten it as greens as long as I can remember. Chilies were common in Mexico dishes, but as a teenager in Selma in the '30's, I didn't know a tace from a torilla. Members of the onion family -- leeks, chives, shallets, garlic and similar champions of French creative cookery -- were little known until the past couple of decades.

My interest in herb cooking became a fact in 1944, just behind the desperate German lines, when a French peasant woman turned my 10-in-One U.S Army Ration of corned beef hash into the "piece de resistance"! My battery cooks never did anything but open a can of hash and heat it up. That day within range of German long range artillery I stuffed one can of hash, unopened, along with packs of cigarettes and chocolate into my pack bag to barter for fresh eggs, fresh tomatoes, and fresh mature onions along the French countryside. All officers and EM's did it. Things got so bad I couldn't keep a mess of GI powdered eggs down. Even now I won't eat Spam.

Anyway, I got the fresh eggs and produce, but the woman and her husband, whom we had just liberated, invited me to stay and eat. He and I went out and bagged about six pheasants. When we returned, she had a sumptuous dinner on the table. But the main thing I remember was the delightful taste of that hash! With her broken English and my little army French phrase book, I figured she had used a combination of herbs with that hash. And you cooks know as well as I that "hash" means the end of the line for beef, pork and poultry. But at that time, however, I couldn't have distinguished rosemary from tarragon.

During the Occupation period in Europe our German women cooks in military government used herbs daily in our meals. There was no comparison in the fresh foods we savored daily as to what the military consumed.

My biggest interest in cooking with herbs has been centered on those used in cooking wild game and fish. As a result, I now grow some 25 species and varieties of herbs in my garden. To me the fresh green herbs are ten times better than the dried form you buy in cans on the spice shelf in your supermarket. In fact, I'm now freezing packets of green herbs until the following spring.

There's a lot to know about herbs for cooking. For example, I bagged a few ringnecked ducks 30 years ago in a big swamp near Tuskegee. The recipe called for one bay leaf (dried). This dish turned out well. Then I jumpshot some black mallards and woodies. I figured that if one dried bay leaf would do a good job, why not three dried leaves for a better taste? The cooked mess was so strong my family could hardly eat it! The rule of thumb I follow now is to use the amount of herbs prescribed and I have to assume a half teaspoon thyme means dried thyme, etc. Since I use fresh herbs, I triple the amount needed for the dish.

Some herbs, like bay, are as strong to the palate as a hydraulic press is to a bale of cotton. Other herbs are strong and overpowering: safe, garlic, horseradish, sorrel. Some herbs can be used liberally, such as chives, parsley.

Let's get down to the nitty gritty in cooking with herbs. My most memorable introduction to garlic was a suggestion to rub my next raw steak with it -- I had not seen a garlic press then in the late '40's -- and cook my steak rare. Before that I preferred fried chicken to steak anytime, because my parents' standard was well done country fried steak with no garlic touch. Nowadays I grow most of my own garlic and use it on all venison steaks, roasts. I also grow my own bay, but I have to pot the growing bush every winter and take it inside. Green bay leaves are a must every time I make venison stew.

For wild turkeys dressing you can use parsley, sweet majoram or sage. For wild duck you can make a marinade, using tarragon, rosemary, parsley, chopped onions, garlic, caraway seed.

I checked one venison stew recipe I found in one of my herb cookbooks and here's the list of herbs: parsley, garlic, leaf sage, coriander, rosemary, majoram, thyme and leeks. I personally believe too many herbs kill one another's flavor.

When eating fried fish I usually make a rosemary, butter and lemon juice sauce. I also like fresh horseradish I usually grind and freeze every winter and serve with my fish and oysters and shrimp. I can tell you this: grinding horseradish will open up your sinuses! My tears in the process will soak my handkerchief to dripping.

You can make dill sauce with shrimp and herb butter, using garlic, or basil, or dill, etc. You'll have to do your own experimentation, but at least follow the herb recipes you find in most cookbooks today.

However, don't brag, you've invented some new tricks with herbs. The Bible includes references to anise, mint, garlic and coriander!

Panthers win fourth game

Pelham won its fourth game of the year with a 12 to 6 win over the Mortimer-Jordan Blue Devils last Friday night. The win evened the season at 4-4 for the Panthers who meet Jemison this Friday night.

Pelham scored in the second quarter when Dale Busby burst three yards for the endzone. The run capped a 60 yard drive. Woody Woodson missed the PAT making the score 6 to 0. That score remained for the half as both teams tangled in the trenches for field position.

In the fourth period, Pelham put together another drive, this one a 65 yarder with quarterback Steve Rye sneaking in from the one. The conversion attempt failed.

With five minutes left in the game, Mortimer-Jordan fought back with a 70 yard touchdown pass. The conversion failed leaving Pelham in the lead 12 to 6.

Busby collected 162 yards rushing for the night on 36 carries. Tracey Sweeny had a 30 yard pass reception in the second quarter which set up the Panthers first score. Steve Parsons also had a good night rushing for Pelham.

"Our offensive line must have played well" coach Steve Rivers commented. "We had 211 yards rushing. This week we were ready to play the moment we stepped on the field."

Defensive standouts for Pelham in the contest were Brad Jacks, Chuck Hughes and Wayne Davidson.

"We know it's going to be tough" Rivers said of the upcoming Jemison game. "They have a good ball club and we've got to get ready to go down there and fight."

Welterweight homecoming in Chelsea

The Chelsea Youth Club will hold a homecoming this Saturday night in Chelsea. The Welterweight football teams will select their queens from a large group of entrants.

The ceremonies will take place during the evening while the football teams play. The first game of the evening will start at 5 p.m. with two more games to follow.

Chelsea is part of the Shelby County Welterweight Football Association which has only two weeks remaining in the season. Teams from Calera, Childersburg, Vincent, Montevallo and Chelsea play in the league.

Richard's Picks

One perfect pick last week to brag about. The Thompson-Sylacauga game was played exactly as predicted. The Warriors won in overtime 3 to 0. Well, on to this week...

Pelham at Jemison- The Panthers could make this their first winning year with a victory this Friday night. It won't be easily done however because the Panthers from Jemison are also big and tough. Look for a late touchdown to win the game for Pelham. Prediction: Pelham 13, Jemison 12.

Comer at Thompson- I don't know how far the Warriors will go in the playoffs should they make the grade, but I can forsee a perfect record for Thompson this year. Another win is in the cards but as seen the past several weeks, it won't be a bus ride. Prediction: Thompson 23, Comer 12.

Shelby County at Clanton- Things have gone from bad to worse at Shelby County and this is the week for football to be turned around. The Wildcats need the next two games as wins to even the season mark at 5-5. That is going to be tough but not impossible. Prediction: Shelby County 6, Clanton 3.

Montevallo at West Blocton- The Bulldogs need a second win of the year and they have picked a tough week to get one. A big rivalry against West Blocton should make a win pretty hard to get but the Bulldogs have it in them. Prediction: Montevallo 26, Blocton 14.

Calera at Maplesville- The Eagles will get an easy win this week. Calera has yet to beat a team with more than two wins other than Verbena. It just makes the players angry to play easy games and they might have to be rudely awakened in the third quarter. Prediction: Calera 44, Maplesville 16.

Well folks, that's the picks for this week. By the way, Chelsea will gets its second win of the year Friday night in a forfeit game from Minor Christian. Stay tuned for next week's final pick of the year.

Cyclists race over countryside in 48 mile event

Though Shelby Countian s are usually the last to take advantage of them, Shelby County is laced with some of the most favorable bicycling paths around.

Some 25 serious cyclists from all over the Southeast converged on Genery Gap, October 14, to spend a beautiful autumn day bicycle racing.

The U.S. Cycling Federation and its local affiliate, the Alabama Wheelmen, sponsored the event which began at the itersection of SC 52 and Jefferson Co. 2.

The racers, divided into seven classes, took off at 11:45 Sunday morning south on SC 52 for over a mile of downhill speeding before turning west on SC 13. Passing the dangerously-diagonal Southern Railway tracks at Turner Crossing, the group turned north again on SC 1 and overcame a long and tiring ascent back up to Shades Crest. From there, a short jog put them on Jefferson County 2, and a pleasant ride along the ridge, with a splendid view of the Cahaba valley to the south, was theirs until the finish line just before the Indian Ford Fire Hall now under construction. (The finish line was moved about 100 yards back from the start to avoid traffic at the dangerous 52-2 intersection.)

Alabamians were outnumbered by racing teams from Jackson, MS, Nashville, TN, Atlanta, GA, and North Carolina.

The Atlanta racers took the prize for the fastest two laps around the 16- mile course, with a time of 84 minutes.

The 48 mile, 3- lap winner required 129 minutes 9 seconds to finish, with an average speed of 23.2 miles per hour.

The intense attitude of the racers was evident in their special short-billed skullcaps fitting under or over their helmets, sox cut off at shoetop level, special shoes, and loudly-colored shirts with pockets across the lower back.

Some of the men even shaved their legs to reduce wind resistance.

Most of the biking equipment had Italian-sounding names, such as Campagnolo, Colnago, Masi, Serotta, Guerciotti, and Impero Silca. So great is the dominance of foreign equipment, that none of the bicycles was made in USA.

A less rigorous Century tour was held in Columbiana Oct. 21. Sunday.

Some 100 or more cyclists showed up for the pleasure cruise, picking their own distance of from 25 to 125 miles.

Leaving from SCHS at 7:30 a.m., the total course ran to Pel City via Westover and Sterrett, then back down to Wilsonville, then Columbiana via Shelby.

Crisp weather combined with fall colors and beautiful Shelby County scenery to make the trip enjoyable for all. Unlike last year, there were no forest fires to help light the way.

Tour leaders said that Shelby County has many advantages for bicyclers, with its gentle hills, proximity to Birmingham, and fine county road system.

However, up till now, most of the people to take advantage of our cycling blessings have been from out of county, or even out of state.

A man and his machine

Harry Cosper tinkers with the environmental simulator he designed and built in his basement. A light shining through the filter in the background will simulate daily sun cycles for cultivating microscopic marine life. (Photo by Moore)

When engineers stumped

Pelham man invents machine

by David Moore

What is it?

"It's an environmental simulator," says the machine's inventor, Harry Cosper.

It looks like a do-hickey. Or maybe even a thing-a-ma-jig. It might have stepped straight out of the pages of a Dr. Suess book.

"It's not very pretty, but it's functional," Cosper says. "It's the only one like it." There is a parental pride in his voice, like maybe he's showing you pictures of his children.

Actually, he designed the machine for his daughter-in-law, Elizabeth Cosper, a doctor in marine biology at Lamont-Dogerty Marine Observatory in Palisades, New York. The machine will be used in the cultivation of microscopic marine organisms for research.

Through a series of assorted pulleys and drive belts mounted on a board, a small electric motor turns a metal screen disc composed of filters of various densities. A light situated behind the filter simulates the cycle of a day from sunrise to sunset, allowing organisms to grow in an environment akin to their natural surroundings.

The machine works like a transmission of sorts, and actually has four speeds (2, 18, 28 and 36 revolutions per day) for performing different experiments.

Cosper heard that engineers working a similar simulator were stumped and said it couldn't be made. That was just the kind of stimulation the Pelham man needed. He spent eight weeks thinking about the machine, six weeks tinkering with it, and a month working on it in earnest.

"I get nothing out of it but maybe honorable mention in a scientific journal," Cosper says. He doesn't say so, but you can tell he also gets an immense self-satisfaction from having built it.

Cosper, who is retired from the social security office in Birmingham, says he's always been on the "nosey" side when it came to machines and making things."

"I'm not a mathmatician or engineer--although I have been accused of it before," Cosper says with a pleased chuckle. "I pride myself in my common sense."

Cosper, according to his wife, Linnie, spends hours a day tinkering on projects in his basement. In fact, he even designed their house in Indian Hills some seven years ago.

When he's not working in the basement, expressing his opinions on Howard Cossell, or talking about Rube Goldberg (a turn of the century cartoonists and sculptor who designed complicated gadgets to do simple or useless operations), Cosper is working on his garden, grape vines or 200 azaleas. He has even been known to make up recipes for hotdog relish.

As to what the man will come up with next is anybody's guess. Maybe a pair of sun glasses for cloudy days.

One idea Cosper had about 30 years ago still gives him pleasure because somebody else later came up with the same thing and made it popular.

It all started one Christmas when one of the Cospers' young sons said, "Daddy, I wish the Christmas tree would turn around."

That was all Harry Cosper's nosey mind needed.

"I put a rotor on the base of the tree and put it out on the porch," Cosper explains. "I had it set up so that when it turned around the lights would blink on and off."

The idea was so unique at that time that traffic backed up in front of the house because people wanted to see the rotating Christmas tree. But the end results of that invention were that the police told Cosper to move the tree inside so that traffic could resume its normal flow.

As Cosper might put it--or Rube Goldberg for that matter--if an invention isn't unusual, then who would even care?

Montevallo PTA selling discount coupon booklets

A new type of fund raising is underway by the Montevallo PTA. This year the group is offering coupon booklets which give discounts at city retail establishments.

Selling for $5.00 each, the booklets are available from Dr. Norman McMillan, Montevallo Schools' PTA president; and the House of Serendipity. A special table is also being set up in downtown Montevallo on Saturdays in order for shoppers to purchase booklets.

Coupons in the booklets are good for discounts and special bargains from local area merchants.

Profits from the sale are to be divided among the three Montevallo schools, according to Emily Pendleton, publicity chairman.

Ed Board approves $750,000 loan when state funds fail to meet expenses

by Bert Seaman

"I'll be glad when we don't have to do this every month," remarked Education Superintendent Charles Knowles Wednesday as he asked the Board to approve a loan for up to $750,000.

The exact amount that will be needed to meet the system's November payroll and other bills won't be known, the superintendent explained, until money from the state arrives.

Telling the Board that he'd recently spoken with the State Department of Education's Finance Director, Knowles said he'd learned the County would receive only about 50% of the approximately $760,000 that was due.

Asked about interest on the loan, the superintendent related that it would be at the rate of 6%. And if the entire amount had to be borrowed, Knowles said, the total interest would come to $9,000.

"Every time we borrow it will cost us," Knowles remarked. "But we have no choice," he added. "We have to pay our people and our bills."

After approving the payroll, the education panel gave Knowles permission to borrow up to $750,000 in order to meet it and pay other bills.

Last month the Board approved a $125,000 loan to get by. Both that amount and the present loan, which are due Jan. 15, 1980, will be paid off with local tax money when it is received.

With the intention of putting money now used for administration into training opportunities, Knowles recommended to the Board that they enter into a direct contract with the state in-school CETA program.

By changing the present setup, which now means going through a district office, the superintendent pointed out that the person in charge would be in a better position to write programs and compete for funds.

The panel voted in favor of the proposal and to hire Mrs. Norma Wilson, who is familiar with the program, to be the coordinator.

"The only charge to us," Knowles related, "would be for the floor space this lady would occupy and for the heating and cooling of that area."

Questioned by Board member Barbara Whitman about whether funds would be available for supervision, Knowles said that such a requirement could be written into a program if it was deemed necessary.

It was pointed out that unless there was someone to oversee CETA workers, the jobs to which they were assigned sometimes weren't done.

Making the point that Wilson didn't tolerate goofing off, Knowles stressed that she had a "work for what you get" philosophy. "I've seen her terminate contracts," he added.

According to Knowles, there are slots for 85 students to take part in training opportunities provided for under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

Calera students

Young journalists from Calera sharpened their writing and editing skills during a workshop at Samford University last week. The workshop was sponsored by Samford's Department of English and Journalism and the Birmingham Professional Chapter of Women in Communications, Inc. (WICI). From left are Cindy Whitburn, Carla Britain, Jeff Glass, and Dr. Nancy Whitt, Instructor of Journalism at Samford. The students are staffers for the high school newspaper, Eagle Talk.

New signs

Bailey Santa Cruz of the University of Montevallo Physical Plant staff bolts UM's first on-campus street signs to street corner posts. Campus streets retained the name of city streets that extended into the campus. Other streets have been named after adjacent buildings. UM officials said they purchased the signs with donations to UM's 1978-79 Annual Fund campaign.

Crash injuries course to begin in Calera

How to handle crash injuries will be taught in a 10-week course in Calera beginning November 12.

According to Bill Collum of the Calera Rescue Squad, enrollment is still open. The course is designed especially for people who would normally be first on the scene of an accident, such as police or fire officers but Collum points out it would be valuable to everyone. It is open to everyone from teenagers on up, he said.

Some of the things taught will be steps to control bleeding, stabilization of fractures treating shock, etc.

It will be taught by a paramedic from UAB, and will be offered on 10 consecutive Mondays (except holidays) at the Calera Recreation building.

For information call Collum at 668-1862.

To sign up or get information, call Calera City Hall 668-1862; Bill Collum at 668-0213, or Mike Chandler, director of Calera Rescue Squad.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Battery business saves customers money sooner or later it's bound to happen to you.

You get in your car, turn the key and all that happens is you hear a few sluggish groans from the starter. "Dead battery," you moan.

After digging the jumper cables out of the trunk and finally starting the car, you have two choices about what to do:

1.) You can go to most any department store or parts store and buy a battery. Of course this is taking the chance that your problem is indeed the battery and not, say, the alternator, in which case you have a new battery, but still have your old problem.

Or, 2.) you can go to Battery Distributors in Pelham, find out batteries warehouse direct wholesale prices. As the country's second largest battery manufacturer, Gould has been a leader in battery research and development for over 50 years, and makes batteries for J.C. Penney, Western Auto, Motor Craft, Union 76 and Caterpiller.

At Battery Distributors you can get a battery for just about anything but airplanes and railroad engines.

"I'm selling one of the best batteries at wholesale price," Crumpton points out. "It's not a second. It hasn't been sitting around on the shelf for two year. This is a good battery.

We buy from the manufactor and sell at wholesale. The public can buy at the prices a parts house pays." This means a savings of $15-$20 on a quality battery.

But that's not all you save. When you do business with Battery Distributors, you save yourself a lot of trouble. Your charging system is checked--free. The battery is load tested and checked--free. And installation is (you guessed it)--free. Furthermore, Battery Distributors will buy junk batteries from you, thus adding to you savings.

Put simply, Crumpton says, "We're the kind of place a guy who travel or works can say to his wife, 'Run down and get a battery."

While you're at Battery Distributors, you can also buy Goodyear's line of Republic tires from Cash and Carry, any auto parts the average do-it-yourselfer might need from Cash and Carry Auto Parts, or have your car renovated by Cash and Carry Auto Clean.

We get a lot of repeat customers and referrals," says Crumpton. "We've built this business on customer relations. What it boils down to is we've got the best prices on everything, and we go out of our way to help people, be fair and do the job right."

Battery Distributors and Cash and Carry are located in Pelham on Hwy. 31 South, next to Ken Terry Chevrolet. When you need a new battery, you can call them at 663-4908, 663-0000 or 663-0093. They're open 8-6 Monday-Friday, 8-5 Saturday and 10-3 on Sunday.

Reporter observes Marine recruit training

Creeping up

Marine recruits practice techniques in taking over an area, under the watchful eye of their drill instructor on the wall.

Alabamians tour Parris Island

The United States Marines want the public to know how they train recruits for the modern Corps.

So they invited a group of Alabama journalists, business people, high school guidance counselors, principals and coaches to tour Parris Island last week.

The Marines wanted the journalists to 'spread the word' to the public. They wanted the school people to encourage high school students to join the Marines.

In the group of 80, only this reporter and Tom Callahan of the Birmingham News represented newspapers. Other media representatives were from radio stations in Cullman and Gadsden.

The Shelby County schools were unable to send anyone, because of county-wide testing that was going on in the schools at the time.

The Marines sent a C-9 to Birmingham to pick up the group from north Alabama, then flew to Montgomery for the others. (The plane trip and bus transportation at Parris Island were provided by the Marines. The cost of meals and overnight lodging at the motel outside the base was paid by each participant.)

The tour at the base was organized so the group could see recruits in various stages of training. No special demonstrations were arranged for the visitors, the Marine officers emphasized.

Rifle practice

Shelby County Reporter Editor Marcia Sears tries her hand at target practice on the Marine Corps rifle range at Parris Island, S.C.

Women's quarters

A woman Marine recruit polishes her shoes in her barracks as one of the civilian tour members observes in the background.

by Marcia Sears

The Marine Corps is a good place to begin a career. That was the conclusion of most of the 80 civilians from Alabama who saw Marine Corps recruit training at first hand last week at Parris Island, S.C.

Today's Marine recruit gets plenty of tough discipline and rigorous physical training, but new regulations and extra supervision have been added to prevent the training abuses that sometimes occurred in the past.

The Marines continue to instill in their recruits that Marines are "the best". Their training is aimed at building ability to handle tough situations, and that in turn leads to great self confidence.

Parris Island is the training center for all male recruits from east of the Mississippi, and it is the only training center for women Marine recruits. About 24,000 men are trained at P.I. each year, and about 2,400 women are trained there. Women's facilities are being expanded to 9,000 by the year 1980 (About 26,000 men take their training at the San Diego-Camp Pendleton center.)

There is a difference in training standards for men and women. The men spend 10.3 weeks at it, but the women finish in 8 weeks. Men have a 6-day week in training, with a 10½ hour day. Women have 5½ day week and do not have to take marksmanship, weapons, field training, or serve on mess and maintenance duty. Women's training involves 'much drill and physical training' according to a Marine spokesman. They must be able to run 1½ miles in 15 minutes by the end of their 8 weeks.

All enlisted women must have a high school diploma. The Corps strives to enlist 75% of its men with diplomas. The attrition rate for women recruits is about 13% and for men, it is 14%.

About 5% of the women recruits have children when they enter the Corps. The Corps requires that they have firm arrangements made for the child's care during the eight-week training period. After that, the women have a scheduled workday and can care for their own children with the aid of schools or day care centers.

Women serve in non-combat duty, and some of the fields they can train for are: electronic technicians, plumbers, electricians, air controllers, bands, cooks, bakers, truck and heavy equipment drivers, and drill instructors.

Pay for men and women recruits is the same: $448 per month.

One officer described the basic training period as a "love-hate relationship between recruits and the Marine Corps."

When men recruits arrive at Parris Island they are given haircuts and initial physicals. The haircuts are not only for traditional reasons, but also for psychological reasons. One officer told us the haircut "puts a glaze over their eyes for about three weeks."

The recruit spends two weeks on the rifle range, which is said to be the most enjoyable period of his training. After that he is assigned a week in the mess halls. One officer called mess duty "real world exposure." It is almost universally disliked by the recruits.

Four weeks are devoted to performance oriented training. Swimming 100 yards and surviving in the water for 5 minutes is required. Recruits spend a week camping in field conditions. in tents, practicing infiltration techniques where they crawl under barbed wire with fake gunfire going off over their heads. They practice repelling and hand-to-hand combat.

When a recruit balks and says "no" he is sent to the correctional custody platoon, where he may stay up to 7 days. If this does not improve his attitude, he goes before a 3-man board. If he still says, "I want to be a Marine" they will give him another chance. But if not, he is out.

Young men who come into the Corps overweight and under strength stay with their original group if they can keep up with them. If not, they are sent to a special group where they get special diets and exercise.

Infiltration course

After storming over the wall, Marine recruits crawl under barbed wire 3 inches above the ground on the infiltration course at Parris Island. Water holes make the going difficult and fake gunfire explodes over their heads at frequent intervals. (Reporter photos by Sears)

In the past the famed Marine drill instructor has had a mixed public image. Seen as supertough, who was too hard on some recruits, yet was praised for making men out of boys, the training and attitudes of drill instructors has changed slightly over the years.

Today's drill instructor goes through an eight week training period to learn the skills required. To be a drill instructor today requires the "hardest, most demanding physical requirements ever in the history of the Corps" according to Captain Wills, director of the DI school at Parris Island. He said the drill instructor must have an I.Q. over 90 and must be prepared to work an 84-hour work week. He learns the "legitimate uses of stress in order to teach an understanding of courage."

Drill instructors today, however, do not have to stay with their recruits 24 hours a day. There are three DI's assigned to each group, and they take turns with night and weekend duty.

"Motivation" is a key word at Parris Island, and from the day the recruit enters the base, he or she is urged to want to turn in the best performance possible.

Marine Major General J.V. McLernan, base commander at Parris Island, told the group of Alabama visitors before the tour began, "We are taking these young men and women on the road through adolescence and into adulthood with a 3-phase developmental program. There will be a change in their body, mind and spirit. The change in spirit is not taught, it's absorbed. You don't do young people any service by giving them easy training. You will see stress at P.I. So young people will learn to overcome obstacles."

What does all this do for the young men and women? The discipline gives them great self-confidence, and the training gives them the ability to handle themselves in many types of emergencies. Further training in a specialty leads to a lifetime career. In addition, the nation gets a trained force capable of defending the nation in the event of war.

Last year the Marine Corps fell 1300 short of its quota in enlisting male recruits. It has 930 recruiters in the eastern half of the United States.

Of 500 interviews the recruiters conduct with young people, about 79 actually sign up and graduate. The average cost of getting one recruit through basic training is $5,485, according to Parris Island spokesmen.

"Uncompensated services" means services available in the facility which are made available to persons unable to pay therefor without charge or at a charge which is less than the reasonable cost of such services. The level of such services is measured by the difference between the amount paid by such persons for the services and the reasonable cost thereof.

The level set out above meets the presumptive compliance guideline of the Federal regulations and is 10 percent of all Federal assistance provided the facility under the Hospital and Medical Facilities Construction Act.

Copies of the criteria used for identifying persons unable to pay for services may be obtained from Bureau of Health Development, State Office Building, Room 657, Montgomery, Alabama 36130.

The records and documents on the basis of which the above level of uncompensated services was established are available for public inspection at State Office Building, Room 657, Montgomery, Alabama, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. on regular business days.

Pelham plans park with federal grant

by David Moore

Plans for a city park in Pelham, which have been in the making for about two years, have finally started coming together.

At Monday's council meeting, a resolution was passed agreeing to comply with the requirements set down by the Department of Conservation and National Resources in order to receive a land purchase grant for the park.

Mayor Burk Dunaway said the grant will be for $128,906.50.

The money will be used to purchase nearly 42 acres of land located between U.S. 31 and Hwy. 105, behind the Pelham skating rink, Dunaway pointed out.

Other grants are being applied for which will enable the city to build ball parks, picnic areas, tennis courts and bike trails in the park, according to city clerk Willie May Dennis.

To receive the land purchase grant, the city has to pay a surcharge of $1933, she said.

In a 4-1 vote, the council approved a request for a liquor license for "A Touch of Class" to be located at 2105 Old Montgomery Highway. The restaurant lounge will be owned by Connie Schultz and Vi Rodrinquez.

The motion to approve the license was made by John Tanner and seconded by Ray Hamilton. Willard Payne cast the dissenting vote.

In a two minute long public hearing, the council unanimously followed the recommendation of the zoning board and rezoned a parcel of land adjacent to Mountain Chateau from A-1 to R-2.

Two area residents complained to Mayor Dunaway and PPD Chief D.O. Watson about a large truck often parked in front of a residence on Wooddale Drive. The truck, they said, posed a safety hazard when two cars meet in the curve where the truck is parked.

Alice Ammons said that she had almost had several wrecks at the location and asked that police do something about having the vehicle removed.

Nancy Duncan invited Chief Watson to try and squeeze his car past the truck while she was driving down the other side of the road. Watson declined.

Watson pointed out that there were currently no legal grounds on which to make the owner park the truck elsewhere, and suggested that the city study an ordinance recently passed by Hoover limiting the size of trucks which can park on city streets.

Dunaway said a similar ordinance for Pelham would be studied.

The council approved the reappointment of Normal Wilson to the city's park and recreation board.

Mayor Dunaway proclaimed November 15-19 as "Be with a book for a day" week, and urged all residents to visit and support the city's library.

He read a release from city librarian Mary Carver concerning the effects of the county's cut in funding to the library system.

Hamilton suggested that residents phone or write the county commission or Probate Judge Tommy Snowden and "see if there's some way they can come up with a little more help" for the library.

A motion was made by Roy Jowers to change meeting time of council meeting from 7:00 to 6:30

Councilman Payne said to make sure the time was "p.m."

The motion passed and will go into effect for the next meeting on November 19.

PFD Chief William Bryars reported that his department answered 62 calls for the month of October, 22 of which were fire calls and 40 of which were rescue runs.

Chief Watson introduced three new police officers to the council, Mark Delk, Kenneth Cheeseman and Jack McKerley.

Watson reported that for October, police worked 47 accidents, nine grand larcenies, three petty larcenies, one assault with intent to murder, one assault and battery, seven burglaries, three roberies, two auto thefts and 15 incidents of vandalism.

Alabaster outlaws weapons

by Bert Seaman

From now on, anyone caught carrying an unconcealed weapon within the city limits of Alabaster will be subject to a fine and the possibility of imprisonment.

On the recommendation of Police Chief C. E. "Bull" Carter, the panel passed the ordinance Monday night which covers airguns, pistols, rifles, all types of knives and slingshots.

It was mentioned that a number of street lights, traffic lights and car windshields had been put out with airguns and slingshots. It's hoped that the new law will put an end to this type of nuisance.

There is already a state law on the books, it was pointed out against carrying concealed weapons. "This will add some extra teeth for the benefit of the city," remarked Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek.

The new ordinance will carry a maximum fine of $200 and imprisonment of up to 20 days. Both penalties can be imposed.

Another ordinance that was passed concerned the updating of sub-division regulations and adding some new provisions. The recommendations were made by the city's zoning board and a public hearing was held three months ago.

When there were no objections to the proposal, it was given to city attorney Karl Harrison to draw up. Since the regulations are too lengthy to publish, they are available for inspection at city hall.

Although the three council members present favored giving the local YMCA a 20 year lease, the motion was tabled until the next meeting so the Councilwoman Charlotte Burke and Councilman Gene Glasgow could voice their opinions.

The Y's director, Molly McGregor, has appeared at a previous meeting asking for the long lease so the Metropolitan Y would contribute funds for badly needed repairs.

At the present time the Y's lease is only for five years. Agreeing that any organization would need a longer lease than that before pouring money into the repair of a facility, Councilman Dan Gillis said he favored the move.

Noting that extending the lease would tie the hands of future administrations, the city's attorney had discouraged the panel against taking action on the matter.

"I don't think there is anything else that worthwhile that the building could be used for," Councilman Wayne Lucas remarked.

According to the mayor, the main thing needing repair at the Y is the swimming pool. He reported the Y felt the work could be done for around $40,000.

Asking for an answer to the request she and her realtor husband had made at a previous meeting, Mrs. Harold Walker was told that the city's attorney had recommended the city not get involved in the matter.

Installing sewer lines to some new apartment units, the couple had crossed a strip of land owned by the Columbiana Housing Authority. And because an easement had not been obtained the authority filed a suit against the Walkers requesting that the lines be removed.

Attorney Karl Harrison had pointed out the city could be brought into the suit if they entered the dispute so no action was taken on the matter.

Young Houdini escapes new jail

Montevallo police and county law enforcement officers have found that it's no easy task to hang on to a 17 year old Homewood youth.

Anthony Cunningham, who is the first prisoner ever to have escaped from the new Shelby County jail, made his first successful break-out from the Montevallo jail seven days earlier.

Jailers say that Cunningham managed to get out through a window in the Columbiana facility at approximately 2 p.m. Friday. It's assumed that the youth made good his getaway in a 1974 Chrysler that was stolen from its parking place on the main street of town.

According to jail sources, Cunningham took the arm off a chair in the pod where he was being held, and used it to pry the frame off one of the unbreakable plastic windows.

It's reported that the area where the youth was being kept has been designated for female prisoners. And the windows in that pod, it's said, are different from those in the rest of the prison.

Because that area cannot be seen from the tower, Cunningham had been gone for two hours or more before he was missed.

No one is certain how the clever prisoner managed to get outside the barbed wire topped fence. Since there are no holes in the enclosure, one jailer theorized that he might have squeezed underneath.

Cunningham left the Montevallo jail by way of an 11 by 12 inch ventilator through which he managed to cram his 168 pound frame.

A description of the car in which the youth escaped from the Municipal jail was put in the NCIC (National Crime Information Center) machine and he was picked up in Birmingham two days later and taken to the Shelby County jail.

The same procedure has been followed after Cunningham's second flight from jail, but at presstime Tuesday, there was still no word as to his whereabouts.

Montevallo police had arrested the Homewood youth after they had stopped him for driving with out tail lights and then found the car was stolen.

Habitual criminals face new sentencing

The new 'Habitual Offender' Act will be a good thing, according to Circuit District Attorney William Hill.

Hill told the Reporter in an interview that the new law, which is scheduled to go into effect the first of the year, should lead to keeping habitual criminals off the streets.

According to Hill, the new law will deal with sentencing the Class A, B, and C felonies.

If a person has previously been convicted of a Class C felony and then is convicted of another Class C, he or she will be punished as if the second offense were a Class B.

If convicted for a second Class B felony, the offender will be sentenced as if he or she had committed a Class A felony.

Hill told the Reporter that under the "Good Time Law" many criminals have learned how to manipulate the system, where a life sentence means a maximum prison term of 8 years.

He thinks the new 'Habitual Offender' Law "will build some consequences into the system."

Hill has been serving as District Attorney for the 18th Judicial District (Shelby, Clay, and Coosa Counties) since last spring. He was named to fill the vacancy created when former D.A. Harold Walden was elected Circuit Judge.

School communities select new trustees

School communities throughout the county are now in the process of nominating school trustees to serve each school for the next four years.

Each school or school community will nominate six individuals. From the six nominees the Shelby County Board of Education will appoint three. The other three names will be held by the Board of Education, and should it become necessary to replace a trustee before the next regular nomination, the replacement will be one of the remaining three.

Section 16-10-1 of the Code of Alabama, 1975 provides for Boards of School Trustees. Trustees need not be patrons of the school, but must be nominated by the patrons. The law specifies that trustees will be "discreet, competent, and reliable persons of mature years, nominated by the patrons of the school, residing near the schoolhouse, and having the respect and confidence of the community.

Duties of the Board of Trustees include "visiting the school to consult with teachers and principals as to the progress of pupils, conditions and cleanliness of the school and the grounds and to give aid and advice for the advancement of the school." The Board of Trustees shall keep the county board of education advised about matters affecting the educational interest of the school. Trustees also have the power to authorize the use of the schoolhouse for community events that in their opinion do not interfere with its principal use of instruction.

Elections are scheduled by each school. For time and place, patrons may see additional announcements in this newspaper or telephone the school.

Helena woman killed in three-car crash

A three car crash on rain slick U.S. 31 in Pelham Thursday evening killed a Helena woman and injured three other people.

According to Coroner Billy Thompson, Mrs. Mary Warren, 59, of 1510 Citation Terrace, Helena, was announced dead on arrival at Shelby Memorial Hospital at 6:56 p.m., November 1.

PPD Sgt. D.B. Matson, who was on the scene, said Pelham paramedics worked intently to revive Mrs. Warren without success.

Matson explained that apparently the 1979 Buick, driven by Mrs. Warren's husband, Leman D. Warren, went out of control on the wet pavement, skidded across the median from the northbound lane, and was struck in the passenger's door by a southbound car.

The second car, a 1977 Chevrolet Nova driven by Thomas E. Simmons, 39, of 904 Colonial Drive, Alabaster, was struck in the rear by a third car, a 1979 Mercury driven by Robert Bruce Durbin, 33, of No. 1 Eddins Lane, Montevallo.

Leman Warren and Durbin were taken to SMH, treated for minor injuries and released. Simons was listed by SMH in satisfactory and improving condition Monday.

Sgt. Matson said that the accident occured at 6:20 p.m., and that it was raining steadily at the time. The wreck partially blocked traffic for over an hour, Matson added.

Still scavenging, but not for long

Despite signs at landfill gates, scavengers are still digging through county dumps for discarded objects of any value, as evidenced by this picture taken Monday in Helena. But county health official George Holcombe and solid waste supervisor Carlton Franks say that new regulations, expected to be approved within the next several weeks, we put an end to scavenging in the county's garbage graveyards. Pelham plans park with federal grant

by David Moore

Plans for a city park in Pelham, which have been in the making for about two years, have finally started coming together.

At Monday's council meeting, a resolution was passed agreeing to comply with the requirements set down by the Department of Conservation and National Resources in order to receive a land purchase grant for the park.

Mayor Burk Dunaway said the grant will be for $128,906.50.

The money will be used to purchase nearly 42 acres of land located between U.S. 31 and Hwy. 105, behind the Pelham skating rink, Dunaway pointed out.

Other grants are being applied for which will enable the city to build ball parks, picnic areas, tennis courts and bike trails in the park, according to city clerk Willie May Dennis.

To receive the land purchase grant, the city has to pay a surcharge of $1933, she said.

In a 4-1 vote, the council approved a request for a liquor license for "A Touch of Class" to be located at 2105 Old Montgomery Highway. The restaurant lounge will be owned by Connie Schultz and Vi Rodrinquez.

The motion to approve the license was made by John Tanner and seconded by Ray Hamilton. Willard Payne cast the dissenting vote.

In a two minute long public hearing, the council unanimously followed the recommendation of the zoning board and rezoned a parcel of land adjacent to Mountain Chateau from A-1 to R-2.

Two area residents complained to Mayor Dunaway and PPD Chief D.O. Watson about a large truck often parked in front of a residence on Wooddale Drive. The truck, they said, posed a safety hazard when two cars meet in the curve where the truck is parked.

Alice Ammons said that she had almost had several wrecks at the location and asked that police do something about having the vehicle removed.

Nancy Duncan invited Chief Watson to try and squeeze his car past the truck while she was driving down the other side of the road. Watson declined.

Watson pointed out that there were currently no legal grounds on which to make the owner park the truck elsewhere, and suggested that the city study an ordinance recently passed by Hoover limiting the size of trucks which can park on city streets.

Dunaway said a similar ordinance for Pelham would be studied.

The council approved the reappointment of Normal Wilson to the city's park and recreation board.

Mayor Dunaway proclaimed November 15-19 as "Be with a book for a day" week, and urged all residents to visit and support the city's library.

He read a release from city librarian Mary Carver concerning the effects of the county's cut in funding to the library system.

Hamilton suggested that residents phone or write the county commission or Probate Judge Tommy Snowden and "see if there's some way they can come up with a little more help" for the library.

A motion was made by Roy Jowers to change meeting time of council meeting from 7:00 to 6:30

Councilman Payne said to make sure the time was "p.m."

The motion passed and will go into effect for the next meeting on November 19.

PFD Chief William Bryars reported that his department answered 62 calls for the month of October, 22 of which were fire calls and 40 of which were rescue runs.

Chief Watson introduced three new police officers to the council, Mark Delk, Kenneth Cheeseman and Jack McKerley.

Watson reported that for October, police worked 47 accidents, nine grand larcenies, three petty larcenies, one assault with intent to murder, one assault and battery, seven burglaries, three roberies, two auto thefts and 15 incidents of vandalism.

Alabaster outlaws weapons

by Bert Seaman

From now on, anyone caught carrying an unconcealed weapon within the city limits of Alabaster will be subject to a fine and the possibility of imprisonment.

On the recommendation of Police Chief C. E. "Bull" Carter, the panel passed the ordinance Monday night which covers airguns, pistols, rifles, all types of knives and slingshots.

It was mentioned that a number of street lights, traffic lights and car windshields had been put out with airguns and slingshots. It's hoped that the new law will put an end to this type of nuisance.

There is already a state law on the books, it was pointed out against carrying concealed weapons. "This will add some extra teeth for the benefit of the city," remarked Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek.

The new ordinance will carry a maximum fine of $200 and imprisonment of up to 20 days. Both penalties can be imposed.

Another ordinance that was passed concerned the updating of sub-division regulations and adding some new provisions. The recommendations were made by the city's zoning board and a public hearing was held three months ago.

When there were no objections to the proposal, it was given to city attorney Karl Harrison to draw up. Since the regulations are too lengthy to publish, they are available for inspection at city hall.

Although the three council members present favored giving the local YMCA a 20 year lease, the motion was tabled until the next meeting so the Councilwoman Charlotte Burke and Councilman Gene Glasgow could voice their opinions.

The Y's director, Molly McGregor, has appeared at a previous meeting asking for the long lease so the Metropolitan Y would contribute funds for badly needed repairs.

At the present time the Y's lease is only for five years. Agreeing that any organization would need a longer lease than that before pouring money into the repair of a facility, Councilman Dan Gillis said he favored the move.

Noting that extending the lease would tie the hands of future administrations, the city's attorney had discouraged the panel against taking action on the matter.

"I don't think there is anything else that worthwhile that the building could be used for," Councilman Wayne Lucas remarked.

According to the mayor, the main thing needing repair at the Y is the swimming pool. He reported the Y felt the work could be done for around $40,000.

Asking for an answer to the request she and her realtor husband had made at a previous meeting, Mrs. Harold Walker was told that the city's attorney had recommended the city not get involved in the matter.

Installing sewer lines to some new apartment units, the couple had crossed a strip of land owned by the Columbiana Housing Authority. And because an easement had not been obtained the authority filed a suit against the Walkers requesting that the lines be removed.

Attorney Karl Harrison had pointed out the city could be brought into the suit if they entered the dispute so no action was taken on the matter.

Young Houdini escapes new jail

Montevallo police and county law enforcement officers have found that it's no easy task to hang on to a 17 year old Homewood youth.

Anthony Cunningham, who is the first prisoner ever to have escaped from the new Shelby County jail, made his first successful break-out from the Montevallo jail seven days earlier.

Jailers say that Cunningham managed to get out through a window in the Columbiana facility at approximately 2 p.m. Friday. It's assumed that the youth made good his getaway in a 1974 Chrysler that was stolen from its parking place on the main street of town.

According to jail sources, Cunningham took the arm off a chair in the pod where he was being held, and used it to pry the frame off one of the unbreakable plastic windows.

It's reported that the area where the youth was being kept has been designated for female prisoners. And the windows in that pod, it's said, are different from those in the rest of the prison.

Because that area cannot be seen from the tower, Cunningham had been gone for two hours or more before he was missed.

No one is certain how the clever prisoner managed to get outside the barbed wire topped fence. Since there are no holes in the enclosure, one jailer theorized that he might have squeezed underneath.

Cunningham left the Montevallo jail by way of an 11 by 12 inch ventilator through which he managed to cram his 168 pound frame.

A description of the car in which the youth escaped from the Municipal jail was put in the NCIC (National Crime Information Center) machine and he was picked up in Birmingham two days later and taken to the Shelby County jail.

The same procedure has been followed after Cunningham's second flight from jail, but at presstime Tuesday, there was still no word as to his whereabouts.

Montevallo police had arrested the Homewood youth after they had stopped him for driving with out tail lights and then found the car was stolen.

Habitual criminals face new sentencing

The new 'Habitual Offender' Act will be a good thing, according to Circuit District Attorney William Hill.

Hill told the Reporter in an interview that the new law, which is scheduled to go into effect the first of the year, should lead to keeping habitual criminals off the streets.

According to Hill, the new law will deal with sentencing the Class A, B, and C felonies.

If a person has previously been convicted of a Class C felony and then is convicted of another Class C, he or she will be punished as if the second offense were a Class B.

If convicted for a second Class B felony, the offender will be sentenced as if he or she had committed a Class A felony.

Hill told the Reporter that under the "Good Time Law" many criminals have learned how to manipulate the system, where a life sentence means a maximum prison term of 8 years.

He thinks the new 'Habitual Offender' Law "will build some consequences into the system."

Hill has been serving as District Attorney for the 18th Judicial District (Shelby, Clay, and Coosa Counties) since last spring. He was named to fill the vacancy created when former D.A. Harold Walden was elected Circuit Judge.

School communities select new trustees

School communities throughout the county are now in the process of nominating school trustees to serve each school for the next four years.

Each school or school community will nominate six individuals. From the six nominees the Shelby County Board of Education will appoint three. The other three names will be held by the Board of Education, and should it become necessary to replace a trustee before the next regular nomination, the replacement will be one of the remaining three.

Section 16-10-1 of the Code of Alabama, 1975 provides for Boards of School Trustees. Trustees need not be patrons of the school, but must be nominated by the patrons. The law specifies that trustees will be "discreet, competent, and reliable persons of mature years, nominated by the patrons of the school, residing near the schoolhouse, and having the respect and confidence of the community.

Duties of the Board of Trustees include "visiting the school to consult with teachers and principals as to the progress of pupils, conditions and cleanliness of the school and the grounds and to give aid and advice for the advancement of the school." The Board of Trustees shall keep the county board of education advised about matters affecting the educational interest of the school. Trustees also have the power to authorize the use of the schoolhouse for community events that in their opinion do not interfere with its principal use of instruction.

Elections are scheduled by each school. For time and place, patrons may see additional announcements in this newspaper or telephone the school.

Helena woman killed in three-car crash

A three car crash on rain slick U.S. 31 in Pelham Thursday evening killed a Helena woman and injured three other people.

According to Coroner Billy Thompson, Mrs. Mary Warren, 59, of 1510 Citation Terrace, Helena, was announced dead on arrival at Shelby Memorial Hospital at 6:56 p.m., November 1.

Leman Warren and Durbin were taken to SMH, treated for minor injuries and released. Simons was listed by SMH in satisfactory and improving condition Monday.

Sgt. Matson said that the accident occured at 6:20 p.m., and that it was raining steadily at the time. The wreck partially blocked traffic for over an hour, Matson added.

Columbiana okays cafe dance floor

After ascertaining there would be proper supervision, the Columbiana City Council Thursday gave a Columbiana business owner permission to set up a dance floor in the recreation building adjacent to her restaurant.

However, the panel agreed they needed more information before giving approval for a trailer to be set up on a city lot.

Reporting that she was remodeling the Dairy Queen, Vivian Butterworth told the council that because it was so loud, she wanted to move her large jukebox out of the eating area into the adjacent game room.

"And young people have been wanting a little dance floor," she informed the council. The businesswoman noted that an attendant would be present at all times and that the area would be open the same hours as the restaurant.

Butterworth assured the council that there would not be any live music and no liquor would be served on the premises. "There won't be any charge for the dancing," she said adding, "the only cost will be for the jukebox."

Considering the matter after Butterworth left the meeting, Mayor Bob Bolton mentioned that the city had an ordinance regarding dance halls. Since Butterworth hadn't had any trouble at her game room, the council decided to give her permission to have dancing.

The council was reluctant though, to give Mrs. Kyle Gothard permission to put a trailer in the backyard of her home on Carter Lane until they knew the size of the lot.

It was mentioned that there are already several trailers on the street and it was brought out that an ordinance regulating them was adopted when Wales Wallace was Mayor.

In other business, the council approved the reappointment of two library board members whose terms had expired. Mrs. Ben Skelton and Jim Strickland will serve four more years on the board.

After discussing the matter of holidays, the panel decided to close city offices on Veterans Day, Monday, Nov. 12.

City Clerk Mary Largin called attention to a new state certification program for various types of contractors. She mentioned that the contractors would have to qualify before they could obtain a business license.

Historical Society officers

Ken Penhale, center, received a gavel when he resumed the leadership of the Shelby County Historical Society after an absence of several years in the office. Other new officers are (l-r): Nell Fulton, Doris and H.G. McGaughy, Kate and John Reese and Tom Caldwell.

History group repeats history with re-election of president

The man who served as the first president of the Shelby County Historical Society when it was organized five years ago got his old job back Sunday.

However, Ken Penhale received a new gavel at the Wilsonville meeting to use during his present term in office.

Before members voted on their new slate of officers, they heard some of the history of the community where they had gathered related by a lifelong resident.

Mrs. T.O. Smith not only told about people, churches and schools in the area, but she also displayed some of the 35 albums she has filled with pictures and clippings of important events.

Two former residents came from their home in Talladega to attend the meeting. Woodrow Elliott had once taught school in Wilsonville and then gone on to become principal of Shelby County High School, and Shelby County Superintendent of Education. Before his retirement last year, he had served for 10 years as Director of the School for the Blind and Deaf in Talladega.

Other officers elected at the meeting are: Madine Evans 1st vice-president; H.G. and Doris McGaughy, 2nd vice-presidents; Kate and John Reese, 3rd v p's; Jane Cain, recording secretary; Marty Everse, corresponding secretary; Nell Fulton, treasurer; Tom Caldwell, historian.

Those appointed to the Board of Directors are: Outgoing President Miriam Fowler, Harold Davis, J.D. Hester, Golda Johnson, Barbara Roberts, Harold Reid and Probate Judge Tommy Snowden.

Solid waste pouring into landfills

The Helena landfill continues to claim the title of 'biggest' in the Shelby County landfill system.

According to a report by Carlton Franks Solid Waste Supervisor, to the County Commission Monday, the Helena landfill took in over four million pounds of waste during the month of October.

The Westover landfill took in 1,217,000 pounds, and the landfill at Calera took in 1,104,000 pounds.

Out of 4,830 people served at all three landfills, 4,118 were auto and pickup customers who were not charged. Nevertheless, permits collected at the gates from commercial users totaled $6,669 for all three landfills.

Advance permits totaling $8,000 in cash was also taken in during October.

Calera making plans for Christmas parade

Planning for Calera's Christmas parade is already underway, with the naming of committees this week.

Carl Prichard, chairman of the event for the Chamber of Commerce, told the Reporter that the parade is scheduled for December 15. It will begin at 6 p.m. from the Armory.

Civitans and the Chamber of Commerce are co-sponsoring the activities.

Named to the committees are: Administration; Pat Phillips, Billy Graham, Carl Prichard. Publicity; Marion Jones, Ralph Sears, Pauline Ellison. Contacts; David Downs, Hubert Shirey, Carl Prichard.

Judges-prizes; Tommy Lawrence, Bobby Loftin, Doug Lesueir, Mary Farris, Pat Phillips, Billy Graham. Floats; Pat Phillips, Fay Ashley. Line of March; Bobby Phillips, Neal Harkins. Santa Claus; Phil Baer and Hubert Shirley.

High school bands from all nearby cities are being asked to participate, and the organization that wishes to may enter a float in the parade. A prize of $100 will go to the first place float in the parade.

Crane campaigns in county

Carter is a good man-a religious man - but hopelessly inadequate for the job," Congressman Philip Crane told a gathering Tuesday afternoon in Pelham.

The U.S. Representative from Illinois and aspirant to the Republican nomination for President, addressed a crowd of about 50 onlookers and the Pelham band in the Pelham Plaza. He came to Shelby County at the urging of the local Republican Party headed by Bob Dewey of Pelham.

Arriving shortly after 3:30 under escort by Pelham Police, Crane and Dewey marched through the ranks of the Pelham band as they played the theme from the movie "Superman".

Referring to the American hostages being held by militant Iranian students, Crane blamed the incident on a lack of U.S. intelligence.

Crane said he recently visited Mobile after Hurricane Frederick and indicated he was impressed by the mayor of Prichard when he gave law enforcement people in that town a "shoot to kill" order when they saw looters making away with the property of storm victims.

The first obligation of government is to protect the life and property of its citizens, Crane said.

"A lot of Americans have lost sight of that," he pointed out.

Mentioning Vietnam, Crane said, "Never again should we commit any boys' lives without total commitment to victory."

County assessor answers your tax questions

Shelby County Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds prepared this list of the questions most commonly asked by taxpayers and provided the answers.

PROPERTY OWNERS QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q. Why did I get two notices, I've only been getting one?

A. The new mapping system in the State; if a piece of property crosses a section line, a railroad or main road, it is a separate parcel.

Q. This shows me with 13 acres, I have 15.

A. Acreage shown in calculated acres. It normally will differ from deed acreage, as it is only for taxable property, not excluding rights of way and other factors.

Q. Is my tax notice correct?

A. We will check it out and if it isn't, we will be happy to see that it is corrected.

Q. Why didn't I get Homestead?

A. Your deed is dated November 11, 1979, since the tax year runs from October to October you would have had to be living in the house on October 1, 1978 to have received Homestead this year.

Q. Why did my tax bill jump this year?

A. All the property has been revalued in the State under a Federal Court ORDER plus Amendment No. 1 put property in classes; farm, pasture, timber and residential property are in Class No. 3 at 10%, rental and undeveloped lands are in Class No. 2 at 20%. The combination of the reappraisal and Amendment No. 1 has resulted in a higher valuation in your case.

Q. Why did the taxes on my home go down this year? They are not as much as last year.

A. Last year residential was assessed on a 15% ratio. This year it is on 10% or ⅓ off the top of your assessed value. Homestead last year was on the State's portion only, this year it is extended to the County portion also.

Q. Must I re-sign for Homestead?

A. If you received Homestead exemption last year, then you will not need to re-sign.

Q. Why didn't I get a tax notice?

A. There could be several reasons:

1. Because of the date on the deed, it is assessed to the previous owner.
2. No address.
3. Moved, Post Office didn't forward.
4. The contractor did not update per the latest deed.

Q. How can I tell what property class I'm in?

A. Look at your notice from the Board of Equalization, if the assessed value is 10% of the appraised value you are in Class No. 3, if the assessed value is 20% of the appraised value you are in Class No. 2.

Q. If my home and lot is in Class No. 2 and I lived on the property October 1, 1978, how can I get the class changed to Class No. 3?

A. By bringing proof (power bill, telephone bill, etc.) to the Assessor's office.

Q. Can I also get Homestead?

A. Only if you received it on the same property last year. If you never signed for Homestead on this property, you may sign for the exemption and receive it next year.

Q. I went to the Board of Equalization and they didn't make any changes, can you?

A. I'm sorry, I cannot change any values.

Q. What do I do next after the Board refused to lower these values?

A. You have the right to Appeal the values to Circuit Court for this tax year.

Q. What can I do if I don't want to go to Circuit Court?

A. Not anything for this year, but when the Board goes back in session in March, you may write a letter requesting an appointment with the Board and meet with them again.

Q. What is current use?

A. Current use may be applied for on property that is in Class No. 3 and is being used as farm land, crop land or timber land. If your property qualifies for current use, the value will be adjusted for tax purposes.

Q. How do I get current use on my property?

A. You may get an application in the Assessor's office to fill out and turn back in before December 31, 1979. This will be for taxes due October, November and December, 1980.

Q. I went before the Board of Equalization and they said they were going to change my value, but my tax notice did not reflect that change having been made.

A. The Board hearings resulted in approximately 8,000 changes - 1,200 changes that because of deadlines to be met did not get made. But, as we have time these changes are being made and you will receive a corrected tax notice, because we are tied up during the working day waiting on the public, we are slow in making these corrections and it may be the first of the year or later before you get a corrected tax notice.

Q. You were supposed to change this for me, or the mappers on the third floor said this would be changed.

A. If you saw either me, the mappers or the Board and were told a change was being made, you need not come back on the same correction. We are working on them and you will receive a corrected bill.

Q. Will I pay a penalty if I am late in paying my taxes?

A. Not if you can't pay your taxes because of an error being corrected in this office as a result of the reappraisal.

Q. I never received a separate notice before for personal property.

A. In the past personal property was assessed on the same assessment sheet as real property. The bookkeeping system has changed this year and personal property will be assessed and billed separately.

Q. Are the Commissioners going to do anything about the sloppy job the contractors did in Shelby County in the reappraisal?

A. Yes, the Commissioners and the Assessor have turned this over to the county lawyers.

Q. I've tried to call you for three (3) weeks. You must have your phone off the hook.

A. There are only two (2) telephones in the office. There are two (2) ladies answering them all day. They are not off the hook. We can not make calls out, either.

Q. Why don't you hire more personnel?

A. I do not have the budget nor the space for additional personnel. Inexperienced personnel is not the solution.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

They brought Mrs. Nellie Church Seale home last week and put her in the Johnson cemetery. next to her old home place on the road that leaves the Wilsonville road just beyond Johnie Mooney's house and comes into the ferry road the other side of Hugh McDanal's place.

Halfway down that road was the Frank Church home. And inside the Frank Church home besides two boys, John and Charlie, and Mr. and Mrs. Church, were eight daughters: Essie and Lizzie and Nellie and Nalda and Ludie and Mildred and Margaret and Ruth.

And if you are an Old-Timer and remember the times when the Church girls were growing up, you'll remember that very very often they were referred to as the pretty Church girls. And for good reason, too, as any Old-Timer will tell you.

They went to school at the old Wright School House, walking down the road from their home, and carrying their lunches in little bundles Mrs. Church had fixed. A little one-room country school with a pot-belly stove and a single teacher and bright young folks from up and down the roads nearby.

Twice a month, on Sunday night, they walked to Chapel Church, and shared in the service, walking back home afterward up the long, dusty road. A little country church and another pot-belly stove and a preacher who came every other Sunday.

And so they grew up. Pretty girls who became lovely ladies that Dan Cupid found one by one so that, before very long, they were scattered all over with homes and families of their own.

Now there was Mrs. Essie Church Stinson and Mrs. Lizzie Church Lyon and Mrs. Nellie Church Seale and Mrs. Nalda Church Crowson and Mrs. Ludie Church kyker and Mrs. Mildred Church George and Mrs. Margaret Church Upton and Mrs. Ruth Church Moore.

While Time, the gypsy she is, kept running away. And the years, that wouldn't stop, kept piling up. And all of us-- old genks like me and pretty girls like them-- kept getting a little older.

One Thursday, since she and her husband, Tracy, had become semi-shutins, Bro. Jim Merrell and I put Mrs. Nellie Church Seale on our visiting list. We'd visit them at their home on Turner Boulevard every other Thursday. But her health was failing fast now and they carried her to a nursing home, along with her husband, Tracy.

And last week they brought her back home. I went to see her at the funeral home-- the fourth pretty Church lady who has passed away. Afterward I talked with her four sisters who are still living-- Mrs. Ludie Kyker, Birmingham, Mrs. Mildred George, Birmingham, Mrs. Margaret Upton, Lipscomb and Mrs. Ruth Moore, Pelham, and the one remaining brother, John Church, Birmingham.

And for all you Old-Timers who I'm sure will want to know: Those Church girls are still pretty. A little older, maybe, but still pretty.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Watching the Lawrence Welk show the other night, I was reminded of the time I rubbed elbows with one of the stars.

Even though in recent years, I've seen several of the performers on that show on the stage in Birmingham, the experience didn't compare with the close-up encounter at a county fair many long years ago.

Well, really - there wasn't that much to it, but it was the closest I'd ever been to what you'd consider a star.

The man I'm talking about is Joe Feeney - that cute little Irish tenor.

When the kids were young and we had gone to visit my parents, Feeney was appearing at a fair near where they lived. I'm sure we didn't go to the fair just to see him, but anyhow we did watch his performance.

After he finished singing, everyone crowded around to get his autograph or shake hands. I think the thing that amazed me most about the little guy was the number of children he'd produced - something like nine or ten, I think.

Feeney laughed, as I recall, when he mentioned his huge family, attributing the number to his taking Geritol, one of the sponsors of Welk's show.

Before seeing Feeney in person, I think the only other star I had ever seen in the flesh was Ingrid Bergman.

When I was in high school, our English class traveled to New York City to see the famous actress when she was appearing on Broadway in Joan of Arc.

I'm sure I must have been impressed by her talented performance, but what I remember most about the star is her feet. When we left the theatre, I can still remember everyone remarking about how big her feet were.

My glimpses of the famous or near famous persons of stage and screen fame have been few and far between - but as you can tell, the few I have seen have made quite an impression.

Sonny Davis, mail carrier from the Calera Post Office, stopped at the County Commission meeting Monday to give the Commissioners a cheerful word. He told them he appreciated the work they did in maintaining the roads in Shelby County. "Our worst roads are better than Chilton County's best," he said.

He told them he drives 26 miles of Chilton County roads every day, and several more miles of Shelby County roads. He said that whenever he had reported a road problem or a sinkhole, Shelby County had taken care of it within a very short time. "I wanted you to know I appreciate what you're doing."

Abex Works Manager L.E. Belluchie, wrote the County Commission, requesting that the Commission lengthen the runway at Shelby County Airport.

Belluchie pointed out that people in the county who need to take several trips a month on business are inconvenienced by have to drive to Birmingham. He said Abex aircraft cannot land at Shelby County due to the short runway.

His letter said, in part,

"Last week I had to make a trip to Pennsylvania in the company plane. Instead of working at the plant until thirty minutes before departure, I had to make the trip to Birmingham Airport losing a good part of the afternoon.

Starting in November or December and continuing through 1980, Abex will have a company plane landing weekly or better. I would like to think that would be at the Shelby County Airport rather than the Birmingham Airport.

In this day and age of crowded airports and reduced airline schedules, corporate flying is growing at an ever increasing rate. When you have a high movement factor of people, as we do at Abex, Calera, corporate flying becomes a must.

Without adequate airport facilities, the county not only loses some of its desirability with its local business citizens, but definitely places itself in a handicap position for new business citizens."

Courthouse county offices will be open on Veterans Day, and will close on the Wednesday, before Thanksgiving, Probate Judge Tommy Snowden announced Monday.

He expects several persons to be buying automobile tags next Monday, and would rather keep the offices open, rather than taking it as a holiday. To compensate, employees will get to take off on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving, lengthening that holiday.

Chief Deputy James Jones asked the County Commission for permission to spend a sum of money designated "subsistence allowance" for a salary for a new and additional correctional officer in the jail. The new person would be a woman and would work the evening shift.

Jones said the jail needed someone to work the NCIC machine accurately, because if the material is not put into the machine correctly no one can trace stolen autos and other vital information. The Commission agreed to the transfer which involves about $14,400 in the sheriff's department budget.

The Shelby County Board of Registrars is registering new voters through Thursday night from 5 to 9 at Valley School this week.

According to Doris Turner, chairman of the board, 99 persons signed up to vote in the period October 1-15. She says that is a large number, considering no election is coming up soon.

After concluding the registration at Valley School this week, the board will be registering only at the courthouse until after the first of the year. Registration hours are 9-3.

Mrs. Turner asked the County Commission Monday for a larger office space in Columbiana. She said the present room is not big enough to seat four persons and the three registrars at the same time.

Briarwood Christian School asked the Commission for a traffic signal near the school. County Assistant Engineer Hilry King pointed out the school is on a state highway, and the county cannot install signals there. He suggested the school refer its request to the State Highway Department.

The Commission agreed Monday to hire a qualified appraiser to conduct immediate correction work on ad valorem appraisals in the county. Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds and State Revenue representative Johnny Hayes told the Commission it is urgent to correct certain errors now, so that taxes can be paid by December 31.

The Commission had not planned to hire an appraiser until January 1 for the appraisal maintenance program.

WIN program lands 3100 jobs for state welfare applicants

Last year, jobs were found for about 3,100 welfare recipients participating in Alabama's WIN program. WIN, which stands for Work Incentive Program, is operated jointly by the Employment Service and the Department of Pensions and Security. It exists solely for the purpose of finding jobs for applicants and recipients of Aid to Dependent Children.

"We'd like the figure to be much higher than 3,100," Pensions and Security Commissioner Gary Cooper said. "In these days of high unemployment and belt-tightening in both business and government, however, jobs and training programs for those with little education and experience are scare."

Many ADC recipients are required to register for WIN in order to retain eligibility for ADC. Many of those who do not have to register, however--including those with small children at home and with disabilities that make it difficult for them to work--volunteer for the program.

"About a third of the 11,000 people who registered for WIN last year did not have to register for the program," Cooper pointed out. "Their eagerness to sign up should help to dispel the myth that welfare recipients don't want to work."

Retirement plan near for Columbiana

It seems almost certain that before the year is out, a retirement plan for Columbiana City employees will be in effect.

Representatives of four companies showed up at Thursday night's council meeting to present figures for individual retirement plans. A fifth plan was submitted although the representative did not appear.

Because the proposals were so similar, Mayor Bob Bolton asked finance chairman Paul Smith to appoint a committee so careful consideration could be given to all the fine points of each.

"We'll tear them apart," Smith assured the insurance agents. "We just won't pull a name out of a hat," he said.

A proposal was submitted last month by the Liberty National Insurance Company. But then the council decided it would be best to check and see if any other company in the city was interested in competing for the city's business.

"I never dreamed this many companies would be interested in dealing with this," Bolton remarked after the representatives had spoken.

When the matter of a retirement plan had been broached in previous meetings, there was usually mention of the state's plan which a number of employees favored.

However, the city has made it clear that there would be little chance of the employees getting that plan because of the high cost involved.

The council agreed in September to pay 5% of the cost with the employee paying a matching amount. A figure of $8,343 was set aside in the 1979-80 budget to cover the city's share.

In addition to Liberty National, the other companies submitting proposals were: Transamerican, St. Paul, Midwest National and State Farm.

Those named to meet with the finance chairman and look over the plans were: James Palmer, Howell Horn, Jeff Hill, Nelson Latham, Lewis Walker, Bill Seale, Fran Owen, Harold McCord and Mark Largin.

Pumpkin plugged in shooting

by David Moore

Other than a pumpkin, which was plugged by a shot from a .32, no injuries occurred during a recent shooting at a Pelham curb market.

According to reports by PPD officer Jerry Lewis, the shooting took place October 30 at Bill's Curb Market on U.S. 31, two blocks north of Crosscreek Trail.

Around 2 p.m., Bobby Copeland of Pelham went to the curb market to discuss a salary matter with his brother-in-law Bill Robinson who owns the market.

After the two men went inside the building an argument and scuffle broke out between them.

According to witnesses who talked with police, Copeland came out of the building and as he left, he allegedly fired four or five shots from a .32 caliber automatic pistol.

One of the shots hit a pumpkin on sale for Halloween, and several others reportedly hit fruit baskets.

According to Pelham police, felony charges are pending in the case.

The Question of Infant Baptism

As in the study of other religious questions, one must go to the New Testament in order to answer the question "Who is a fit subject for New Testament baptism?" Inasmuch as Christ taught that the commandments of men lead to vain worship (Matthew 15:9), we must speak as the oracles of God (I Peter 4:11) -- that is, seek for a Bible answer to all religious questions. Thus we approach the question, "Are infants fit subjects for New Testament baptism?"

Jesus Christ answers this inquiry in Mark 16:15, where He states, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be condemned." Here, we see two characteristics of the one who is to be baptized. First, he has the capacity of being taught the gospel, and second, he has the capability to believe. Christ therefore teaches clearly that infants are not subjects for New Testament baptism.

The Apostle Peter teaches, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2:38) Luke recorded that, "They that gladly received his word were baptized, and there were added unto them that day about 3,000 souls." (Acts 2:41) One can thus see from the above events that those baptized were able both to repent of sins and to receive the word. Since infants have no sins of which to repent and since they cannot gladly receive the word, the events in Acts 2 rule out an infant's being baptized for the remission of sins.

A brief perusal of the book of Acts, the book of conversions, will show that no infant was baptized for the remission of sins in the early church. Any such practice is foreign from the teaching of the scriptures, holds it origin with the commandments and doctrines of men, and is destitute of the authority of Jehovah.

Dear reader, have you gladly, received the word, believed, repented and been baptized in water for the remission of your sins? Though no infant is subject to these commands, all responsible individuals must comply therewith.

THE TRENDS IN THE FURNITURE BUSINESS

There are always great new trends taking place in the home furnishings industry. Just one of the important trends that you'll see is the trend towards better design in each and every period--but perhaps the most important visible trend is what has been called "Eclecticism", or "The Mix" - with more and more people mixing styles and periods by buying the SPECIFIC pieces of furniture they want, regardless of what other style or styles they may have in their homes.

This has been a good trend because it enables you to assemble the exact pieces of furniture you need and like.

You see more "individualism" in furnishings with more variety of goods offered, and more people expressing their individuality by using different and distinctive things in their home.

Whatever your furniture preferences are, you know that you may see a fine, complete selection here.

Our policy has always been to carry the largest selection possible of good quality furniture at reasonable prices. And we keep up-to-date in styles and trends--so you can get the furnishings you want.

We invite you to come in.

Campus police have new image

Police duties at many colleges and universities have undergone "an amazing evolution" in the last 10 or 15 years, according to University of Montevallo Police Chief David Nichols.

The old campus "security guard" concept has given way to highly organized and professionally trained law enforcement officers, who are involved in fields as diverse as traffic control and parking, energy use monitoring, criminal investigations, fire safety inspections and emergency medical work.

Nichols, who recently wrote "Campus Police: The New Professionals," in a national magazine, American School and University, also said that university police are generally younger and more educated than their counterpart city or county officers. And students have influenced the change.

College students today, he said, are generally more serious about their studies than students who were on campuses only five or 10 years ago. They also want to study and enjoy the varied social and cultural activities offered on most campuses, Nichols added, in a safe, comfortable setting.

Students also prefer younger well educated officers who are capable of communicating easily with the various groups of students, faculty and university staff.

At Montevallo, the 10 full-time employees have completed an average of 3.4 years of college. Five have earned bachelor's degrees, one is working on a master's degree and one is working on a bachelor's degree.

"We'll compare to any other police force in the area," said Nichols, who is beginning work on a doctorate in higher education administration at the University of Alabama.

UM's police force is young, too. The average age of UM policemen is 28.

"We believe younger officers relate better to our students and better complement the youthful atmosphere of the University," Nichols said.

Although students no longer are required to register in and out of dorms within specific hours, the buildings are still locked late at night, he said. Students in each dorm know the combination to door locks. Many buildings which contain expensive equipment are also closely monitored, he said.

Public relations -- knowing and understanding people on and off campus and helping them know and understand you and your job -- is another major thrust of the department, Nichols said. UM Police meet with students in class, at fraternity, sorority and dormitory meetings and during other on-campus programs. They also have presented programs at local kindergartens, nursery schools and other public schools.

UM energy conservation program, which has received national and state recognition in recent months, has also involved UM police. When they make their building security inspections, they also check for lights left on and for windows open in heated or air conditioned buildings.

In addition to all of their on-campus work, the UM Police also work closely with local city and county policemen, too, Nichols said.

"The two departments, city and campus, lend themselves to reliance on each other," he said. "We have good relations with the City Police Department."

Just last September, campus police provided back-up service for the city 20 times.

UM Police know other area law enforcement officers through not only their day-to-day work but through organizations such as the Shelby County Chiefs of Police Association and the Fraternal Order of Police.

"We stress professional growth, training and service," Nichols said. "We are striving for a better department through education, training, selective employment practices and better public relations."

Yet several of the officers have more than five years of law enforcement experience, and the majority have completed the Alabama Police Academy.

"But we haven't stopped here," Nichols said. UM officers have attended several continuing education and training programs, and several have been sent to special schools in burglary investigation, police management, fire inspection, arson investigation and other law enforcement programs.

"Several of our officers are also involved in emergency medical service," he added. One UM policeman is a paramedic and one is an emergency medical technician, (EMT) level one.

"And we hope to send others to the EMT school this year," the UM chief said.

The old concept of providing campus security still is found at UM, too, in the 24-hour police coverage with usually two officers on duty. UM police patrol the campus both in cars and on foot.

"The foot patrols have given us a good public relations tool in addition to enhancing campus security," Nichols said.

Mark Austin and Joel Rochester check emergency medical supplies.

DID YOU KNOW?
Why energy conservation makes sense for you and Alabama Power.

If our customers would reduce the amount of electricity they use during the peak demand period in the summer, it would help hold down our costs for the expensive equipment needed to meet peak demand. That would help hold down the tremendous amount of money which we have to borrow and pay back to investors. So, energy conservation can mean lower investment costs for Alabama Power as well as lower monthly bills for you.

But quilts certainly aren't the only crafts that will be on display at the fall bazaar. Cahaba Valley painter Mildred Wyatt has donated paintings, and church members are offering hand-made Victorian doll beds with coverlets, giant stuffed dolls and numerous other hand crafted Christmas gifts and decorations.

A lunch of vegetable soup, corn bread and apple pie will be offered between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Cakes, pies and preserves will also be on sale at the "county store," section.

Bazaar spokesman Jennie Pittman says that no plans have yet been made for the proceeds, but in the past, bazaar has funded such projects as carpeting the sanctuary, buying equipment for missionaries, and buying major appliances for the church kitchen.

Calera club chooses royal couple

Willie Frost of Montevallo was chosen queen of the fall festival held by members of the Calera Sunshine Club and Thomas Tucker of Calera was named king. The club is $20 richer as a result of the penny a vote contest.

Some unmarried members of Calera's Sunshine Club found out they were going to discover a romantic interest in the near future. Others learned that they would be taking a trip.

Senior citizens heard about what was instore for them when their palms were read by Program Assistant Gertrude Geeslin who played a fortune teller at the club's Fall Festival.

And those who decided to play the game called "go Fishing," had some surprises when they opened the brown paper sacks they snagged. Each member had filled a sack and brought it to the event to put in the "pond."

Announcing the king and queen was one of the highlights of the affair. The royal couple were chosen according to who had raised the most money from votes.

Queen of the Festival turned out to be 86 year old Willie Frost of Montevallo and her royal constro was Thomas of Calera.

A little over $20 was raised from the votes which will be put into the club treasury.

RSVP volunteer Elizabeth Jeter helped in planning the event for the center which is managed by Gladys Whetstone. A capacity crowd of 50 were on hand for the festival.

Brownies organized

Brownie Troop 33 was recently organized in Alabaster with Donna Donnelley as troop leader.

The troop has a membership of 12 first grade girls from the Alabaster area, and was designated a Star Troop on compliance with registration for the Cahaba Girl Scout Council.

The newly organized troop held its investing ceremony on Tuesday, October 23 at the Siluria Depot. The girls received Brownie pins after individually saying the Brownie Promise. A reception for the parents followed the ceremony.

Some of the future plans for the troop include neighborhood service projects, field trips, cultural events and working toward Brownie achievement badges.

Pam Stackhouse and Jackie Blythe are assisting Mrs. Donnelly with the troop's leadership activities.

Cash convinces winner

It's getting tough to find the winners in Football Cash. Folks are winning the money but it's sometimes hard to get them on the phone and tell them. Such was the case last week when we tried to contact R.L Durrett of Alabaster and tell him about the $25 he won. Mr. Durrett correctly picked 11 winners and won in a tiebreaker to claim the cash. He'll be receiving the check by the time he reads about his win.

"Is this a joke?" was the first thing Mrs. Peggy Posey said Tuesday afternoon. Seems her husband played a joke on her a couple of weeks back and she found it hard to believe that the real Richard Crosby was calling and that she actually won Football Cash. She was convinced when she came down to claim her cash in person, the money she received verified that she really did win Football Cash.

Next week we'll announce the final winner of the season in Football Cash and we hope we'll be able to contact them and convince them that they did win. The final entry for Football Cash was printed in last week's Reporter, so take a minute and mail it in. This is your last chance in 1979.

Rotarians focus on education

The Montevallo Rotary Club heard guest speaker, Dr. Asa N. Green speak on the subject "Trends Toward the Breakdown of the Distinction Between Public and Private Institutions." Dr. Green, President of Livingston University, explained that current trends which bring public and private higher education institutions together might serve as a detriment to private higher education. He said that this would be unfortunate because the private sector laid the foundation for higher education in this nation.

This month of Rotary is dedicated to the theme "Education, Public and Private." Steve Sears, program chairman, announced that other programs during this month will feature Dr. Joe Jackson, Head master of Indian Springs School, Dr. James Vickrey, President of the University of Montevallo and Dr. Archie Moore, Director of Continuing Education at Alabama State University in Montgomery.

Action Cam comes to Alabaster

THS undefeated, rolls over Comer

Thompson's Warriors ran their record to nine straight last Friday night with a 34 to 14 win over B.B. Comer in Alabaster. Thompson meets Pell City this Friday to conclude the season and try for a perfect season record and a trip to the state playoffs.

"They (Pell City) have a real good team" Coach Larry Simmons told the Reporter. "They're super aggressive...hit real hard...and we're going to have to play real good to beat them." Pell City has a record of 6 wins and 3 losses but is tied with Thompson in the playoff standings because of Area wins.

The season finale will be played at Pell City. The winner of the game will meet Stanhope Elmore in the first round of the state 3A playoffs the following week. Whichever team wins this Friday night will host the first round game.

Thompson got off to a 28-0 lead in the firsthalf before Comer scored with a minute to go in the second period. The Warriors drove 60 yards for the first touchdown with quarterback David Cofer sneaking in for the score. Steve Smitherman booted the PAT to finish the seven point play.

Minutes later Thompson again drove downfield, this time with Chuck Woody scoring. Smitherman missed the PAT to leave the score 13 to 0.

In the second period, Mark Gamble intercepted a Comer pass and returned it 15 yards to the Comer five. Cofer took it in from there. Pete Lance carried for the two-point conversion making the score 21 to 0.

Thompson increased the lead minutes later on another drive that saw Woody score his second touchdown of the night. This one came on a 20 yard run. Smitherman added the PAT.

Comer got its first touchdown of the night with under a minute left in the first half. A two-point conversion attempt failed making the score 28 to 6 at the half.

The final points of the night for Thompson were collected by Mark Gamble who caught a 56 yard touchdown bomb from Charlie Griffin. Smitherman missed the PAT. Comer came back in the fourth quarter with a consolation touchdown with a conversion to make the final talley 34 to 14.

The best records for Larry Simmons at Thompson are two perfect seasons in 1972 and 1976, and a near perfect 9-1 record in 1973.

Warrior volleyball team wins state title

Thompson High won the state volleyball tournament at Bradshaw High School last Saturday evening. The state championship marked the first for Thompson in women's sports. The Warriors won the tournament for the first time with an additional honor coming to one player, Michelle Lewis.

Miss Lewis was named the Most Valuable Player in the 3A tournament, the second year in a row for the outstanding player from Thompson. The naming of Miss Lewis was also a first for the state as she is the first to receive the honor two years in a row.

Thompson defeated Bibb County for the state title, winning 16-14, 13-15 and 16-14. The Warrior squad came from behind in the final game to win the match. Down 14 to 10, Dana Greenhill took over serving for Thompson and the Warriors ripped off six straight points for the win.

The 'State of Alabama shaped trophy' is not the first Thompson athletic teams have brought home. The Basketball team won the state title in 1976 and 1977.

Thompson started the tournament whipping Eufala, Hazelgreen and Alexandria in 'pool play' and meeting Bibb County in the first game of the finals. Thompson whipped the Chocktaws in two games, after losing three times to bibb County in regular season play.

The Warriors then met Russellville for the second round and repeated the performance they had against Bibb.

In the championship games, Bibb County had emerged from the loser's brackett to play Thompson for the title. Bibb needed two match wins over the Warriors for the state title and started the games like it would do just that.

In the first match, Bibb beat the Warriors in two games to throw the championship game into the final match. That's when Thompson got back on the winning track and defeated the Chocktaws.

Named to the All State squad from Thompson were Miss Lewis and Toots Cooley. Coach for the winning state champions is Lynn Rushing.

Other members of the title winning team are: Donna Oden, Angie Harris, Tina Sallis, Leigh Burkey, Dana Greenhill, Lisa Fortenberry, Katti Lewis, Kim Sides and manager Donna Farmer.

The championship for Thompson was sweet as last year the Warriors lost in the finals to settle for second place.

"Our girls played like champions" Coach Rushing told the Reporter. "They made up their minds they were going to win and fought back like champions. We're tickled to death to win the state title and feel we've brought another honor to our school and community."

Calera ready to fight Billingsley for playoff spot

Someone is going to the state playoffs after this Friday's game in Calera. For the Eagles to make the third consecutive trip they will have to beat unbeaten Billingsley at Oliver Park. A loss will give Billingsley the post-season playoff spot.

"We will have to play exceptionally well if we plan to win" Coach Danny Alverson said of the upcoming contest. "Billingsley lost only one player from last year's team and they are maybe even better than last year."

Calera defeated Billingsley last season with a 44 to 20 win that has been called one of the greatest games in Calera football history. Both teams seesawed for three quarters before the Eagles broke on top to stay. Billingsley has a perfect 9-0 record coming into the game this year against Calera who sports an 8-1 mark.

The Eagles got off to an early start last week against Maplesville and coasted to the eighth win of the year with a 27 to 0 score. Billingsley scouts in the stadium was no doubt a reason for Calera to keep some of its secret weapons on the sidelines.

In the first quarter against Maplesville, Raymond King started the scoring drives by recovering a fumble on the 21 yard line. Two plays later, Fran Blanchard carried for 19 yards and the game's first touchdown. Johnny Ryan added the PAT.

Seven minutes later, Dale Smith recovered a Maplesville fumble on the 48 yard line. Seven plays later, Ryan sneaked in from the one for the score. He also added the PAT making Ryan's talley 7-0.

In the second quarter Calera scored on a 48 yard pass play from Ryan to Blanchard. Ryan's PAT made the first half score 21-0.

The final score of the night came after a pass interception by Ryan who returned the ball 25 yards to the Maplesville five. Bill Seay got the call on the first play and ran for the score. The PAT was ruled wide with 5:14 left to play in the game as Calera took the win 27 to 0.

Rushing leaders for Calera were Ryan with 35 yards, Seay with 107 and Blanchard with 148. Dale Smith lead the defense with 19 tackles. Jeff Stewart had 17 and Curtis Barefield 15. Other strong performances were made by Raymond King, Lloyd King and Kirk Ross. The Calera defensive secondary picked off five Maplesville passes.

This week's game is the all important one for the Eagles and despite all the glory collected to this point, the season rests on Calera winning another playoff spot. The players will tell you that this week is the 'season' game.

Vincent and Chelsea ready to clash

Vincent and Chelsea will tangle this Friday night in a classic rivalry. Vincent has the upper hand in the contest, winning the past two years in hotly contested games.

"We've been getting ready" Chelsea Coach Richard Conkle said of the game. "We're trying to get some people well but still think we'll be missing a few players.

"On paper, Vincent is 40 points better than us. They have really improved since the beginning of the season and I think they have a better defense and offense," Conkle told the Reporter.

Vincent brings a 7-2 record into the game while Chelsea only boasts a 2-7 season mark. But, in this kind of game the record doesn't matter.

Last year Vincent won in Chelsea 16 to 8, and the year before in Vincent by a score of 22-13. In 1976 Chelsea won on its home field 20 to 19.

Anything can happen in this game and fans can bet that season records won't matter much when the East Shelby County bragging rights are up for grabs.

Editorial by Richard Crosby

Chelsea problems stem from lack of support

Coach Richard Conkle is under fire at Chelsea High School from several members of the community. A resolution was adopted at the Quarterback Club meeting last week calling for his resignation.

It is becoming apparent that some college football trends are sneaking into the high school ranks. When a coach doesn't win everyone right away blames the coach and asks for a replacement. The trouble is, most people believe that a coaching change will automatically make the team a winner. That hasn't worked out in several instances.

Coach Conkle has been at Chelsea since football began for the school some 13 years ago. Two perfect seasons and several winning ones have been posted at the school and most of those years, Conkle was the only coach.

In the past 10 years, most coaching staffs have grown from two to five or six. The reason was obvious, six coaches can get more done than two. Chelsea hasn't enjoyed such changes though, as Conkle and one assistant and handled the chores for football.

"The days of a two-man staff are over" one county coach lamented a week ago. "We've been playing teams with staffs of five and six every game this year." He quickly added that he wasn't offering an excuse for losing, but that with a larger staff, the fine points of the game can be handled with more individual attention. Thus, this coach says that a large staff makes coaching easier and the team is able to concentrate on the more important, larger aspects.

What has happened to Chelsea is what seems to me as an obvious lack of communication between the athletic department and the school administration. When extra coaches are needed, the normal method of procuring them is to inform the principal that a need exists and then when a teaching position opens, both the principal and coach get together to see if they can get a coach to fill the vacancy. That has yet to happen in Hornet country.

A new coach was hired at Chelsea this fall, but not with the approval or knowledge of Conkle. Let me add that Conkle is not dissatisfied with his new assistant, only with the manner in which he was employed.

A new coach at Chelsea will encounter the same problems Conkle has the past several years-not enough support from the community and school. Until that is changed, Chelsea will continue to suffer defeats.

The problem appears to me that many angry football fans know little about the game and about what it takes to win. Besides having qualified coaches, the team needs athletes.

I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but Chelsea isn't blessed with an abundance of star athletes and those that will become good football players at the school still have some experience to get under their belts.

Chelsea has had the misfortune this year to play a lot of senior ball clubs and teams which have some high quality athletes. That, coupled with the inexperience of the Hornets will cost some games. What Chelsea needs is more time and more help on the field and less bickering in the background.

Surely some will say I'm helping to protect a coach, but they will be wrong. I'm defending the system of coaching. When parents and residents can dictate who will coach, than a change is needed.

Someone said at Chelsea a week ago,"When the Bear loses he accepts full responsibility for the loss." The answer is elementary. Bryant chooses who he wants to play for him and high school coaches don't.

"We're tired of these losing seasons" was one quarterback club member's comment. My answer to them is,"Where were you several years ago when it became apparent that the athletic department needed some help°" Money isn't the only asset that a school draws upon. Support from the community and parents of the players is the biggest asset and without that, no school can become a winner.

It would be sad to see Conkle leave Chelsea but in one way it would point out to the people of the community that winning involves more than who the coach is.

With the support of the community and administration, nearly any coach can have a respectful season. Conkle is also capable of the same if he had a sound base of support. It's up to the poeple of Chelsea to start getting behind the cart and pushing instead of standing on the side and telling everyone why it won't go forward.

Gaddis falls

Rance Gaddis carries for Montevallo but gets tripped up as he starts his advance. Despite losing ground on the play, the Bulldogs turned in a winning performance. (photo by Armstrong)

Bulldogs whip West Blocton

Montevallo won its second game of the season last Friday over West Blocton. The Bulldogs combined passing and running and a tough defense in winning the game 14 to 6.

A first half of inconsistency plagued both teams as they fought for field position. Montevallo looked to be ready to score late in the second quarter. The Bulldogs drove 58 yards to the Tiger nine, but Quarterback David Melsoni was intercepted.

From there, West Blocton started driving the ball confidently, but the clock ran out as the Tigers moved to Montevallo's 33 yard line, leaving the first half scoreless.

Montevallo broke the deadlock in the third period. West Blocton fumbled on its own 12 yard line. Three plays later the Bulldogs made the Tigers regret the miscue as Clay Cardone bulled his way into the endzone for a touchdown. Jeff Hall booted the PAT giving the Bulldogs a 7-0 lead with 7:18 left.

With 2:14 remaining in the third quarter, the Bulldogs scored again. This one at the culmination of a 57 yard drive that took 8 plays. Cardone again got the call and ran five yards for paydirt. Hall added the PAT making the score 14 to 0.

West Blocton received the kickoff and on the first play broke for an 88 yard run. Ernest Carrol ran for the touchdown. The conversion try failed which left the score 14 to 6.

In the fourth period both teams had opportunities but failed to take them in. West Blocton had first chance with a drive that went to Montevallo's 20 yard line. The Bulldogs held the Tigers on a fourth down play to stop the advance.

Montevallo also made a run at the goal line. Moving to Blocton's 11 yard line, the Bulldogs were intercepted again to kill the drive.

The final game of the year for Montevallo is this Friday night against Talladega County Training School. The game is the Bulldogs' homecoming. "TCTS is not taken lightly by anyone anymore" Coach Richard Gilliam said. "They have a good running attack and a lot of speed. They could cause us a lot of problems and are going to be tough."

Defensive standouts for Montevallo were Kevin Lawley, Rex Wallace, Jeff Hall, Steve Melsoni, and Clay Cardone. A problem for Montevallo this week may be the injuries. Quarterback David Melsoni and fullback Clay Cardone a doubtful for the season finale.

"Our seniors will have to carry the load and I hope they want it," Gilliam stated. A loss this week would give the Bulldogs a 2-8 record - the worst ever for Gilliam in his coaching career.

In State volleyball tournament

Briarwood team finishes second

Briarwood Chirstian High School placed second in the state in volleyball last Saturday. The Lions came in second to Graystone High out of Mobile in a tournament played at Briarwood.

The Lions whipped Faith in the first round of the double elimination tournament and then beat Graystone in the second game.

Graystone came back in the finals out of the loser's brackett to beat Brairwood twice for the tournament title.

In route to the finals, Graystone beat West Birmingham Christian, fell to Brairwood, then beat Faith and Brairwood for the title.

Although losing, Brairwood took second place in the Alabama Christian Athletic Conference, a new high for the volleyball team at the school.

Two players from the Shelby County based school were named to the All Tournament team. Tammi Mutterspan and Cathie Simkins received the honor.

Members of the squad in addition to Misses Mutterspan and Simkins are: Emily Snuggs, Heidi Espey, Magie Saunders, Anne Bethune, Cathy and Frances Campbell, and Heather Henderson. Mrs. Karen England is the coach for the squad.

Pelham falls to Jemison 7-12

"They whipped us good and outcoached us bad" Coach Steve Rivers told the Reporter of the Jemison game. The Panthers whipped Pelham 12 to 7 in Jemison last Friday night to give Pelham its fifth loss of the season.

"Coach Swann had his boys ready to play and their defense whipped our offense on the field. They ran a 4-4 defense which we hadn't seen all year and we were unable to do anything against" Rivers said. "Our kids played hard but Jemison knew everything we tried to do."

Jemison scored with 45 seconds left in the first half on a 15 yard run. The conversion failed making the halftime score 6 to 0.

In the third quarter, runningback Mike Scoggins broke for a 34 yard touchdown run to make the score 12 to 0.

Pelham got its only score of the night with 2 minutes left in the game. The Panthers recovered a fumble on Jemison's 15 yard line. Steve Rye carried for the touchdown several plays later on a six yard run. Woody Woodson toed true on the PAT making the final score 12 to 7.

Pelham holds its homecoming this week in the final football game of the year. The Panthers host Holtville and hope to even the year at 5-5. "We're trying to break even to give us something to go into the spring with" Rivers stated.

Pelham lost four games this season by less than six points each. The 4-5 record is still two wins better than ever for the Panthers but knowing that next year Pelham will qualify for state and Region play, the schedule will be tougher and wins harder to get.

Vincent loses state title volleyball bid

Vincent's volleyball team failed to place in the state volleyball tournament last weekend but despite that, Vincent coach Debbie Patterson is still pleased.

"We were proud to have made it to the state playoffs" Ms. Patterson told the Reporter. "It was a first for Vincent and will help us next year now that we know we can compete on a state level."

Vincent lost thre straight matches in the tournament which was held at Muscle Shoals High School.

The Yellowjackets lost to Geneva County, Lexington and Holly Pond in tournament action Friday afternoon.

Indian Springs soccer team completes successful season

The Indian Springs School volleyball team, coached by Fred Gipson, completed its season with a record of 11 wins and 8 losses in regularly scheduled matches. It also has two runners-up trophies from the Shelby County and the Area 8 Tournaments.

The six regular starters were seniors Susan Pizitz of Mountain Brook and Priscilla Goodwyn of Bessemer, juniors Elaine Stone and Lisa Ayers of Birmingham, and sophomores Emi Araki from Japan and Lisa Rueve of Pelham. Numerous other participants gave valuable support and indications are that next year's team can be even stronger.

In the Shelby County Tournament at Briarwood the team employed a 4-2 offense to score victories over Shelby County, Briarwood, Pelham, and Chelsea. An impressive Thompson team under coach Lynn Rushing sent ISS to the losers bracket early, but the team battled back and finally out-lasted Chelsea who were obviously very tired after losing an intensive 3-game match against Thompson.

In the finals with Indian Springs, Thompson left no doubt they are the powerhouse in Shelby County and took the championship in two consecutive games. The referees selected Priscilla Goodwyn and Emi Araki to present Indian Springs on the all-tournament team.

In the recent area 8 tournament at Isabella, ISS employed a 5-1 offense with Araki as setter. After winning against Weogufka, Indian Springs was sent to the losers bracket by an undefeated Isabella team, then they beat a scrappy, improved Verbena team to gain another chance against Isabella.

The ISS girls refused to give up and shocked the home crowd by giving Isabella its first loss of the year in two straight games to set up the final championship match. However, Coach Hill's Isabella team then proved once again the importance of poise and consistency in scoring the championship victory. The referees selected Araki, Goodwyn and Rueve for the all-tournament team. Miss Araki was also the recipient of the most valuable player award, a well-deserved honor.

Richard's final season picks

by Richard Crosby

Well folks, here's my final picks of the year and most of you will probably breathe a sigh of relief. So, without further delay, here's the picks.....

Thompson at Pell City-The Warriors are on the track for a perfect season but the going won't be easy as the Panthers have always played tough. You can expect a struggle but the Warriors want the playoff spot more and that will be the difference. Prediction: Thompson 33, Pell City 22.

Shelby County at Leeds-The Wildcats hope to have a win but hoping isn't enough and I think Shelby County has run out of gas. There seems to have been an enery crisis and rationing hasn't panned out. Sorry to see Shelby County lose its seventh straight. Prediction: Wildcats 6, Leeds 28.

Billingsley at Calera-The Eagles will have to play a perfect game to win a playoff spot and that isn't possible. I think Calera could win if the game wasn't being played at Oliver Park but since it is I have serious doubts. Prediction: Calera 22, Billingsley 47.

Holtville at Pelham-The Panthers can end the year with a 5-5 record with a win this Friday night and it shouldn't be hard to do. Look for the Panthers to win the game before a giant homecoming crowd. Prediction: Pelham 27, Holtville 0.

Chelsea at Vincent-The Hornets will find Vincent tougher than ever this Friday night and winning another game this season isn't going to be easy with a team of Yellowjackets on the other side of the ball. Prediction: Chelsea 11, Vincent 24.

T.C.T.S. at Montevallo-The Bulldogs might have some severe problems this Friday night when the Tigers come to call but after a rough first half Montevallo will rise to the delight of the alumni. Prediction: Montevallo 22, T.C.T.S. 6.

UM Lady Falcons ready for state

When the University of Montevallo Lady Falcons square off against Spring Hill College at 9.00 a.m. this Friday, Nov. 9, in the first round of the AAIAW Division II Volleyball State Tournament at the University of Alabama in Birmingham, they will take a couple of new school records with them.

As a result of winning the West Georgia College Tournament in Carrollton, GA over the past weekend, the Lady Falcons established new standards for wins in a season and consecutive wins, breaking marks that were set only last year.

Montevallo's record, after winning nine matches last week, six in the tournament, now stands at 35-10, and the Lady Falcons have won their last 13 matches. The old records were 33 wins in a season and 12 in a row.

"Records are nice," acknowledged UM coach Beverly Warren, who in three years at Montevallo has led her team to an excellent 87-31 mark, "but I'd rather not think about them until after the season. There's still too much at stake, and I just want us to keep playing like we have been lately."

What is at stake is that state championship, and the Lady Falcons would have to rate as strong contenders off their recent showings.

Montevallo has met Spring Hill, its first round opponent, only once this year, beating the Lady Badgers 15-4, 15-4 in the Univeristy of New Orleans Tournament in September. Other teams vying for the state crown will be Jacksonville State, The Univeristy of North Alabama, Judson, Troy State, Tuskegee Institute, and Alabama State University.

Conkle issues 'No Comment'

Coach Richard Conkle of Chelea High School refused comment on the request for his resignation.

By a vote of 31-14, Chelsea's Athletic Booster Club asked for Conkle's resignation last week apparently because the team has not had many winning games in the past few seasons.

Conkle told the Reporter he was preparing a statement which he would read (after press time) Tuesday night to the club.

Conkle has been at Chelsea as football coach for some 13 years and is a tenured teacher. Indications are that he does not plan to resign.

Chelsea has a three-man staff this season in the football program and plays all the other county high school teams as part of its regular schedule. However, the high school enrollment at Chelsea from which to draw a football team, is smaller than that at most of the other county schools.

SCHS loses 26-18 to Chilton County

Shelby County High School lost its sixth straight game last Friday night to Clanton 18 to 26.

The win was a demoralizing one for the Wildcats who showed great promise as the season began, ripping off three staight wins, but from there the Wildcats fell apart, losing six straight.

Coach Mark Bradley had little to say about the game, commented that he had no excuses for the loss.

Shelby County plays its last game of the season this week at Leeds. A win would give the Wildcats a boost toward the off season program and something to base next year's goals on.

FOR BETTER HUNTING AND FISHING

BY EARL FRANKLIN KENNAMER

Squirrels became legal game statewide Oct. 25. Hunters in some northern Ala. counties have been bagging the bushy-tailed rodents since Oct. 15. Their season will close Jan. 2, 1980 and hunters in remaining counties will enjoy legal squirrel hunting through Jan. 11. Daily bag and possession limit is eight squirrels.

In my yearling years the squirrel was the most popular game species of the woodlands. I spent almost every fall and winter afternoon after school in a beautiful Dallas county swamp. My weapon was a .22 calibre Savage Model 23 A bolt action five-shot rifle. I saved my pennies during depression years of the early '30's and bought a Weaver 3-power scope sight with post recticle. An adjustable leather sling completed the assembly. After school every day when rain wasn't falling I dropped my books in my room, slung my rifle over my shoulder and bike pedaled the five miles to the swamp oak bottoms.

I firmly believe my early squirrel hunting years taught me rules and techniques of proper rifle shooting and stalk hunting. Rule of thumb then was to bag a squirrel with a head shot. This meant a clean, quick kill and no damage to body meat. After returning from the war, however, I collected my squirrels with a full choke bored shotgun with No. 6 shot. With a shotgun I bagged more squirrels and was able to save the squirrel brains which are delicacy on the breakfast table. However, many years ago I discovered brains contain a lot of salt, are high in cholesterol and polyunsaturates. You can't win!

Before 1945, the squirrel was top game species to the majority of Alabama hunters. Starting that year biologists began to trap and restock deer in counties where this game species had disappeared decades ago. On the heels of deer restocking, turkeys were reintroduced in areas that would support them. State Biologist Bill Kelly in a recent report stated that an annual state mail survey of hunters revealed the steady decline of the squirrel as most popular game species statewide.

In 1964, squirrel hunters outnumbered deer hunters 2-to-1. Rabbit hunting was second in popularity. By 1967 increase in number of deer hunters was spectacular, but squirrel hunter numbers remained about the same. Dove replaced the rabbit as holder of second place in popularity. By 1972 deer hunter numbers were on a par with squirrel shooting enthusiasts. The 1975 survey revealed the 196,400 deer hunters outnumbered the 172,700 squirrel hunters. And 168,770 hunters rated the dove as about equal to the squirrel in popularity.

The gray, or "cat", is the most abundant squirrel and there are several subspecies. The larger, lazier fox squirrel is abundant here and there. Many persons object to eating squirrel meat because the animal is a rodent. But to me squirrel must be as tasty as beef, which often is being produced with poultry litter as feed. What about folks who like snails?

Squirrels can be taken by still hunting -- sneaking slowly through the oaks and hickories when ground leaves are wet. If leaves are dry, I select a big tree to prop against. Some hunters use dogs, especially late in the season when squirrels race about over the ground searching for nuts.

I usually don't shoot the first squirrel of dawn. If I hold my fire, soon two or three squirrels will begin romping about. If I collect a couple of these, I sneak through the woods a couple hundred yards to a new position.

Skin squirrels quickly as possible. The pelt is easily removed when the carcass is still warm. This holds true for deer, birds, etc. I learned this during the years I trapped mink, muskrat, raccoon and beaver for the fur trade.

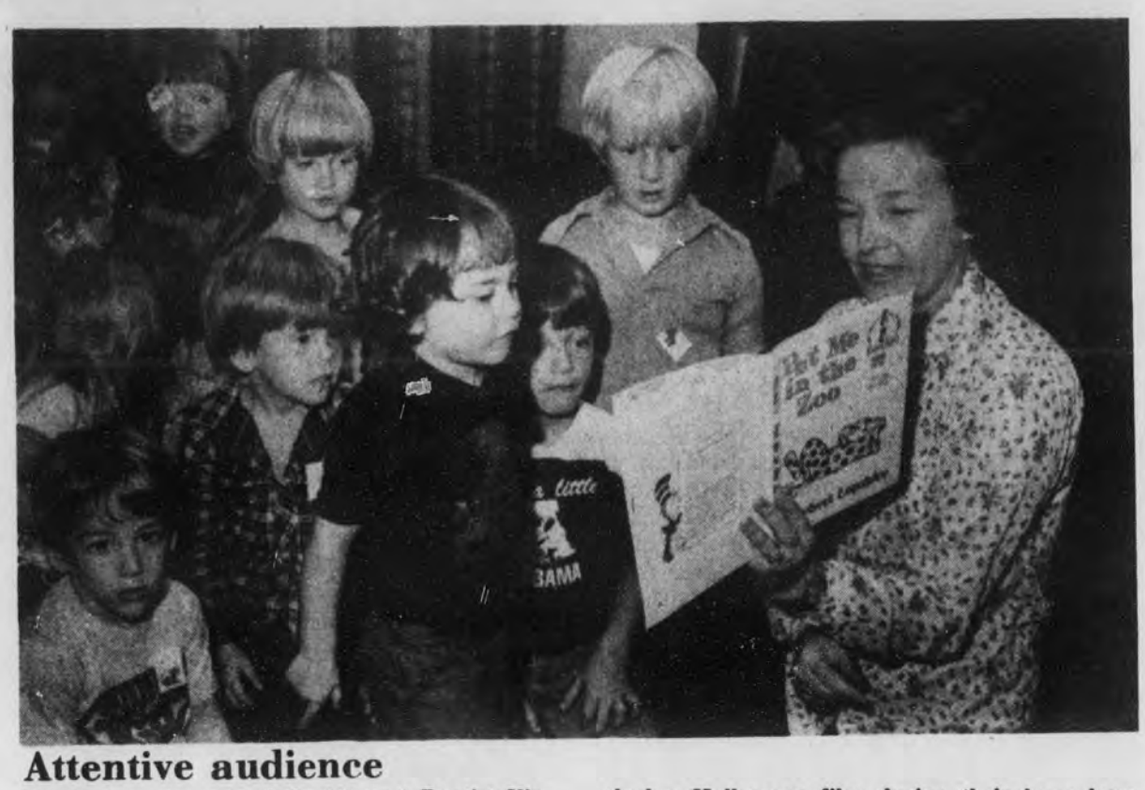
Maybe it's my imagination, but I believe there are fewer squirrels in hunting woods today. The acorn is staple fall and winter food of squirrels, but it is also preferred food of the white-tailed deer and the wild turkey.

In cities the squirrel is a pest because it cannot be controlled with firearms. It robs you of your pecan crop and sweet corn is often a delicacy. I even saw one squirrel race from my garden with a Small Fry tomato in its mouth!

By the way, squirrels you bag before cold frosts may often be infested with wolves -- larvae of the warble fly, which also affect cattle -- and hunters with wolve-infested squirrels or rabbits usually throw them away. I simply clean out the indentations in the flesh and cook away!

As I have said in my columns the past five years, tender young squirrel is best broiled or fried. I cut the varmint into four to six pieces, dip them in milk, dredge in seasoned flour and fry in hot cooking oil or shortening. When pieces are brown, I remove, add to the skillet a little flour and brown, and then a cup of my homemade beef or chicken stock with enough water to keep the gravy from getting too thick.

Then I pour gravy over scratch biscuits. This will make you appreciate the secrets of the past in pioneer cooking. Older squirrels make good stew. I'll cover these recipes along with others later on.



Attentive audience

Youngsters who attend the Vincent Baptist Kindergarten and several other boys and girls from the community, listen with interest as Nadine Jackson reads them a Dr. Seuss tale during Story Hour at the Vincent Library. The group also watched a Halloween film during their hour long session and received Clifford the dog stickers which described their behavior was fair, good or excellent.

Vincent youth attend Story Hour

A dark, rainy Thursday was brightened considerably for a group of Vincent youngsters as they listened to a Dr. Seuss story entitled "Will You Put Me in the Zoo."

MICHAEL T. ATCHISON

The story and a Walt Disney film were part of the library's Story Hour which has recently gotten underway.

Vincent's Study Club, sponsors of the Story Hour, has engaged Nadine Jackson as storyteller during the one hour session every Thursday morning.

As the 31 tots from Vincent's Baptist Kindergarten and several other youngsters listened enthralled Thursday, Jackson read the Dr. Seuss tale and Shelby County Library Director Pam Williams showed the film "Trick or Treat."

According to Vincent Librarian Ruby Smothers, the purpose of continuing the Story Hour, which is usually only held during the summer, is to keep the children interested in coming to the library.

It is hoped that when they bring their children, parents will also use the facility, Smothers added.

At the present time, libraries that have story hours are: Pelham, Alabaster, Calera, Vincent and Columbiana.

For information about times, call the Shelby County Library at 669-7851.

Pelham realtor suggests cities float bond issues for homebuyers

A Pelham based realtor claims there is a way to take the slack out of the currently sagging housing market.

Tom Cory suggests that municipalities in northern Shelby County take out bonds, place them in savings and loan institutions and make the money available to people buying houses in the area.

According to Cory, high interest rates on housing loans are keeping people from buying in the once booming north Shelby area. Interest on housing loans are running as high as 12.75%, he pointed out.

Cory said cities could put the money in savings accounts where it would draw interest until loaned out to house buyers. Cory said the loans could be made at 10% or even less.

The real estate agent said other cities had issued bonds for similar purposes, and such action in Shelby County could conceivably bring millions of dollars into the area.

Party marks day

Youngsters in the special ed class at Elvin Hill Elementary School in Columbiana had a great time at their Halloween party. Games included fish pond, pin the nose on the pumpkin, musical chairs and toy walk. Pearl McGinnis teaches the class and party sponsors were Sally Ray, Bertha Jordan and Robbie Falkner.

Soprano sings at UM recital

University of Montevallo Music Dept. voice instructor JoAnne Dawson, soprano, will appear in recital Monday, Nov. 12, at 8 p.m. in UM's LeBaron Music Hall.

Her recital will include "Emily Dickinson Songs," by Aaron Copland, "Tel jour telle nuit," by Francis Poulenc, and "Wesendonk Songs" by Richard Wagner. The recital is free and open to the public.

Women named 'Outstanding'

Because of their accomplishments in their homes, professions and communities, three Shelby County women have been selected for inclusion in the 1979 edition of Outstanding Young Women of America.

Among the 15,000 names appearing in this year's annual awards volume are those of Jenetta Corbett Keller, Montevallo; Peggy Ann Prucnal, Columbiana; and Susan K. Wyatt, Siluria.

All of the women selected are now being considered for one of the fifty-one state awards to be presented to those women who have made the most noteworthy contributions in their individual states.

In order to qualify for inclusion in the volume, a woman must be between the ages of 21 and 36. Nominations are made by womens' organizations, college alumni associates and public officials.

Grocer wins award

A Columbiana grocer who always has a friendly word for his customers received an award Thursday for one of the other bonuses he provides when they shop in his store.

Charles Hannon, left, presents J. B. Green with an award for 25 years with the S & H Company.

J.B. Green, owner of Green's Food Center, received a plaque for the 13 years that he has issued green stamps.

Making the presentation, Charles Hannon from the S&H Company, said "Your store, with progressive retailing, has been on the front line of value for a long time."

Hannon is Promotional Services Area Manager of the 83 year old stamp firm which began doing business in Alabama in 1909.

Mentioning that more than 300 retail establishments in the state currently issue green stamps, Hannon reported that Green's Food Center was one of the 25 in Alabama to be honored this year for a long association with the Speery Hutchinson Company.

Foreign tourists boost business

Tourists from foreign countries should be included in general plans to draw tourists to the area, according to a report heard by the Tallacoosa Highland Lakes Association recently.

Meeting at Cheaha State Park, the group heard Caroline Cavanaugh, State director of the Bureau of Publicity and Information say that foreign visitors are often more interested in seeing industry and agriculture than the more traditional tourist attractions.

According to a report from Dr. James Adams, who compiles the Alabama Travel Survey at Auburn's School of Business, Alabama travelers are the most numerous in the state and spend the most. His report indicated the biggest spenders are golfers and fishermen.

Income from tourism on a statewide basis has increased from $½ billion in 1973 to $1.7 billion in 1978, the report also stated.

Directors of the Tallacoosa Highland Lakes Association from Shelby County are Probate Judge Tommy Snowden, Commissioner J. E. Bearden, Robert Hume, and Starling Baker. J. Claude Smith of Westover is executive vice president of the association, which includes several counties in east-central Alabama.

CPR is for everybody

Fifteen people enrolled for a CPR course that was sponsored by Dr. James Alston and Dr. Robert Thornburg in Columbiana last week.

Those who took the course were enthusiastic about its value, saying, "We feel that more people in Shelby County should become interested in this course."

It is offered by the American Heart Association free of charge. The course lasts 4-6 hours and gives instruction in cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

Artisans perform at fair

The 7th annual "HANDS AT WORK" Craftsmen's Fair will be held in the Birmingham Botanical Garden Center, November 10 and 11, Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, 1 to 6 p.m.

"HANDS AT WORK" is an educational crafts fair, where you can see local artisans turning basic materials such as wood, fibers, clay, glass, metal, stone and others into beautifully handcrafted goods for sale and display.

Sonny's Gulf station offers full picnic supplies

Ready for a summer's end picnic?

You'll find all the supplies you'll need for a fun afternoon in the park or even in your backyard at Sonny's Gulf.

Coolers, cups, plates, ice, drinks, bread, luncheon meats, the list goes on and on.

A tradition of service to you and your automobile--Sonny's Gulf has been serving Shelby County customers for years and now the service is better yet.

Always located on the Columbiana bypass, where you travel often, Sonny's now has a new location...where the bypass crosses Hwy. 70, it's easy to get to from either highway.

Gulf Oil, a name you've come to trust in petroleum products, is Sonny's supplier of all brands of fuel and oil.

If you're watching pennies these days, as most of us are, you can drive up to Sonny's self-service pumps, covered to keep you dry in rain and cool in sunny weather.

But if you're in a rush or need a bit of extra care for your car, Sonny has full service pumps as well.

He's got a full line of other car care products--wipers, wax, dry fuel, etc.

But it takes more than excellent service and dependable products to satisfy Sonny that he's giving you what you deserve as his long-time customer.

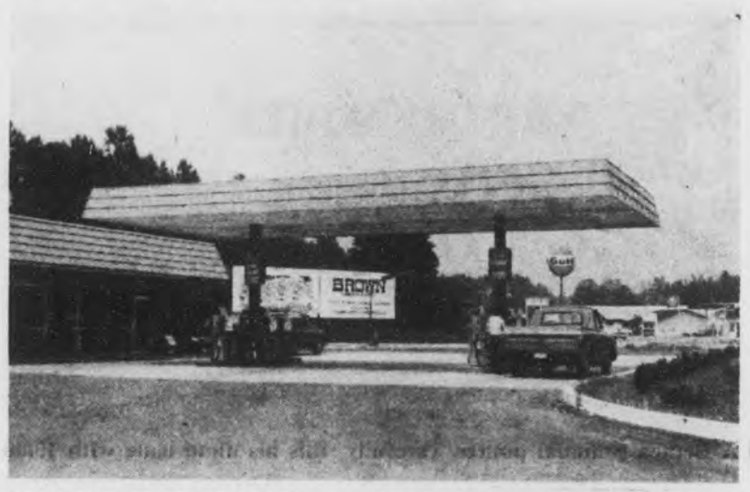
You'll find a complete grocery at Sonny's, too. For any kind of cold beverage, don't go any further than Sonny's refrigerated coolers.

And whenever you need gas, groceries, picnic supplies, even fishing tackle, Sonny's is waiting to serve you. He's open from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m., unlike most conventional stations.

So go ahead, take that picnic you've been wanting to take with your family and friends. And let Sonny give you the supplies you need when you need them.

His motto is "Keep Smiling" and he's kept his customers smiling for years. Now there's even more to smile about at Sonny's Gulf.

Sonny Payne greets customers at his station with courtesy and a ready smile.



SONNY'S GULF STATION - located at the intersection of Highway 70 and Highway 25 bypass on the west side of Columbiana.

Pelham company's hardware goes to worldwide markets

by David Moore

The Bethea National plant and main office is located in Pelham. But their work stretches clear across the U.S. and numerous foreign countries.

Located on Hwy. 31, the 8.5 acre facility produces high quality, cast aluminum and ductile iron clamps, fittings, brackets, conductors and guying equipment to suspend high voltage, overhead power transmission lines.

From salesmen to furnace tenders and pattern makers, the company employees 320 workers, of which 200 are from Shelby County. Bethea National boasts approximately $10 million in sales, with an annual payroll of $4.2 million.

The company was incorporated as the Bethea Company in 1950 by Malcolm Bethea. In 1962 the company's foundries, then located in Bessemer and Greenville, Alabama, were consolidated into the present facility in Pelham.

In 1977, the Interpace Corporation acquired the company as a subsidiary. The cost of the acquistion was approximately $7.2 million.

Now operating under the name of Bethea National, the company is a part of Interpace's Lapp division, which specializes in electrical utility construction products.

Bethea National has always been a self-contained operation, purchasing raw materials, processing them through to finished products, and selling them.

According to Bethea Industrial engineer John Ives, the company also produces componenets for products built by other industries, such as automotive, agricultural equipment and valve companies. Most of these outside products, he points out, are produced by the company's iron casting facilities, as virtually all the aluminum casting is done for Lapp and Interpace.

Ives points out that Bethea National observes stringent quality controls because high quality parts are necessary to withstand the oft times severe weather conditions where power lines are stretched through extreme climates.

At Bethea, a product is designed, usually by house engineers, to meet specific applications, Ives says.

In the company's pattern shop, pattern makers convert blueprint drawings to wood mock-ups or replicas of a specific part.

From the wood replicas, impression plates are made and molds are formed in black processed sand. Ives says that high volumn items are in the process of changing over from the one-shot sand molds to permanent molds, and that some of the equipment to do this has already been received.

In the aluminum foundry section of the plant, three 350 kilowatt electric induction furnaces melt the metal at a temperature of 1400 degrees, Fahrenheit. Melting capacity of the furnaces is 1350 pounds per hour.

Pourers deftly ladle the molten aluminum into the molds which are set out on a large work floor. After the aluminum hardens, the sand molds are burst open and the shiny parts are sent through a heat treatment process which bakes the parts at 1000 degrees for fourteen hours.

Ives explains that the heat treatment changes the crystal structure of the metal, and is followed by a water bath which quenches or freezes this changed molecular state. The part is then "aged" for four hours at a temperature of 310 degrees to allow the stress from the quenching process to come out, Ives adds.

All these processes are done to increase the tensile strength of the metal.

In the plant's iron foundry, one of the main differences in the process is the infusion of magnesium into the molten iron. Ives explains that this is done to remove impurities from the steel and strengthen it. The infusion process is accompanied by a blinding flash of light.

As a further step in quality control, parts are examined by a magnetic particle inspection process, Ives says.

The different pieces to each part are mated together in the processing and assembly rooms, then boxed for shipment.

From the Bethea National plant in Pelham, high voltage hardware is shipped cross-country and points around the world. Ives explains that although national utility construction is down, exports to developing nations in Central and South America, Africa and the Middle East are keeping production up at this important Pelham industry.

Trooper cadet signup ends Nov. 15

The deadline for applying to become an Alabama State Trooper Cadet has been extended until November 15. A state merit examination is planned for December.

The Alabama State Trooper Cadet program gives young people between the ages of 18 and 22 a full year of academic and on-the-job training in law enforcement. During this year, cadets receive a salary beginning at $10,127 and are provided with uniforms, lodging and meals while training at Alabama Crimininal Justice Training Center. At the end of the first year of training, cadets meeting minimum age requirements are eligible to take a promotional test to become Alabama State Troopers. Those who have not reached Trooper eligibility age serve in other meaningful work areas with the Department of Public Safety.

To be considered for the first class of 30 Alabama State Trooper Cadets, interested young people who feel they are qualified for a career in law enforcement must apply before November 15. Applications and further information are available at State Employment Service offices throughout the state and at Alabama State Trooper offices.

Project pride

Cub Scouts from Pack 532, Den 1 have been working Wednesdays after school landscaping the front of Helena Elementary. The project is designed not only to plant shrubs, but to cultivate school pride as well. See story inside Reporter. (Photo by Moore)

Riverchase annexation moves to halfway point

With two major steps already taken and two left to make, the annexation of Riverchase by Hoover appears to be halfway toward becoming reality.

The most recent step came November 2 with the signing of an agreement between Hoover and Riverchase developers. The first step came last June when a polling of Riverchase residents indicated a general acceptance of the proposal, thus giving further steps the green light.

The third step will come after the Legislature goes into session in February, when a bill for the annexation will most likely be presented for consideration.

The final step, like the first one, will be taken by Riverchase residents, who will hold an election on whether or not they want to be annexed into Hoover, The election cannot be held until after the bill is passed by the Legislature.

Should the annexation proposal be passed, the Jefferson County municipality of Hoover would extend its city limits into North Shelby County.

The 3000 acre Riverchase development currently contains about 200 single family dwellings and about 1000 undeveloped lots in Shelby County, and some 32 business property owners (including South Central Bell, Blue Cross/Blue Shield, and Loehmann's Village) in Jefferson County.

The 20-year agreement finalized earlier this month was signed by Hoover Mayor John Hodnett, Howard V. Levy of New York with the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and John M. Harbert, III, of Harbert Construction in Shelby County.

The agreement calls for the city to cover the cost of a sewage treatment plant up to $3.5 million, with Harbert picking up any overrun on that figure. Basic sewer charges will be $37.50 for single family lots and $75 per acre for non-single family property.

Tap-on fees cannot be more than Hoover residents currently pay in Jefferson County.

The agreement also calls for police, fire and garbage collection to be provided to Riverchase by Hoover, as well as recognition of the Riverchase Homeowners Association, and that Riverchase retain its identity as the "Riverchase Area of Hoover."

State Senator Doug Cook, Rep. J. T. (Jabo) Waggoner, and Rep. Dewayne Lewis met Friday with city officials and Riverchase developers to discuss the agreement.

Although none of the legislators was available for comment, indications are that one of them will introduce a bill for the annexation when the Legislature convenes in February.

Riverchase project director Leo Morehouse told the Reporter he has met with area businesses about the annexation "and for the most part they are for it." Morehouse said he received no negative responses.

According to Bob McWhorter, chairman of the Riverchase Homeowners Association steering committee, "It seems like basically everybody's for it in Riverchase. Now we're waiting on Waggoner and them to introduce the bill."

Streets in Evansville widened; Hidden Valley zoning delayed

by Reporter Staff

The project to upgrade the streets in Montevallo's Evansville area is nearly complete.

Councilman Herbert Milstead and City Clerk Don Hughes reported to the Montevallo City Council Monday night that streets have been interconnected and widened and will be graded periodically until early next year at which time a final surface will be applied.

Hughes reported to the council that new water lines have been laid and new water meters have been installed at individual homes in the Evansville area. Hughes also said that a meeting will be held in the near future, in Evansville, to obtain suggestions for naming the area's streets.

A group of a dozen residents of Montevallo's Hidden Valley subdivision attended Monday night's meeting, asking council members to postpone a zoning change for an area presently zoned agriculture. The area is adjacent to the subdivision.

The owner of the property involved is William Surface. Surface has suggested the area be zoned residential, a suggestion that has been approved by the city's planning commission.

Hidden Valley residents expressed concern over the possibility of run-off water encroaching on their property.

After more than an hour's discussion, council members agreed to postpone a vote until the next meeting of the council, scheduled for November 26.

In other business, council members approved the transfer of an off-premises beer license to Frances W. Bissett, new operator of the Oil Well service station located near the viaduct on Highway 25.

Council members also approved a change in status for two police officers. Jesse Payne will become a part time officer. Bill Gray will become a full time policeman.

Wilsonville Council debates dog control

Complaints about dogs running loose sparked a discussion at the Wilsonville Council meeting Monday night about passing a dog control ordinance.

Even though the panel agreed that such a law would be good to have on the books, Mayor Austin Mitchell pointed out that enforcement would be a problem.

It was noted that someone would have to be hired to catch the wandering canines and the expense of purchasing the necessary equipment would also have to be taken into consideration.

The council decided to seek the advice of their attorney before taking any action on the matter.

Because of some confusion in the minutes of a meeting last year, Councilwoman Dot Scruggs asked the panel to vote again on the town's assuming the expense of putting up and taking down Christmas decorations.

She related that the Fine Arts Club which began the project had to give it up because of the ex-

Bad curve on Hwy. 17 takes another life

A Maylene woman was killed Saturday in a one car accident on Hwy. 17 South near Woodland Hills.

June Taylor Shrum, 25, died at 2:57 p.m. at Shelby Memorial Hospital from injuries she received when the car in which she was riding left the road and crashed into a tree, according to coroner Billy Thompson.

The car, a Datsun 280-Z, was driven by her husband, Charles Shrum, 24, also of Maylene. According to Alabama Trooper Gregory Abrams, the wreck occurred at 2:03 p.m. when the southbound Datsun ran off the road, smashing into a tree on the passenger's side.

Charles Shrum was listed in poor condition at University Hospital at press time.

According to Helena PD Chief Gary Carter, Mrs. Shrum's death marks the ninth fatality on the curve near Woodland Hills in about five years.

Does NSFD have legal right to give service to Wine Ridge?

Some county officials are claiming that North Shelby County Fire District's (NSCFD) contract for fire protection with Wine Ridge is illegal because the district is expanding its boundaries across county lines. But NSCFD trustees disagree.

Trustee John Pruitt defends the contract from the standpoint that it was signed with a "separate body" (the Wine Ridge Service District) and that the boundaries of the NSCFD were not extended at all.

"We haven't changed boundaries one inch," Pruitt says, adding that the district's charter made provisions for it to contract with other parties.

Wine Ridge is located in Jefferson County, south of the Cahaba River, and the only access to it is via County Hwy. 370. The Wine Ridge Fire Board also includes Coshatt Estates.

The contract between Wine Ridge and NSCFD was set up in early October. For $18,000 per year, NSCFD will answer fire and rescue calls for the 181 houses in Wine Ridge.

Prior to the contract, Wine Ridge was served by Rocky Ridge FD, located some six miles away, or twice as far as the NSCFD station on Hwy. 17.

Trustee Jack van Pelt, agreeing that the district had not actually expanded its original boundaries, said that it would be ridiculous not to serve Wine Ridge because there's an invisible county line down the center of the road.

At the NSCFD's board meeting November 5, Sheriff's deputy Louie Cosby presented the idea of using the district fire station as a north-end branch station for the Sheriff's department.

Van Pelt said the idea originated with Sheriff Buddy Glasgow as a means of saving traveling time and gas for deputies working shifts in North Shelby.

The trustee said that having deputies based at the station would provide additional protection to area residents, but that the proposal had yet to be approved.

Representatives from the Home Builders Association were scheduled to appear at the meeting to protest late fee charges on unsold houses within the fire district. But, van Pelt said, none of the members attended the meeting.

Van Pelt said fire dues for the upcoming year were in the process of being billed.

Traffic experts

The California Highway Patrol is currently studying the UM Traffic Safety Center's auto accident investigation team for adaptation in that western state. Meeting last Thursday in Alabaster, along with numerous area law enforcement officers, were (from left) Capt. Murder-suicide ruled in Columbiana deaths

A Columbiana couple were found dead at their home on County Road 49 Thursday. Both had been shot in the head in what appeared to be a murder-suicide.

According to Shelby County Coroner Billy Thompson, Jasper Hubert Clark fired a 20 gauge shotgun at his wife sometime Tuesday evening as she lay on the couch.

Then, Thompson reported, the 69 year old man, who had married Carrie Mae Davis in July, held the gun barrel in his left hand, aiming it at his own head.

Using the leg brace he had removed to pull the trigger, Clark ended his own life.

The couple were found by the dead man's grandson at 2:15 p.m. Thursday, the coroner said. He added that the young man had reported finding the two in good spirits when he ate supper with them the day they died.

Members of the Shelby County Sheriff's Department were on the scene and aided in the investigation.

Montevallo library gets $2,000 from state's revenue sharing

by Bert Seaman

"I guess something good comes out of everything bad that happens," remarked city clerk Don Hughes during a check presentation at the city's library Wednesday.

Hughes was referring to the people of the community getting behind the library in an effort to get it back in operation again after it was destroyed by fire.

Through the intervention of state legislators who were contacted by Hughes, Governor Fob James designated $2,000 in revenue sharing funds for the library.

At the brief ceremony Wednesday, Don Bryan from the Governor's office and Senator Lister Hill Proctor both pointed out that the city was fortunate to receive the revenue sharing funds.

"Because of Hurricane Frederic," Bryan noted,"there were very few projects to which the governor was able to allocate funds."

Proctor said that he was "extermely pleased," that the governor had seen fit to appropriate the funds for the Montevallo library. "If you knew the situation, and all the demands there are for the money," he said, "it would make the amount seem larger."

After expressing his sympathy on the loss of the library, Representative Curtis Smith commended the efforts of the community to "pitch in and rebuild."

On behalf of the community, Mayor Ralph Sears thanked the legislators, Bryan and Bob Geddie, the governor's administrative assistant, for the money. Sears also praised librarian Mayme Yarbrough and The Friends of the Library Committee for their part in establishing the library in the new building.

Hughes was commended by the Mayor, too, for his leadership in turning the old shed behind city hall into the "beautiful building it is today."

Speaking for the Library Board and Friends of the Library, Libby Rogers said, "We're touched by this gesture and the effort that went into it."

Appreciation for the money was also expressed by Mildred Harrison, who represented the Alabama Public Library Association and Shelby County Library Directror Pam Williams.

Library donation

On behalf of Governor Fob James, a check was presented to Montevallo Librarian Mamye Yarbrough by Don Bryan. Others on hand for the event were (1-r) Libby Rogers, Mildred Harrison, Senator Lister Hill Porotor, Representative Curtis Smith, Mayor Ralph Sears, Pam Williams and Bob Geddie.

Forever Autumn

Forever Autumn was the theme of this year's homecoming at Montevallo High School. The queen and her court were presented at a pre-game show Saturday evening. Luanne Moody was crowned queen and her attendants were seniors Freda Thrift and Andrea Lovelady; Sondi Gilbert, Vicki Weiss, 11th; Tanya Staffney, Beth Hughes, 10th; Tina Battle, Debbie Dailey, 9th.

Shelby Memorial taps pharmacist to head up General Services

Mr. Jay Stuman was recently appointed as the Assistant Administrator of General Services at Shelby Memorial Hospital.

Several departments will come under Stuman's supervision, including payroll, personnel, purchasing, pharmacy, dietary, housekeeping and the biomedical department.

Stuman has served as the Director of Pharmacy since 1969 at SMH, during which time it grew from a one man operation to its present staff of four pharmacists, three students and three assistants.

Stuman introduced the unit dose system to Shelby Memorial and the beginning of the training program for Samford University students. He is presently an adjunct faculty member at Samford.

His community activities include membership on the board of the Jefferson-Shelby County Heart Association. He is also active with an Explorer Aviation Post. In addition, he has been a member of the Helena Baptist Church for 25 years.

The Shelby County native is a graduate of Thompson High School and Samford University.

Calera steps up Xmas plans

Calera's Christmas parade will be held Saturday, December 15, beginning at 6 p.m.

Plans for the parade and day long festivities were reviewed Tuesday noon by Calera's Chamber of Commerce, one of the parade's co-sponsors. The Calera Civitan Club is the other sponsor.

Carl Prichard reported to chamber members that Miss Alabama will arrive in Calera at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon and will ride one of the parade's featured floats. He said the parade will also feature four high school bands, a variety of floats, antique cars and novelty presentations.

Bands already accepting invitations to participate include Calera High School, Helena, Shelby County High School and Shelby Academy.

Calera's merchants will participate in the day-long festivities by offering specials throughout the day. Shoppers may register in Calera stores for prizes that will be given away prior to the beginning of the parade.

Santa Claus will be brought in to town by the Calera Fire Department. He will stay throughout the day and will ride in the parade.

Chamber of Commerce members have been assigned committees to prepare for the December 15 event. Serving on the general administration committee are Pat Phillips, Billy Graham and Carl Prichard.

Under The Courthouse Dome

The juvenile who staged the first break-out from the Shelby County jail is once more back in custody.

Anthony Cunningham, a 17 year old Homewood youth, was picked up early last week by Birmingham police as he tried to use a stolen credit card at Loveman's Department Store.

He was taken to Birmingham's Family Court, a juvenile detention facility.

After escaping from the Montevallo jail on Oct. 29, Cunningham was found in Birmingham two days later and taken to the Shelby County jail.

The wiley youth made his getaway from the supposedly escape proof jail Nov. 2 by removing the frame from one of the unbreakable plastic windows.

Because he tried to use the credit card belonging to the owner of the car he stole in Columbiana, Birmingham police were alerted to his whereabouts.

Appeals were filed by three of the seven defendants sentenced in Cirucit Court Thursday by Judge James Sharbutt.

Phillip Hope had been given 12 years on a murder conviction, Walter Taylor seven years for VAUCSA, and Chester Bland seven years for false pretense (fraud).

Annie Jo Monticure was sentenced to three years imprisonment for 1st degree manslaughter, Elizabeth Hitt was given three years each on five counts of 2nd degree forgery, the sentences to run concurrently, Timothy Wright was sentenced to two years in jail for possession of marijuana and James Arthur Shrove was given two years at hard labor for the county for selling marijuana.

Two youthful offenders were also included in Thursday's sentencing.

The Fraternal Order of Police of Shelby County elected officers for the upcoming year at their lodge meeting November 8.

Lyle Mitchell, investigator for the UM Traffic Safety Center was re-elected for a second term as president of the lodge.

Chief deputy James Jones was elected president and UM capus police Sgt. Mark Austin was chosen as secretary-treasurer. Sheriff's investigator Tom Barnes was elected guard and Virgil Rice from the Pelham PD will serve as conductor. Montevallo PD officer Doug Jackson was elected chaplain.

Trustees of the lodge are John Palmer, Vestavia PD, Pat Swinney, former Alabaster Police officer, Howard Brogden, Sheriff's deputy, Bob O'Connor, D.A.'s investigator, Jim Keister, assistant to Birmingham mayor Richard Arrington, and Dr. Al Graves of the UAB department of criminal justice.

The lodge is once again gearing up for its annual Toys for Tots Christmas drive. Anyone wishing to donate toys is urged to contact deputy J.B. Carter or Alabaster PD officer Lloyd Anderson, co-chairmen of the drive, or contact the local police station.

Hundreds of Shelby Countians registered to vote last week at the three day registration at Valley Elementary.

According to county registar J.T. Spates, "better than 500 people" turned out at the school over the course of the three evenings.

Numerous volunteers campaigned for the registration, urging area residents to attend.

Besides Spates, Board of Registars chairman Doris Turner, and registar S.M. Mayhan also worked at the registration.

Spates said the turnout was so great that at one point they ran out of registration forms.

Highway 280 wrecks send seven to area hospitals

Two traffic accidents on Highway 280 last weekend sent seven people to area hospitals.

The first accident involved three vehicles and occurred just below the crest of Double Oak Mountain. The driver of a 1970 Chevrolet pickup truck, Mary C. Porter Brown, 21, of Birmingham apparently lost control of her vehicle. The truck clipped a 1979 Mercury driven by William Phifer of Sylacauga and then slid into the path of a Cadillac driven by John Robert Redmon, 41, of Ensley. Redmon and a passenger in the car he was driving were taken to Brookwood Hospital. Phifer of Sylacauga was uninjured. Mary Brown was hospitalized with serious injuries.

The incident took place at 8:35 Friday morning.

Another accident occurring at 6:15 p.m. Saturday sent four people to the hospital. It took place near the intersection of Highway 280 and County Road 41.

A 1978 Oldsmobile 98 driven by William Boyd Gibson, 47, of Trussville overturned. Injuries were sustained by Gibson, his wife Laura Exmae Gibson, 46, and her parents John E. Bursell, 76 and Nora L. Bursell, 73. All were taken to Brookwood Hospital.

UM's Pelham courses may be phased out

University of Montevallo officials say recent developments have forced them to consider phasing out the university's off-campus operations at Pelham.

UM President James F. Vickrey, Jr., said that the University has been forced to examine the night class program offered at Pelham High School because of new criteria from the Alabama Commission on Higher Education and the expenses involved in offering the classes under the new criteria.

He noted that because UM receives almost no state funding for off-campus programs, cost considerations and revenue projects must be an important part of the final decision.

In a recent letter to members of UM's Board of Trustees, Vickrey said that although no final decision to phase out the Pelham program had been made, "it is safe to say that if we continue it, UM will lose a significant amount of money yearly for about five years."

UM Academic Vice President Russell G. Warren said that Montevallo's Pelham operation is now under an ACHE-directed study by the UM staff. A decision is due to ACHE March 1, he added.

"We are looking at student demand for the program, the cost of the program and the importance of the public service nature of the program," Warren said.

UM announced earlier this year that it was phasing out its upper level business classes at Jefferson State Junior College.

Warren said that while the future of the Pelham center is uncertain, UM is still interested in offering its services to the people in the rapidly growing Riverchase-Pelham area in North Shelby County, which is approximately 15 miles north of the campus.

Vickrey suggests four-way program for public schools

Three new tax proposals for education and a required increase in local support for schools were suggeested Thursday by University of Montevallo President Dr. James F. Vickrey, Jr.

In testimony before a special legislative committee, the Joint Interim Committee to Study the Tax Structure of Alabama, Dr. Vickrey made his four-way proposal for increasing the amount of revenues available for public education.

His proposal for more local support would require public school systems and public colleges and universities to generate at least one-fifth of their annual operating budgets in 1980-81, one-fourth of the budgets in 1981-82 and one-third in 1982-83. The increases for local school budgets could come from local taxes or other sources such as federal funds, and colleges and universities could generate funds from tuition and fees or other sources including federal and private sources.

In his first tax proposal, beer and cigarette taxes, now charged on a per-unit rate, would be changed to a percentage-of-cost rate, he said, to ensure that as the price goes up, the relative tax does not go down, "as it has for years."

Vickrey's second tax proposal, an increase in corporate income taxes from five per cent to six per cent, "should be seriously considered," he said. "It's the same rate that Georgia and Tennessee now have."

Under Dr. Vickrey's proposals, taxes earmarked for the Alabama Special Education Trust Fund would remain earmarked, with the possible exception of the sales tax on food. If the food tax were removed, the lost revenue to the ASETF would have to be replaced from sources other than freom the beer and cigarette tax or the corporate income tax.

Vickrey said he made his proposals based on statistics that show that the state's revenue base is inadequate to support the services citizens of the state are demanding, "and on the basis of the fact that we have excess tax capacity when compared to other states."

Alabama ranks 49th in total tax burden per household (federal, state, and local taxes), "about 38th in relative federal tax burden for the state, and 50th in per capita state and local tax burden, the UM president said.

"We Alabamians may well be the least taxed people in America, as well as the least taxing people in America," Vickrey said in calling for what he called the leadership necessary to "shore up the foundations of Alabama's inadequate revenue base."

United Way falling short

The 1979 Shelby County United Way Campaign may fall short of its $160,185 goal, chairman Jim Vickrey reported earlier this week.

Shelby County gifts and pledges now total over $108,000 or about 68 percent of the goal.

"It looks like the state of the economy, locally and nationally, is finally having its effect on fund-raising efforts here," Vickrey observed. He added, "Despite the continuing hard work of United Way leaders in Shelby County, we will probably fall about 10 percent short of our goal -- which will put us about where we ended up last year.

As of November 8, the Tri-County United Way effort had achieved 89 percent of the 1979 goal of $8,081,729.

pense involved. The town took care of the cost last year, Scruggs noted, and she said the bill came to $275.

The council voted unanimously to assume the cost from now on.

It was brought to the panel's attention by Councilman Bill Bob Ray, that beaver dams are beginning to create a problem. The Mayor said he was aware of the situation and that the three dams he knew about would be taken care of as soon as possible.

Pointing out that there wouldn't be time at the meeting to go through the figures of last year's audit item by item, the Mayor asked the panel to take their copy of the document home and study it. "We'll talk about it next time," he said.

After considering the matter of updating their license fee schedule for several months, the council held a special called meeting last Monday and set the new amounts businesses will have to pay.

Licenses for the new year will go on sale Jan. 1.

Reader tells of weathering Hurricane Frederic's fury

Letter to Editor:

I'm writing because I thought you might like to hear one individual's feelings who sat out Hurricane Frederic's onslaught on Mobile.

Wednesday, September 12 was a beautiful morning, quiet and peaceful, with the sun shining brightly. The newscast was telling everyone to board up or evacuate.

I taped my windows and stored a bathtub full of water, along with jugs and jars.

Then I went to buy groceries. The super market was packed. I guess I got there a little late because the shelves were almost empty. But along with my daughter and her family we stocked up fairly well.

We took refuge in a theater. There was one radio station here that weathered the storm and kept us informed.

The wind became so intense it lifted the ceiling of the theater and set it down again and again. There was glass blowing around the parking lot of the theater from other buildings.

When we returned home Thursday, September 12, our house was hidden by fallen trees.

We finally have the debris moved (last week). But I feel we were very lucky. It is an experience I don't want to go through again.

I'm still enjoying the Reporter. Keep up the good work.

Refund checks still unclaimed

Approximately 800 undelivered refund checks, totaling $218,743.88, await Alabama taxpayers for 1978 and prior tax years, Dwight T. Baptist, District Director of Internal Revenue Service, says.

The most common reason for an undelivered refund check, according to Baptist, is that the taxpayer has moved and left no forwarding address with the U.S. Postal Service.

It is not necessary for the taxpayer to consult or engage the services of a "locating" or "searching" service or anyone else, to obtain information with respect to the refund. The taxpayer need only to establish his or her identity and right to receive the check. This can be done by addressing a letter to: Internal Revenue Service Center, Atlanta, GA 31101. The letter should include the following information:

1. the name and address exactly as shown on the tax return;
2. present name and address, if different from that shown on the return;
3. the tax year for which refund is believed due;
4. the social security number;
5. amount of refund claimed, and any other pertinent information needed to verify the claim;
6. signature, if joint return, both should sign.

UM presents Broadway musicals

Scenes from five different Broadway musicals will be presented by the University of Montevallo Music Dept. Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 19 and 20.

The scenes will be presented by the musical theatre class taught by Dr. Benjamin Middaugh, associate professor music at UM. Each year, the class divides up into teams, each of which casts, stages, and directs one scene for a grade.

The program, the Eighth Annual Musical Scenes, will begin at 8 p.m. in UM's LeBaron Recital hall. The public is invited at no charge.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

We'd go up East College past the public school and Mrs. Rosa Teague's house on the hill and Granny's house higher on the hill and Judge Longshore's house and his wheat field further on where, come September, we'd play in the wheat straw piled in great piles next to the thrashing machine.

Sometimes we'd stop there and play all day, until the straw got under our clothes from our shirts to our breeches' legs. Then we'd hike off home and wash the sting away, even if it wasn't Saturday night.

Other times we'd skip on up the mountain, past Emmett McClannahan's house next to the spring branch, with the waterfall almost in his front yard and the little flutter mill and tiny red horse minnows swimming, before it splashed out of sight down the rocky road.

And then over the mountain and down the other side, heading for Browning Mill Pond and the water colder than ice, past the big spring and Horseshoe Bend, while the road stretched out, dusty and hot, as far as the eye could see.

But that was 60 years ago. Time enough to change the road four times. And lose Emmett McClannahan's house altogether. And to see houses on the top where there were only rocks and to miss Horseshoe Bend completely since cars, by 1979, could cross over the mountain in high gear.

But today was November 3, 1979. And we had come back, Earnest Buie and I, to Mrs. Mozelle King's place at the foot of the mountain to hunt squirrels on another mountain back of her house.

"I'll go up the mountain," I said, "and you slip along down here."

That suited Earnest. His arthritis had been acting up lately and he was glad to dodge the mountain, hobbling along as he was leaning on his stick.

There was a little wind blowing. Not enough to rustle the leaves, but enough to bend the tall grass. And a guy, listening, could hear a single leaf fall, bouncing from limb to limb as it tumbled down.

Down the ridge, where a cluster of hickories grew, a squirrel barked. He was too far off the shoot, even If I had seen him, and while I waited, hoping he'd come nearer, Earnest came down the hollow.

"There's one in those hickories," I called. But Earnest didn't hear. He walked on, past the hickories, out of sight.

I climbed to the top of the mountain, listening and watching as I walked, but all I saw was a three foot high stump that had been burned over years before. With winter just around the corner, I dug the stump up and started down the mountain carrying it under my arm.

Did you ever tote a three foot high stump down the side of a rocky mountain, with the rocks covered with leaves, and your shoe soles as slick as owl grease?

Try it any time you want to. But especially try it when you get past 70 and are going lickity-split toward 80.

But I got to the bottom. And Earnest, having killed two squirrels, met me at the truck.

"What about my stump," I said, dropping it at his feet.

Earnest looked at it a long time. "There's just one thing wrong with it," he said.

"What's that?"

"It's not pine. It's oak."

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

"Kiss my grits," has become one of the most familiar phrases on television.

In Shelby County, a phrase that's beginning to catch on is, "Scramble my eggs."

I received a call on Sunday from a friend living at the other end of the county who wondered if I could come to her community and "Scramble some eggs."

Although it was pretty short notice, I didn't have anything else on tap, so I obliged.

There wasn't much opportunity to get lost since the meeting I had been asked to cover was in a room over the city hall, but I did get a little bit befuddled as I went through the receiving line.

Since I've become resigned to the fact that not everybody is going to recognize me and know what paper I'm with, I introduced myself by giving my name and saying I was with the Shelby County Reporter.

The people were very polite, but I noticed they looked a little blank. Later on I found out that most of them were from other areas of the state and not knowing a reporter was going to be there, I guess they didn't know what I was talking about.

But I don't think there was any excuse for the young man at the Saturday night football game asking me what paper I was with.

All evening long we walked up and down the sidelines and the name of my paper was prominently displayed on the back of my jacket.

If something like that happens again, instead of saying "Kiss my grits," I'm going to exclaim in disgust, "Oh, come on now, Scramble my eggs.!"

Timberlands get boost

Alabama's timber lands and rural areas received a boost this week when Donald Stewart successfully urged the Senate to restore funding to a federal program designed to help states prevent and fight rural forest fires.

Working in conjunction with Sen. Larry Pressler, D-S.D., the Alabama Democrat cosponsored an amendment to fund the Rural Fire Protection and Control program in fiscal year 1980 at its current $30.5-million funding level.

The President had recommended no funding for the program next year, while the House and Senate had previously set the funding at half the present level.

"The federal government gets a return on its money every time the state forest services lend their assistance to federal fire fighters in their states," Stewart said on the Senate floor.

"I have seen on a first-hand basis the resourcefulness and dedication of the volunteer fireman, and the lengths which a dollar will go when placed in his hand."

Helena Cubs learn landscaping and pride during school beautification project

Chips ahoy!

Den 1 Cub Scouts from Helena Pack 532 unload a truckful of pine bark chips to cover the ground around the shrubs they planted in front of Helena Elementary. The Cubs have been working on the landscaping project for several months. (Photo by Moore)

"The idea was to help them develop pride in their school," explained den mother Pat Phillips. And from all indications, the idea is working.

Cub Scout Den 1 of Helena Pack 532 has been landscaping the front of Helena School for the past two months, a job which has included weeding, planting schrubs, spreading topsoil and laying crossties.

Most of the work is done after school on Wednesday under Pat Phillips' direction with the help of some of the other parents. Mrs. Phillips pointed out that the project has become a family affair, too, with mothers and fathers showing up on several Saturdays to help matters along.

According to the den mother, the Scouts have become keenly interested in the project. They can point out exactly which shrubs they planted, something she says they will probably still remember ten years from now.

Members of Den 1 are Tony Agostinelli, Scott Bingford, Dee Carroll, Jeff Garner, Michael Macon and Chuck Morris.

Initially the den invested $60 of its own money into materials for the project. Then the donations started coming, and people gave them more materials to use on the project. The Helena PTA donated $200.

Helena principal Billy Bramblett said the landscaping project is one "we've been needing for years. I'm thrilled to death. They've worked real hard. It's a big value to us and to them, too."

Countians name Bible their favorite book

If you chose the Bible as your favorite book, you would go along with the majority of Shelby Countians who were surveyed by the county library service.

The informal survey was conducted as part of the library's activities to support the White House conference on Libraries and Information Science.

"Be With a Book for a Day," is the theme of the conference which is being held in Washington Nov. 15-19.

A free film festival Nov. 15 is also being sponsored by the county library. And anyone who would like to attend the event should come carrying a book.

The film program will get underway at 3:30 p.m. in the Library meeting room and free popcorn and drinks will be served.

A Sherlock Holmes and Charlie Chaplin film will be two of the movies shown and there will also be cartoons.

In their survey to determine the favorite books of county readers, librarians found that Columbiana lawyer Karl Harrison liked the Complete Illustrated Works of Shakespeare and Marian Cotney's choice was Dorthy Roger's My Favorite Things.

Montevallo Mayor Ralph Sears picked Manchester's American Caesar: Douglas McArthur as his favorite. And Gone With the Wind was the choice of Alabaster's Rita Newell.

Those who named the Bible as their favorite book were Mrs. Karl Harrison, Mrs. Dell Smith of Calera and Mrs. Lalouise McGraw of Vincent.

MR. AND MRS. ELGIN WILLIAMS
...celebrate 50 years

Loose ends tied at 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Williams celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with an Open House on November 4.

Over 120 friends and relatives called between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m. at the Williams' home in Wilsonville on Mitchell Lake to share the occasion with them.

A highlight of the afternoon was the signing of the original certificate of marriage by three of the people who were witnesses at the marriage on November 3, 1929. The witnesses had failed to sign the certificate 50 years ago, but were happy to do so at the golden anniversary celebration. The witnesses were Mrs. Lois Clark, Mr. Orrin Williams and Mr. Jeff Tate.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams greeted their guests with their children, Robert Williams of Birmingham, and Mrs. Pierre Renoux of Lafayette, La.

Mrs. Williams wore a black caftan heavily embossed with gold. The house was decorated with gold flowers of the season.

The wedding cake was served by Mrs. A. G. Blackman, Mrs. Harlan Shaw and Lois Clark. Keeping the guest book was Mrs. Orrin Williams.

Baptist Montclair moves emergency room entry

The emergency entrance at Baptist Medical Center-Montclair has been relocated from the west side to the front of the hospital.

The move was taken to make way for a six-story addition-the second phase of a massive $36.5 expansion program. Excavation for a multi-level parking deck adjacent to the John H. Buchanan Building across from the hospital, began in July. Completion of the 700 car deck is scheduled for November, 1980.

Tom Sanders, vice president of the hospital, says that the construction is causing a number of temporary parking problems due to the loss of part of the hospital's parking areas. "We realize this is an inconvenience and we're making every effort to accommodate our visitors and others," says Sanders.

Home Decorating with Becky
USING DECORATING TO MAKE YOUR LIFE EASIER

Did you ever stop to think that good decorating can not only make your home more beautiful, but it can also reduce your work load and make your life easier.
Taking just one example, few homes have enough storage and closet space--but with the proper planning and placement of the right furniture pieces, you can get an amazing amount of storage.
You can increase storage automatically by adding some cabinets, or tables with drawers, or some units with shelves--and then help yourself by locating them as near as possible to the point of use.
Another way to use decorating to make your life easier is to follow this advice from a leading decorator:
He says all households have a tendency to become cluttered with pieces no longer important to the family. So, he says, be sure to periodically discard those things no longer used or enjoyed. The space they take can be used better to give you more room to move around, and more room to add the things you really want. By following that advice, you can also improve the looks of your home.
You can make your home easier to manage by arranging the things you have in the best way for beauty and practicality, and by being sure you have some furniture that both beautifies and serves. For all your furnishing needs and ideas, stop in here.

Well remembered

Though illness now prevents Maude Denson from making her old rounds through the Cahaba Valley, long time area residents still remember her well. Not only did she teach many of them in school and church, but she was an elder of New Hope Cumberland Presbyterian, and a community news correspondent for the Reporter for some 50 years.

Valley woman plays part in many lives

by David Moore

In a quiet way, she has probably touched the lives of more residents in Cahaba Valley than anyone else.

Part of the reason is because she has probably lived there longer than anyone else. Another part of the reason is because she taught school and Sunday school there. On top of that, for many years she was the Shelby County Reporter's community news correspondent for Cahaba Valley.

Maude Denson turned 82 last February. She lives with her daughter and son-in-law, Emma Jo and William B. Todd, on Cahaba Valley Road (Hwy. 119 North), about a mile east of her church, New Hope Cumberland Presbyterian. The Todds' house is on the property once owned by Mrs Denson's father, not more than 100 yards from the site of the house in which she was born in 1897.

Except for the five years after marrying Morgan Denson in 1917, when the couple moved to Bessemer, Mrs. Denson has lived her life in Cahaba Valley. They returned to help take care of her father, W.L. DeShazo, when Mrs. DeShazo died.

Mr. DeShazo was one of the county's first dairy farmers, and Mrs. Denson had no qualms about jumping in and helping on the farm. Milking cows at 2 a.m. was an everyday affair. Some of the milk was sold to Foremost for hand made ice cream.

Perhaps Mrs. Denson's fondest memories are of her days as a kindergarten teacher. She taught for several years at New Hope Elementary in the 40's, and for 17 years in her own living room. She also taught first grade, filled in as a substitute teacher, and taught countless children (and their children) Sunday School.

"I sure miss the children," Mrs. Denson told the Reporter in a recent interview.

But apparently she made quite an impression on them.

According to Charlotte Thornton, one of the "children" from the area, "I think about how she contributed to my spiritual life, how important it was to her, and the impression that it left on me. She has always been close to God."

Mrs. Thornton, who not only had Mrs. Denson as a first grade teacher, but also rode to church with her, says the woman taught a "tremendous amount of people." A small scattering of some of her former students includes Sarah Bishop Street, Eddie Finch, Cheill Bailey Benson, David "Spud" Bishop, Carlene Street Barefoot, Katherine Bishop, and "several of the Dunaway boys."

"I've taught a little," Mrs. Denson says modestly.

"Everybody remembers her and the discipline--she'd rap you on the head with a pencil or thimble. But she was sweet, too," Mrs. Thornton remembers.

Mrs. Street says that Maude Denson had her children reading out of the newspaper when they were in kindergarten.

That the newspaper was used in her teaching comes as no surprise. Though Mrs. Denson can't remember how long she wrote for the Reporter, William Todd says his mother-in-law reported the events of Cahaba Valley for some 50 years.

"I wrote the news every week from all around here," says the former teacher-writer.

Since Cumberland Presbyterian was the center of New Hope (which was called Quito in the old days), it was the logical source of her information. Every Sunday she would take notes on the happenings of the community and its people, go home and write her news, and mail it into Columbiana Monday morning in time for the late Luther Fowler, the publisher of the Shelby County Reporter, to get it in that week's edition.

Twenty-six years ago Morgan Denson died, and for the next 20 years, until she herself took ill, Maude Denson lived alone on the farm in the house her father built.

About her husband, Mrs. Denson says, "He was a good person, and always promoted the church and the area." With a little persuasion the petite woman "guesses" she might be the same way.

Six years ago Mrs. Denson was hospitalized and spent several years in a nursing home before moving in with the Todds. Had it not been for that, she would have undoubtedly remained as busy as ever.

"I'm sort of absent-minded now," Mrs. Denson says. "Things don't stick with me. But sometimes I remember things--good things like dinners on the ground (at church socials)."

Asked what she would choose if she could get out of the house and do anything she'd like, Mrs. Denson sat quietly in her rocker and thought for a moment before answering.

"I'd go out and visit my neighbors. Walk, I guess."

"Mother, you know what you'd do," her daughter Emma Jo Todd reminds her with a smile. "You'd get that old black Ford out and ride."

Mrs. Denson's eyes light up as pictures from her past pop back into her mind.

"That's right. I'd forgotten," she says sheepishly, like maybe she'd played a joke on herself.

And there's no telling what else she might do if she could get out again. Probably she'd end up teaching somebody something. Teaching and communicating always played a large part in her life.

As Maude Denson wrote in the History of New Hope Christian Endeavorers Society, September 1937-38: "The swiftly passing years bring home the realization that life is short, and we as Christian Endeavorers must be about our Master's business..."

Mrs. Maude Denson is also the mother of Dorothy Mahan and has four grandchildren.

Fire destroys trailer

Montevallo Volunteer Firemen made their first run since October 27, last Monday, to the trailer of Gary Wilson off Alabama Highway 155, about two miles outside the city limits.

The trailer was well involved when the fire department arrived at 12:04 p.m., some 9 minutes after the alarm was phoned into city hall.

After pumping some 1300 gallons and spending over an hour, firemen extinguished the blaze, but the trailer was a total loss. All but some minor personal articles were also destroyed.

Wilson had been renting the trailer from Ron Stutz, whose house faced the trailer from across a dirt road.

Tuesday morning, the ashes rekindled and burned the wreckage down to the ground, making the eventual cleanup easier, but scorching a nearby pine tree.

Burning trailer

Montevallo Firemen climb onto the roof of a burning house trailer Monday. They succeeded in hosing off the thick pine straw before flames broke through. Smoke and heat made the interior a total loss, however.

Holiday service held in Pelham

A three church, community Thanksgiving service will be held Wednesday November 21, at the First Baptist Church of Pelham, located behind city hall. Also participating in the service will be the Pelham Church of God and Pelham United Methodist.

Rev. Don Bradley of the Church of God will deliver the sermon.

Special music will be provided by the choirs of all three churches. The public is invited to attend.

Photographer wins contest

A Shelby County High School senior won a first place award in photography last week. Denise Lively, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Lively won the Junior Division Color at the recently held Birmingham Zoo Photo Competition.

Miss Lively was notified by mail of the award for her picture submitted in October. Her picture was selected over 100 other entries in the division which is comprised of Photographers 17 years old and under.

The picture was taken on a field trip sponsored by Poor Richard's Camera Shop in Columbiana and coordinated with the Shelby County Vocational School. Miss Lively is a co-op student who works at Poor Richard's.

The winning entry was taken with a Nikon camera and is a closeup picture of a Bobcat.

Calera bounced by Billingsley

Calera lost its bid for a third straight playoff spot last Saturday night as the Billingsley Bears whipped the Eagles 24 to 3. The loss was the second of the season for the Eagles who posted eight wins in the 1979 season.

"They were the most physical team we have played"Coach Danny Alverson said of the Bears. "They just blew by us on the way to the state playoffs.

"They were just the team we thought they were and we just couldn't stop them. Our offense couldn't do a thing against them. They are quick and strong and the better team won the game."

Calera's offense never knew what hit them. Billingsley opened the game and completely dominated. A scoreless first half saw Calera get some lucky breaks that kept the Bears out of the endzone, but they couldn't get lucky all night.

Billingsley returned a Calera punt to the 17 yard line in the second period. Three plays later the Bears scored on a short three yard dive. The PAt kick went wide.

The Bears scored again after intercepting a Calera pass and running it back to the four yard line. The next play Billingsley cashed in for another six points. The conversion attempt was good for two points and a 14-0 lead.

Calera got its first first down of the first half minutes later on what started to be a drive, but the Bears shut down the Calera offense. Three straight plays cost Calera to lose 35 yards and the Eagles were forced to punt from their endzone after having a first and ten from their own 40.

Billingsley took the punt and came back to threaten again, but, with time running out the Bears opted for a field goal of 18 yards that made the halftime score 17-0.

The third quarter was like the first in that both teams failed to get the ball moving.

Late in the fourth period, Billingsley drove 37 yards for the final touchdown of the night. A five yard run and a PAT gave the playoff bound Bears 24 points for the night.

Calera refused to shutout though and drove back down the field after the kickoff. On fourth down and goal from the three, the Eagles booted a 21 yard field goal for their only points of the contest. Johnny Ryan split the uprights for the final points of the game and Calera's season.

"Our players never gave up" Alverson commented."We knew we were beat but kept clawing for points."

Calera only managed 67 yards rushing for the night with Bill Seay running for 66 of those. The Eagles graduate nearly the entire squad this May and next year will compete as a 2A school.

THS loses playoff spot

by Richard Crosby

Thompson High School fell from the ranks of the unbeaten and out of the state playoff picture Saturday night as Pell City whipped the Warriors 17 to 14.

Thompson and Pell City seesawed four quarters with the Panthers gaining the upper hand and winning the right to play in the state playoffs.

Pell City got on the scoreboard first with a 20 yard field goal in the second period. On the ensuing kickoff, senior David Cofer received the kick and returned the ball 95 yards for a Thompson touchdown. Steve Smitherman added the PAT to put the Warriors in the lead 7 to 3.

The Panthers weren't content with being behind though, and drove back down the field in the final minutes of the first half for the go-ahead points. The score stood at 10 to 7 at the half.

Thompson regained the lead on its second possession of the third period. The Warriors, behind the running and passing of quarterback David Cofer, drove 65 yards for the score. Cofer carried the last 25 yards for the six points with Smitherman adding the PAT to make the score 14 to 10.

The Warriors drove back down the field in the fourth quarter, moving the pigskin nearly 60 yards before being halted by the Panther defense. On fourth down, Smitherman attempted a 27 yard field goal but missed.

That scare fired up the Panthers who took over on the 20 and drove 80 yards for the clinching touchdown with 4:27 left in the game.

Thompson returned the kickoff and started driving to midfield before being halted. On fourth down the Warriors elected to punt and try to hold Pell City. The Panthers took over on the eight yard line and on third down got the first down to reduce the time left in the game to under two minutes.

Thompson finally got the ball back near midfield after the Panthers punted, but only 50 seconds remained in the game. The Warriors started moving down the field but were unable to get the ball out of bounds to stop the clock and the game ended with Thompson trying to get a desperation play off from the Pell City 30 yard line.

"The game was between two evenly matched teams" Coach Ellie Glasscox commented. "They defensed us real good."

Thomson ends the season with a 9-1 record. Sixteen seniors will graduate this May from the Alabaster school and the coaching staff will face another tough job in the 1980 season, but with the tradition in Warrior country, fans can depend on Thompson making another strong showing.

Panthers win season finale

Pelham's Panthers finished the 1979 season with a homecoming win Saturday night over Holtville 46 to 20. Pelham displayed a powerful offense and a singy defense to the returning alumni in the rain-delayed game.

The entire bench at pelham saw playing action in the game as the Panthers rolled up their fifth win of the year for a final record of 5-5.

Pelham took the opening kickoff 60 yards for the first score of the night. Dale Busby burst six yards for the score. Woody Woodson booted the PAT to make the score 7-0.

Busby got his second touchdown of the night a few minutes later on a 26 yard run. The PAT was wide.

Quarterback Steve Parsons collected his first of two touchdowns early in the second period. The sophomore ran nine yards for the six points. The conversion attempt failed.

Ricky Needham got the fourth Pelham touchdown that was set up by a blocked punt. Needham ran three yards for the score with Woodson adding the PAT to make the score 26-0.

Parson scored his second touchdown before the first half ended. A ten yard run converted for six points with Woodson adding the seventh for a halftime lead of 33-0.

Dale Busby scored his third touchdown of the night on the first offensive play of the second half. The senior runningback broke into the clear for a 46 yards touchdown run. Jud Halcomb booted the PAT for Pelham.

Holtville scored late in the third quarter on a 62 yard run. Early in the fourth period the visitors scored again to make the score 40-14.

Pelham's 1980 team got the final points of the night with Ricky Needham running the ball. A nine yard run gave the Panthers 46 points for the night.

Holtville got another consolation score late in the final minutes with a 40 yard pass play.

"We're happy to win"Coach Steve Rivers told the Reporter. "It was especially good to win in front of the homecoming crowd. Our offense and defense put on a good showing and our kids that will be returning next year also showed some promise."

Rivers added that Dale Busby ran his season total to 1,130 yards rushing with a 153 yard performance against Holtville. Parsons had 51 yards and two touchdowns in the final game of the season. Ricky Needham collected two touchdowns and 26 yards rushing. Parsons also threw three for three for 26 yards.

The Panthers collected 316 yards rushing for the night and evened the season record with five wins and five losses - the first winning year ever for Pelham High School, but certainly not the last as the Panthers proved they can compete.

Chelsea citizens respond to Reporter Editorial

In reply to Richard Crosby's editorial titled "Chelsea Problem Stems From Lack of Support", pulished in the November 8th edition of the Shelby County Reporter:

(1) You stated, "When a coach doesn't win, everyone right away blames the coach and asks for a replacement...

Fact: Coach Richard Conkle's record at Chelsea is 48 wins, 90 losses and 2 ties. This includes all forfeitures and averages 3.6 wins per year. No one has reacted hastily based on one or two years performance.

(2) You stated, "Two perfect seasons and several winning ones have been posted at the school and most of those years, Conkle was the only coach.."

Fact: There has only been three winning seasons in the history of the school. There was an excellent assistant coach during the two perfect seasons as attested to by the players on those teams. At no time during any winning season or at any time since, has Conkle been the only coach.

(3) You stated, "The days of a two-man staff are over... We've been playing teams with staffs of five and six every game this year."

Fact: There are only three schools in the Shelby County school system that have a larger coaching staff than Chelsea. Chelsea has played several schools within the last school year with only two or three man coaching staffs.

(4) You stated, "When extra coaches are needed, the normal method of procuring them...both the principal and coach get together...to fill the vacancy. This has yet to happen in Hornet Country... What has happened to Chelsea... (is a) lack of communication between the athletic department and the school administration."

Fact: The administration has agreed to cooperate with the athletic department in any way that it can and will fill any teacher vacancy with someone that is a coach, a competent teacher and with Conkle's approval and knowledge. Coach Conkle has not only been informed about the hiring of assistant coaches at Chelsea but has actively participated with the principals in hiring assistant coaches in past years.

You stated, "A new coach at Chelsea will encounter the same problems Conkle has the past several years - not enough support from the community...

The problem appears to me that many angry football fans know little about the game and about what it takes to win."

Fact: Before anyone can establish a base of support, they must have the ability to welcome and work with the support instead of resenting it. You can be the most knowledgeable person in the world about football, but if you don't possess the leadership abilities that it takes to build confidence, pride and motivation, you will never have a successful football program.

(6) You stated, "I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but Chelsea isn't blessed with an abundance of star athletes..."

Vincent crushes Chelsea 40-8

Vincent claimed victory over Chelsea last Saturday night on its home field. The Yellowjackets dominated the game from the opening kickoff and never relented to win the East County rivalry 40 to 8.

"We played a good football game"Coach Gary Garrett said of the contest. "We took advantage of a few things and blew it out quick."

Chelsea coach Richard Conkle said, "We ran into a bunch of Yellowjackets. They whipped us up and down the field all night. The were a much better football team than we thought they were."

Vincent opened the scoring attack on the first play of the ballgame. Tony Abbott received the opening kickoff and ran it back 98 yards for a touchdown. The PAT went wide but the score was 6-0 with only 17 seconds gone.

Vincent scored again in the first quarter with Sidney Yowe running 22 yards for the score. Yowe also ran the conversion to make the score 14-0 with 5:22 left in the first period.

Yowe got his second score of the night a few minutes later in the second period. He broke for a 45 yard run for a touchdown midway through the period. Again the PAT kick went wide leaving the score 20-0.

Chelsea did threaten before the first half ended though. The Hornets marched down to the Yellowjackets three yard line before fumbling the scoring attempt.

Vincent added to its score in the last minute of the third period. Tony Abbott passed 20 yards to Rodney Driggers for the touchdown. Driggers was also successful with the PAT to make the score 27-0.

In the fourth quarter Dexter McCrimon collected two touchdowns. The first came with 7:01 left in the game on a one yard run. Driggers added the PAT. Chelsea answered that score with one of its own. The Hornets drove 60 yards for the score with Phillip Blackerby diving in from one yard out. Keith McCullars passed to John Bearden for the conversion points to give Chelsea eight points on the scoreboard.

Vincent's McCrimmon scored his second touchdown seconds later. Chelsea was penalized on the kickoff. Dwight Spradley recevied the kick and returned it 40 yards to the Hornet three yard line. McCrimon carried for the score on the next play. The PAT went wide leaving the score 40 to 8 in favor of the Yellowjackets.

The bolstered the Jackets to a season record of eight wins and two losses while Chelsea fell to two wins and eight losses.

Deer season opens

Deer gun season opens this Friday in Shelby County and all reports indicate that hunters should have a successful year.

Many hunting clubs will be out in force this Saturday and hunters are urged to take precautions from over-anxious hunters.

Also, hunters are urged to stop by the Reporter office and bagging a deer and have their picture taken for the paper. If you can't make it by, bring in a good black and white or color photograph for us to use.

general statement about our basketball players two years ago. We resent this statement most of all. You are insinuating that the people who live in the Chelsea School area are for some reason genetically inferior to the people who live in the rest of the county and state.

It is true that occasionally one particular school does have more star athletes than other schools but the general rule is: there are just a number of normal boys playing normal high school athletics, some develop further into stars, some do not.

We think your statement is that of a bigot.

(7) You stated, "Chelsea has had the misfortune this year to play a lot of senior ball clubs...That, coupled with the inexperience of the Hornets..."

Fact: This is a true statement and even Bear Bryant could not have had a winning season at Chelsea this year. However, these senior ball clubs also totally embarrassed Chelsea as junior ball clubs when Chelsea had senior ball clubs. The problems at Chelsea are not based on this year's performance.

(8) If you are not defending the coach, why was your editorial practically a verbatim quote from the things that Coach Richard Conkle has been saying?

It would appear to us that before you editorialize, that you could do what all good reporters do and get the facts.

(9) You stated, "When parents and residents can dictate who will coach, then a change is needed."

We say to you; who has a better right than the parents of the children to have a say about the things that are taught and who is influencing them? What do you suggest we change to? Communism? No wonder private schools are growing at such a rapid pace.

(10) You stated, "When the Bear loses, he accepts full responsibility for the loss"..."Bryant chooses who he wants to play for him and high school coaches don't."

Fact: The Bear offers scholarships to good athletes but it is the boys who do the choosing; where and who they want to play for. They choose Bear because he has leadership qualities.

(11) You stated, "Where were you several years ago when it became apparent that the athletic department needed some help."

Fact: During the first six years, Richard Conkle was coach at Chelsea, he had a total of 6 wins and 53 losses. In spite of this record, the community of Chelsea, at no expense to the atheletic department built a football field out of a swamp, including fencing, lights, concession stand, bleachers on both sides of the field, provided insurance for players, graded area of baseball field and installed a chain link backstop fence. Does this sound like NON SUPPORT???

(12) You stated, "In the past 10 years, most coaching staffs have enjoyed such changes though...

Fact: Shelby County High, 3 coaches; Vincent, 4 coaches; Calera, 2 coaches; Montevallo, 3 coaches, and Chelsea 3 coaches.

(13) It was stated in a related article in your paper that Chelsea does not have enough students to compete.

Fact: In grades 10-12:

Calera, 85 male students; Chelsea, 99 male students; Vincent, 118 male students; and Montevallo, 142 male students.

We agree with you 100 percent that "Chelsea problems stem from lack of support." Under the present conditions, the situation shall remain as it is or worsen. Richard Conkle's negative reaction has polarized and further divided the community. Coach Richard Conkle has never been asked to leave the community or give up his teaching job or profession. He has only been asked to step aside as head coach.

Coach Richard Conkle has blamed:

(1) His assistant coaches,
(2) The present and prior administrations,
(3) The parents,
(4) The boys' lack of ability,
(5) The Quarterback Club,
(6) The Chelsea Youth Club.

If he had every once simply said, "I have made mistakes and you have made mistakes, let us go together and solve our problems and establish a program in order to give our children the type of training, etc., that they are entitled to, we would have backed and defended him on all fronts. However, he has chosen to criticize and condemn everyone else instead.

Richard Crosby: Due to your poor taste of editorializing on matters that are only the communities' business, you have stirred up a HORNETS' NEST!!!

Final winner named in Football Cash

by Richard Crosby

Anna Matherson of Siluria is the final winner of Football Cash for the 1979 season. She correctly picked nine winners and won in the tiebreaker over four other contestants.

The key to winning this past week was picking Billingsley over Calera in the tiebreakers. Mrs. Matherson was the only predictor to correctly pick the outcome and claim the cash.

Placing second in the final week of the contest were Mike Byrd, Mary Harris, Orville Lybrand and Carol Farr.

We at the Reporter would like to thank all the football fans in the county for their participation in Football Cash during the past season and invite them to try again in 1980. It's been a year of winning and we hope the extra cash came in handy for the winners. Maybe next year you'll claim the cash.

Claims check

Anna Matherson displays the $25 check she won by choosing the winners of this week's football games in the Reporter's Football Cash competition. She said it is the first time she entered the contest. What was she doing when she found out she had won? She was at the home of her sister, Lucille McKennon, in Wilsonville putting the finishing touches to the last of several quilts she has made for her children's Christmas. She told the Reporter, "Maybe winning this money will make me quilt faster." She added, "All my children went to Thompson. Thompson is my team."

Bulldogs win big over T.C.T.S. 21-6

by Richard Crosby

Montevallo ended the season on a winning note last Saturday night with a 21 to 6 homecoming win over the Tigers of Talladega County Training School.

The win was the third of the season for the Bulldogs and Coach Richard Gilliam. "I'm real thrilled that the seniors went out a winner" Gilliam told the Reporter. "They shouldn't have had that record but inexperience, a large number of seniors who hadn't played before and the caliber of competition weighed heavily."

Montevallo got on the scoreboard in the first quarter of the season finale. The Bulldogs drove 76 yards in seven plays for the score with David Melsoni carrying the final yard for the touchdown. Jeff Hall booted the PAT to complete the seven point effort.

The Bulldogs got seven more minutes later as Rex Wallace recovered a Tiger fumble on the T.C.T.S. 28 yard line. Five plays later, David Melsoni passed 13 yards to Derrick Stewart for the score. Hall added the PAT to give Montevallo a 14-0 advantage.

Montevallo garnered its final points of the half and for the year in the final seconds of the second quarter. Melsoni passed 11 yards to Lightfoot for the score. Hall's PAT was wide.

The game's final score came late in the fourth quarter as Talladega put together two pass plays that covered over 70 yards. The final throw gained 46 yards and a touchdown. The conversion attempt failed as the Bulldogs ended the game and started celebrating.

Offensive standouts for Montevallo were Wade Bice with 66 yards in 12 carries. Clay Cardone collected 23 yards and Rance Gaddis 25. Quarterback David Melsoni threw eight times, completing five of those for 118 yards.

On defense, Steve Melsoni had the best game of his career with nine individual tackles, two assists and seven quarterback sacks. Also turning in creditable performances were Jerome Jones, Clay Cardone and Rex Wallace.

The Bulldogs ended the year with a record of three wins and seven losses. "The greatest thing is that I felt no heat from the community about the season record" Gilliam told the Reporter. "I don't think anyone has lost confidence in our program and I'm thankful for their support."

Montevallo now enters its off-season program to prepare for the 1980 season.

Gridiron season comes to end

by Richard Crosby

It's a surprise to most folks that the 1979 football season is over. A couple of upsets ended the year for both playoff hopeful teams in the county.

Thompson was the loser to Pell City who meets Stanhope Elmore this Friday night in the first round of the state playoffs.

Calera lost a tough game to Billingsley who meets Marbury this Friday night.

Both local teams are sure to be cheering on the teams that defeated them and hoping that they go 'all the way'.

In keeping with an August promise, here's the recap of how I predicted the season records and how they finally turned out.

Thompson

The Warriors bettered my prediction of 8-2 by one game in the season. Thompson turned in a record of 9-1 but it wasn't as good as the fans hoped for with the strong showing the team gave. A lot of seniors graduate this May but Thompson will again be tough next year.

Calera

The Eagles didn't make the playoffs and the predicted 9-3 season but it was through no fault of their own. Calera fell to powerful Jemison and Billingsley in the regular season, with last Saturday's game being the deciding factor of the playoffs. "Our players never let up" Alverson said of the season. "They played the best football they're capable of and gave their best effort. I'm proud of them for winning eight games and the two we lost can only be explained by saying we were beat by better football teams."

Chelsea

The Hornets found wins few and far between this season. The 2-8 record was far below the predicted 6-4 this forecaster foretold but the strength of the other teams in the area had a great deal to do with Chelsea's record.

Pelham

The Panthers ended up 5-5, two wins shy of the predicted 7-3 record, but with very few breaks Pelham would have equaled my prediction or better. "We lost five games by a total of 34 points" Coach Steve Rivers said of the season. "We were in every game and had a good chance of winning. We played hard all year and look forward to the off season."

Montevallo

The Bulldogs were the mystery of the 1979 season. Looks can be deceiving and I was fooled. You have to have a stable of good athletes to play football and Montevallo didn't have as many as other teams. That may explain the 3-7 record but also remember that Montevallo had the same problem that Chelsea did this past season - other teams in the area were loaded with talent. The 8-2 predicted record might happen next season with some breaks and new athletes.

Shelby County

The Wildcats started the season right on schedule but it didn't last long. Predicted to win six and lose four, Shelby County reeled off three straight wins to start the season but from there lost the last seven. You can't predict how players and fans will react and that dictated how Shelby County performed. Maybe next year the Wildcats will get over the hump.

Vincent

The Jackets bettered my prediction with an 8-2 season. The surprise is that Vincent continued to win and play tough after being knocked out of the Area race early in the season. That's a sign of a great team and one that is proud to put on the uniform. "We completely improved all year" Coach Gary Garrett said of the team. "This is the first team I've had that I felt improved every week we played all season long." The Jackets were also 4-0 against county opponents in the 1979 season and produced the best record at Vincent in four years.

Coosa Valley Rebs miss state playoffs

by Richard Crosby

Coosa Valley ended the season last Friday night with a win over Tallapoosa Academy 39 to 0 and just mimssed a playoff berth in the state private school association.

"We got beat out by a percentage point" Coach Rickey Naugher told the Reporter. "Fort Dale is the number one team in the state and we were the only team to defeat them. That put us high in the rankings but not quite enough to make the playoffs."

The Rebels ended up as the fifth top school in the 2A division with a 5-6 season record.

In reviewing the season Naugher related that the team stayed beat up every week with injuries playing an important role in the success of the team. "We had a pretty good year considering we started with only 20 players last August" the assistant coach commented.

"We had a young team and played a lot of sophomores (six) and juniors (five). That should help us next year."

Steady performances were turned in by Mike Wheeler, Mark Luker, Troy Beavers and Randy Waldrop offensively. On the other side of the ball, Naugher named Tim Spates, Sherman Strickland, Phillip Ward, Jim Haney and Don Smith as the men the Rebels relied on.

The five season wins for the Coosa Valley squad were over Shelby Academy, Tallapoosa, Woodland, Fort Dale and Faith Academy.

"Our kids gave great effort all year," Coach Naugher told the Reporter. "They never gave up and gave 100 percent each week. Our Booster Club has been especially supportive of our program. They have been a great asset to the team and are behind our program 100 percent.

"Our fans have also contributed a lot to our success with their vocal support and contributions," Naugher added.

Being the fifth best team in the state is a great achievement for a team that was picked to win only a few games in the season. But the Coosa Valley Rebels fought all year and proved that desire and willingness to play make a big difference.

We're number one

Montevallo's Lady Falcons rejoiced after winning the state championship in volleyball last weekend. The win was the second state title the University has ever won in volleyball. The Falcons defeated Troy State for the championship at the Univeristy of Alabama in Birmingham.

Lady Falcons claim state title

Team-wise and individually, the University of Montevallo Lady Falcons owned the 1979 Alabama AIAW Division II Volleyball State Tournament Nov. 9-10, at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

The record-setting UM women, winners of 17 in a row and possessing a 39-10 season mark, swept past Spring Hill College, Jacksonville State, Alabama State, and Troy State to capture the state championship for the second time in history. The Lady Falcons' only previous title was in 1972.

Montevallo also dominated the All-State and All-Tournament Teams, placing four on each team.

All-State players from Montevallo were hitters Reita Price and Pam Ray of Thorsby, and setters Frankie Crapet of Birmingham and Linda Benefield of Eufaula. It was the second such honor for Ray and Benefield, and the third for Price and Crapet.

All-Tournament picks for the Lady Falcons were Crapet, and hitters Vanessa Felder of Homewood, Sandra Sims of Birmingham, and Deborah Milliner of Huntsville.

"If you will notice," UM coach Beverly Warren pointed out, "we had eight All-Tournament and All-State picks, represented by seven different people. I think that says a lot for our overall team strength."

Looking at the overall picture, Coach Warren was certainly happy to win the championship, but felt that there were times the team was not as sharp as they could have been.

"We played some great ball at times, but we let down sometimes, too," she remarked. "I didn't think we played all that well against Troy in the finals, but the pressure of being that close to winning it all probably had something to do with it. And Troy played a pretty good game, too."

Montevallo had to go five games for the only time in the tournament in the title bout. Each of their first three matches went four games.

The next stop for the Lady Falcons is the AIAW Region III Tournament, set for this Thursday through Saturday at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Wildcats end season with loss to Leeds

Shelby County High School finished the year with the seventh loss of the season. The Wildcats fell to powerful Leeds last Saturday night by a 34 to 0 score.

"It was never really a game" Coach Mark Bradley told the Reporter. "We were behind 20-0 at the half."

The Wildcats' loss was the seventh in a row after starting the season with three straight wins.

Many members of the 1980 Wildcat team saw playing time aginst the Green Wave. Quarterback Dan Head went the distance for the Wildcats.

Twelve seniors graduate from the Wildcat ranks this May leaving many positions to be filled in the coming off season program which will start immediately.

CRAIG RAY

County gets archeologist

The Shelby County Historical Society now has a resident archeologist. He's Craig Ray, a former director of Fort Toulouse.

Ray's one year employment in the county was made possible with a CETA grant through the Alabama Historical Commission.

During his stay in the county, the archeologist will make a survey of the prehistoric sites that have been documented and those that have been reported by local residents.

Whatever artifacts Ray finds will be examined and cleaned in the old Helena police station which was turned over for his use.

One of his first projects, Ray said, will be to survey a two mile wide strip between the Coosa and Cahaba Rivers to determine the inhabitants, during what time period they lived there and how the area has changed.

Although he's familiar with excavation work, which he did at Fort Toulouse, Ray will mainly be conducting an above ground survey here.

In order to examine whatever remains previous inhabitants of the area left, Ray plans to form a volunteer group that will periodically check courthouse records to keep abreast of subdivisions that are being developed.

"We want to get the owners' permission to explore the land before houses go up," the archeologist explained.

Anyone finding arrowheads or old pottery they would like identified should call the local historical society office at the University of Montevallo at 665-2521 ext. 409.

A native of Birmingham, Ray earned his BA degree from the University of Alabama and has done some graduate work at UAB.

In addition to his work at Fort Toulouse, he has also served as oral history coordinator in Clarke County.

Posters promote books

Students at Hill Elementary School in Columbiana exercised their artistic talents last week as they participated in observing Childrens' Book Week.

"More Books in the Home," is the theme of this years national observance. And several of the posters pictured a number of bright colored volumes marching into a house.

Cartoon characters were drawn by some of the youngsters to show that everyone should read. Donald Duck with a stack of books was the subject of a prize winning poster.

And one student with a flair for drawing comic strip characters portrayed Snoopy on the roof of his doghouse reading a book.

Another poster that caught the eye of judges pictured a gigantic "bookworm," and they also liked a drawing which included a cat reading a book entitled "How to Eat a Rat."

All of the posters receiving blue ribbons will be sent to the state contest for judging. The local event was judged by former school superintendent Elvin Hill, Columbiana Mayor Pro-tem Bill Seale, Shelby County Library Director Pam Williams, Columbiana Librarian Barbara Roberts and Darlene Armstrong, volunteer library asistant.

There were 27 winners in the Columbiana school's contest. They are: Kindergarten - Michael Hunt, l; Angela Coleman, 2; Carla Smith, 3; First - Ryan Smith, l; Stacey Armstrong, 2; Jamie Bervard, 3; Second - Catherine Moore, l; Melissa Broome, 2; Teresa Lacey, 3.

Third - Elizabeth Payne, l; John Denney, 2; Kip Horton, 3; Fourth - Melissa Watkins, l; Stacey Blankenship, 2; Matt Morris,3; Fifth - Jonathan Windham, l; Tina Atkins, 2; Sandy Garner,3.

Mrs. Lespi - Michael Culpepper, l; Jackie Barnes, 2; Tim McKinney, 3; Mrs. McGinis - Bridgett Carter, l; Don Whitener, 2; Wallace Jordan,3; Mrs. McCroskey - Annie Mae Thomas, l; Rose Hughes, 2; Joey Hughes,3.

Mothers March adds male help

The target date for the Jefferson-Shelby County Mothers March of Dimes is January 27, 1980. But Shelby County Mothers March chairman Charlotte Holder wants to get a jump on this year's drive.

Mrs. Holder is in the process of recruiting neighborhood and town chairmen to head up local community drives. Last year Shelby County ranked among the lowest in returns for the state.

"This year we want to do something about that," she says.

She points out that although the drive is called the Mothers March, men are more than welcome to participate. In fact, stick-on lables are available that read, "Today I'm a mother."

The March of Dimes collects money to fight birth defects.

Anyone interested in helping with this year's drive is urged to call Charlotte Holder at 663-3960.

Chicago, here we come

Thanks to their dog and Hostein dairy cow Jennifer Milner, left, and Rene McCarthey, will get to go to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago. The young Shelby County women were the top Alabamians in the 4-H dog competition and in senior Dairy Showmanship competition.

Winners go to Congress

Jennifer Milner and Rene McCarthy have good reason to love their dog and cow, as the animals were indirectly responsible for the 4-H'ers winning the trip to the 4-H congress.

Jennifer is the 1979 State 4H Dog Winner and Rene is the State Dairy Showmanship winner. They will both attend the 4-H Club Congress in Chicago November 23-30.

Jennifer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Milner of Columbiana has participated in the 4-H Dog project for 6 years. She won the trip to Chicago for being selected regional dog winner based on her 4-H record book. She has participated in several 4-H dog obedience training classes and this past summer assisted with the dog training classes.

Rene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin McCarthy, lives on a dairy farm in Harpersville. She has shown cows for six years and has participated in many Junior and Senior Showmanship events. Rene won her trip for placing first in the State Dairy Showmanship Contest at the State Fair in Birmingham.

The young Shelby Countians will be among the 45 Alabama 4-H'ers attending the 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

Cahaba River stars in show

A slide presentation on the Cahaba River will be shown tonight (November 15), at the Birmingham Museum of Art by the Birmingham Audubon Society. The showing will begin at 7:15 p.m. and the public is invited.

Besides scenic views of the river and its often lush corridor, the slides also provide glimpses of many of the unique plants and wildlife which inhabit the area.

The slide presentation, which will be given by the Society's conservation chairman, Charles Duncan, is the same one which was viewed last April by assistant secretary Dr. Rupert Cutler when he came to the area to study the possibilities of protecting the Cahaba under the Federal Wild and Scenic River Act.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Columbiana firm changes landscape

Earth movers ready 4-H center site

Shelby County is growing and one obvious sign is all the heavy equipment we see working throughout the county.

When new construction begins, the first phase is cleaning and grading the property.

Harold McCord in Columbiana owns all the equipment necessary to handle the heavy-duty jobs of preliminary construction.

With eight years experience in heavy equipment construction work, McCord and his crew know how to make the land fit your construction needs.

More and more businesses are opting to build their offices off major thoroughfares, into the natural setting of forrests and mountain lakes. But this means roads have to be built to reach the area.

McCord and his crew specialize in building quality roads, with good drainage and that are less apt to need repairs.

Besides offering you quality road work, McCord has equipment needed to build beautiful lakes and lagoons, basements and clear forrests.

Among his earth-moving monsters, McCord has front-end loaders, back hoes, dump trucks, and grading machines.

Presently, several of McCord's crew are at work on the new 4-H center, off of Hwy. 28 near Columbiana.

The new center will have a huge conference center, four full-sized dormitories, a swimming pool, football field, and tennis courts.

But before construction can begin McCord's heavy equipment is preparing the land first.

For any construction need which requires heavy earth-moving equipment, call Harold McCord at 669-6040 or 669-7096.

Don Barnes, a member of the McCord crew, moves stumps and trees with this heavy front-end loader. Barnes is presently working on the new 4-H project Center for Shelby County.

SA Library Bazaar

Jo Davis (l), and Earline Howell show off some of the items that will be for sale at Shelby Academy's Library Bazaar Nov. 17. Thirty six mothers worked on the quilt shown in the background which will be given away during the Saturday event. All proceeds from the Country Bazaar will go to the library.

Shelby Academy schedules country library bazaar

With Christmas just around the corner, it isn't a moment too soon to start buying decorations and gifts.

A place where both can be found is the Shelby Academy Country Library Bazaar which is being held Saturday in the school gym.

Everything will be ready for inspection at 10 a.m and the doors will remain open until 4 p.m.

Items for sale will include needlework, macrame purses, paintings, preserves, and Christmas decorations such as wreaths, stockings and tree ornaments.

Proceeds from the event will be used to purchase more books as well as for carpeting and additional shelves in the library.

Briarwood Christian pointing to conference championship

Briarwood Christian High School has a chance to stretch its 6-3 record to 7-3 and capture the 3-A ACAC conference championship Saturday night in Mobile.

Briarwood will be playing a grudge match against Mobile Christian (8-1), who defeated the North Shelby team on November 2 by a 16-0 margin.

"We gave them two touchdowns," says Briarwood coach Gary Fleming. But, he adds, "I feel like we're a lot more prepared than last time, and our attitude has picked up. We feel like we can give them a better game than before."

The Briarwood defense this season boasts five games in which all they gave their opponents were gooseggs. The secondary, Fleming says, averaged two interceptions per game.

Though the defensive backfield will graduate this year, coach Fleming will see 18 players returning to the varsity and 17 ninth graders coming up from junior varsity.

Briarwood defeated Chelsea (19-0), Marian Institute (46-0), Independent Methodist of Mobile (3-0), Westminister of Gadsden (27-0), Graystone of Mobile (27-6) and West Birmingham (14-0).

Briarwood defeats came at the hands of Trinity of Montgomery (6-14), Cathedral of Birmingham (18-21) and Mobile Christian (0-16).

Arts Council hears blues

"To know the blues, you gotta' FEEL the blues, so loosen up!" And Chuck King flung his coat to the side and sang an old Bessie Smith number to the audience.

"I was with you baby when you didn't have a dime..."

King, a professional photographer with a Montevallo studio, conducted a lecture and demonstration of jazz at the November meeting of the Shelby County Council on the Arts and Humanities. The meeting was held at Indian Springs School.

"Blues is home language--friends talking," King told the group at ISS. "Its roots are in African music. Blues represent deep feelings that touch your heartstrings. With that comment, King raised his trumpet and played the blues.

Raider coach looks to "more successful" season

It might have been a scoreless game at Shelby Academy Friday night if it hadn't been for Raider fumbles, reported head coach Harry Rawlinson.

Playing on a rain soaked field, the boys in green went down to a 14-0 defeat at the hands of a determined Bessemer Academy team.

Even though the offense was performing as well as the previous week when Tallapoosa Academy was routed 30-8, Rawlinson said they were unable to get the ball across the goaline in this Friday's contest.

Pointing out that the Raiders managed to penetrate inside the 10 yard line several times, the coach said they were unable to reach paydirt.

"I made a bad decision to play in the rain," Rawlinson remarked, "but the kids wanted to play and so did I."

Admitting that the rain hurt the ball club, Rawlinson said it was especially noticable in the backfield where quickness was hindered.

Shelby Acadmey held their opponents scoreless in the first half, but the Bessemer team was able to get on the scoreboard at the beginning of the third quarter when they capitalized on an interception.

Seven more points were added after the Bessemer squad came up with a Raider fumble on the 9 yard line.

Recounting that everyone on his team had a chance to play in the Tallapoosa game, the coach noted that two players had gained over 100 yards.

Clifton Garrett's total yardage for the night, the coach reported, was 133 and Dick Carson's was 123. He also mentioned Chris Cooper, 57 yards and Brendon McClary, 62 yards.

Standout players that Rawlinson singled out in the bout with Bessemer were Ben Stansel, Jim Terrel and Danny Moore.

Shelby Academy's season record is 3-7-1. "It was a disappointing year for me," Rawlinson remarked. He added, however, that much to his surprise, parents seemed pleased with his handling of the team.

Looking toward a more successful season, Shelby Academy's new head coach said, "We're going to do all we can to get the younger guys ready to play."

Helena PTA raises $2,500 for school

The Helena PTA raised approximately $2500 at the school's recent Fall Festival.

Ronnie Campbell was the winner of tickets to the Alabama-Auburn, which were drawn for at the festival.

Kelly Norman and Melissa Lovoy won the poster contest for grades 1-3, and 4-6 respectively.

Class favorites for the year are Ricky Acton, Jennifer Pennington, Dale Parks and Melissa Wilson for kindergarten, Steve Boatright, T.J. Acton, Keith Fallon and Deborah Cofer for first grade, Michael DeSantis, Robyn Heard, Eric Lovelady and Kelly Norman for the second grade, and Ronnie Smith, Tobie Willingham, Jeff Brumfield and Teresa Turquitt for the third grade.

Vincent OES holds silver anniversary

When Vincent's OES Chapter 241 was reinstated 25 years ago, Margerein Oakes was given the privilege of accepting the new charter.

So on Sunday, when chapter members celebrated their 25th anniversary, it was Oakes' turn to make a presentation.

The OES officer honored with a plaque of appreciation was Mrs. Lelia Holladay, Past Worthy Grand Matron from Birmingham, who has handled the installation of chapter officers for a quarter of a century.

After thanking the group, Holladay presented a gift to the chapter apropos of the occasion. It was a folder containing twenty five Susan B. Anthony silver dollars.

New chapter officers were installed by Holladay in June. Presiding at Sunday's celebration were the new Worthy Matron and Patron, Betty Mehaffey and Elvin Green.

According to Mehaffey, the chapter was first organized in 1919 but joined with the Shelby County chapter in Columbiana in 1931.

Joining with the Vincent chapter to commemorate the anniversary were chapters from Chelsea and Montevallo and the state Worthy Grand Matron Viola Wood and her counterpart Haskel Sumerall.

There were also several other state officers present at the event which was held in the Vincent OES hall.

ESSAY CONTEST

"What the First Amendment Means to Me"

is the theme of an essay contest

now being sponsored by the Shelby County Reporter, the Alabama Press Assn., and the National Newspaper Assn. Mgrs., Inc. The contest is open to all Shelby County residents except those persons exempted under the contest rules.

The first amendment, adopted in 1791, has since protected the rights of freedom of speech, press, religion, and peaceable assembly. It has in recent years, however, come under fire from those who would have serious restrictions placed upon these heretofore inalienable rights.

It is the responsibility of the people of this nation to insure that this safeguard of American freedom is not altered in such way as to limit the individual's right to speak, write, worship, or assemble peaceably as he or she chooses.

It is the hope of this newspaper that through this contest the citizens of this area will gain a better understanding of the First Amendment and its role in the preservation of the freedoms they so fully enjoy.

Contestants are urged to compose their essays in strict obeyance with the contest rules. All entries must be received by the Shelby County Reporter no later than 5 p.m., November 23, 1979. Entries may be delivered in person or mailed in to: The Shelby County Reporter, Main Street, P.O. Box 947, Columbiana, Al 35051 or The Shelby County Reporter, Hwy 31 at Crosscreek Trail, P.O. Box 534, Pelham, Al 35124.

All entries will be judged according to the contest rules and prizes will be awarded as follows: First Place $25; Second Place $15; Third Place $10. There will also be a $5 prize as honorable mention. In addition, the first place winning entry will be sent to the Alabama Press Association for competition in the state contest.

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

CONTEST RULES

1. Contest open to all Shelby County residents except those employed by newspapers, radio or television stations, news services or a member of the immediate family of an employee of the exempt media. THERE ARE NO AGE RESTRICTIONS.

2. Each entry shall consist of not more than two 8½ x 11 pages. The entries must be typewritten and double-spaced, or clearly written in longhand, and not more than 1,000 words on the subject: "What The First Amendment Means To Me."

3. Each entry will be judged on the basis of appropriate treatment of the theme,originality and the writing skill of the entrant.

4. No entries will be returned and all will become the property of sponsoring state associations, Newspaper Association Managers, Inc., and the Ohio Newspaper Foundation for use as they desire, with no added compensation to the authors. Entries must be previously unpublished.

ESSAY CONTEST

"What the First Amendment Means to Me"

is the theme of an essay contest

now being sponsored by the Shelby County Reporter, the Alabama Press Assn., and the National Newspaper Assn. Mgrs., Inc. The contest is open to all Shelby County residents except those persons exempted under the contest rules.

The first amendment, adopted in 1791, has since protected the rights of freedom of speech, press, religion, and peaceable assembly. It has in recent years, however, come under fire from those who would have serious restrictions placed upon these heretofore inalienable rights.

It is the responsibility of the people of this nation to insure that this safeguard of American freedom is not altered in such way as to limit the individual's right to speak, write, worship, or assemble peaceably as he or she chooses.

It is the hope of this newspaper that through this contest the citizens of this area will gain a better understanding of the First Amendment and its role in the preservation of the freedoms they so fully enjoy.

Contestants are urged to compose their essays in strict obeyance with the contest rules. All entries must be received by the Shelby County Reporter no later than 5 p.m., November 23, 1979. Entries may be delivered in person or mailed in to: The Shelby County Reporter, Main Street, P.O. Box 947, Columbiana, Al 35051 or The Shelby County Reporter, Hwy 31 at Crosscreek Trail, P.O. Box 534, Pelham, Al 35124.

All entries will be judged according to the contest rules and prizes will be awarded as follows: First Place $25; Second Place $15; Third Place $10. There will also be a $5 prize as honorable mention. In addition, the first place winning entry will be sent to the Alabama Press Association for competition in the state contest.

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

CONTEST RULES

1. Contest open to all Shelby County residents except those employed by newspapers, radio or television stations, news services or a member of the immediate family of an employee of the exempt media. THERE ARE NO AGE RESTRICTIONS.

2. Each entry shall consist of not more than two 8½ x 11 pages. The entries must be typewritten and double-spaced, or clearly written in longhand, and not more than 1,000 words on the subject: "What The First Amendment Means To Me."

3. Each entry will be judged on the basis of appropriate treatment of the theme, originality and the writing skill of the entrant.

4. No entries will be returned and all will become the property of sponsoring state associations, Newspaper Association Managers, Inc., and the Ohio Newspaper Foundation for use as they desire, with no added compensation to the authors. Entries must be previously unpublished.

by Daniel Z. Kitchens, Pastor
Columbiana United Methodist Church

This Thursday our nation will celebrate Thanksgiving. For over 100 years the president of our country has proclaimed a national holiday set aside for all of us to express our thanksgiving for our bountiful blessings, our rich heritage and our freedom.

For thousands of years Jews and Christians have been exhorted to offer their gratitude to God for his many blessings to his people.

Yet, neither a proclamation by our President, nor exhortation from the bible, prophets, priest and pastors can make us be thankful to God, our forefathers or our benefactors.

Real Thanksgiving can only come from a grateful heart.

Several factors contribute to a grateful heart. One of the most important is realizing that persons other than ourselves have contributed to our well being and happiness.

Another factor is being able to see beyond the problems and difficulties of life and experience the good and beautiful things which come our way.

A third factor which contributes to a grateful heart is the ability to be content with what we have rather than envious of what others have.

When we can lay claim to these attitudes and outlooks then we have a grateful heart that overflows with thanksgiving to God and others who bless and enrich our lives.

A truly grateful heart translates into a style of thanks-living which blesses and enriches the lives of others. For our own sake as well as for others the Psalmist was right when he said, "It is good to give thanks to the Lord." (Psalm 92:1)

Mountain Brook grocer found dead near Shelby Springs

The battered body of the missing assistant manager of the Western Super Market in Mountain Brook was found tied to a tree in a wooded area near Shelby Springs around noon Monday.

Mountain Brook police have been looking for 20 year old Larry Thomas Osborn since his disappearance from the store around midnight Saturday. A reported $8,000 was also missing from the store.

According to Mountain Brook Police Chief John Haley, information that was obtained during the investigation led to the discovery of the victim's body.

Osborn's 1977 Mustang automobile was found three miles from where police found his body.

Haley reported that a suspect who had formerly worked at the store was in custody. His name would not be relased, the chief said, until formal charges were filed. That was expected to be on Tuesday.

Osborn's body was found by Mountain Brook police off a dirt road which has the reputation for being a lovers' lane.

A blunt instrument was apparently used to beat Osborn to death, the police chief said.

Shelby County Coroner Billy Thompson was called to examine the body and determine the cause of death. At presstime Monday, his report was not available.

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Department made their helicopter available for the search and both the Shelby County Sheriff's Department and the security force at Western Super Market assisted in the investigation.

Their choices were: Kim Knowles, Shelby County Junior Miss (center), Marla Franklin, (l), 1st runner up; Freddie Tezak, 2nd runner up.

Alabaster footballers win state championship

A happy bunch of youngsters and parents in Alabaster this week are celebrating the state championship brought home by the '115 pound' football team.

Coached by Pete Jones, the 12-13 year olds who were Number 1 in the Alabama Youth Football League's Southern Division, defeated Adamsville Saturday night by a score of 26-12. Adamsville was Number 1 in the Northern Division.

This win meant the statewide championship for the 115 pound team division of the Ala. Youth Football League.

Jones told the Reporter, "I can't say enough for the kids. They have done an exceptionally good job."

He started coaching the team in August, assisted by John Cobb, Tom Holbrooks and Ron Russell.

Now the parents are soliciting funds to take the boys to play this weekend in the Six Flags Invitational Holiday Bowl. Teams will be participating from several southeastern states but Jones says "As far as I know, we're the only team from Alabama." He says it will be a fun trip for the boys. They deserve it."

Season's first

James Lawley of Columbiana, left, may have bagged Shelby County's first deer of the season. He was on Hadaway Mountain (between Mooretown and Jointertown) at dawn on the opening day of the season. By 7 a.m. a 90 pound buck had crossed his gunsights, and he brought it down. He was at the Reporter office shortly afterward, where this picture was made to record the event. Lawley has been a hunter all his life, but this is the first year he has ever gone deer hunting, he said. He's planning to use the meat for the family's Thanksgiving dinner.

MHS principal stays on job

by Bert Seaman

Even though Montevallo High School Principal W. C. Corbett was bound over to the Shelby County grand jury Thursday on a child molestation charge, he will still remain in charge at the school.

At a press conference the day after the preliminary hearing in District Court, Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles said that Corbett would stay in his present position until the grand jury decided on the disposition of the case.

The grand jury's next session is set for Nov. 26.

Charges against the 51 year old principal who has headed the school for twelve years, were brought by Mattie Ruth Cunningham, mother of the 15 year old female black student that he allegedly molested.

According to Knowles and testimony given by Montevallo Police Chief Troy Kirkland, Corbett maintained from the beginning that he was innocent.

Marilyn Cunningham, a 10th grade student at the school, claimed that the principal made a "pass" at her when she went to his office the morning of Oct. 25 to ask for lunch money.

Corbett's lawyers Richard Bell and Bob Echols, did not put their client on the stand, but instead called teachers, students and the girl's mother to testify.

The basis of their case was that the plantiff had a reputation for being untruthful. Even though this seemed to be confirmed by testimony, District Judge Robert Armstrong ruled there was probable cause that a crime had been committed.

After listening to six hours of testimony, the judge retired for five minutes to consider the evidence.

In rendering his decision, which he gave at 8 p.m., Judge Armstrong stressed that presenting the case to the grand jury was not a determination of guilt.

But he said that the state's evidence, at that point, was "essentially unrebutted by direct evidence" presented by the defense.

When Corbett left the courtroom with his wife and other family members, his face seemed to register an expression of resignation.

As she greeted friends in the hallway outside the courtroom, Mrs. Cunningham wore a look of satisfaction and her daughter's face was wreathed in smiles as she came through the courtroom door.

In her testimony, the MHS sophomore maintained that Corbett asked her to step into his office when she said she wanted to talk to him. She told the court that the principal closed one door and told her to close the other.

After giving her the 75 cents for lunch, which Cunningham reported putting in the back pocket of her slacks, she said the principal continued to hold her hand, kissing it and her arm all the way up to her neck. With his other hand, she related, he fondled her.

He didn't call for help, Cunningham insisted she told the principal to stop while trying to get out the door.

MHS secretary-bookkeeper Opal Long and student office workers all testifed they didn't remember the door between their office and the principal's being closed.

Approximately 30 people, mostly students, were subpoenaed to testify. But only 13 witnesses took the stand with Marilyn Cunningham being the main witness for the state.

'Luck runs out' for Harpersville youth

"You were lucky this time," Vincent PD Chief George Humphries told him in August. But Thursday, November 15, that luck ran out for Kenneth Bolinger, 20 of Harpersville.

Bolinger hit a coal truck head-on about 12:30 p.m. while apparently trying to shake the police chief. The chief had just clocked him on radar driving about 70 mph in a 30 mph zone south of Vincent on Hwy. 25.

Bolinger and Chief Humphries had experienced nearly the same incident August 31, when the Harpersville man had attempted to outrun Humphries in a pickup truck. At that time, Bolinger was charged with aggravated speeding and driving while his license was revoked, Humphries reported.

Thursday, Bolinger was driving a 1974 Camero instead of a pickup, and he ended up in University Hospital, reportedly with smashed and broken bones in his left hip, arm and leg.

Humphries reported that he was driving towards Vincent near Hwy. 62 Thursday, when he picked up a car on radar, driving towards Harpersville at 76 mph. Humphries said as the two cars passed, he recognized Bolinger, who had by then slowed to 68 mph.

Humphries flicked on his blue and red lights, turned around and headed after him, radioing ahead to Harpersville PD Chief Elvis Linger.

"When I got to the viaduct (at the city limits) I saw a big cloud of smoke. The engine was laying on one of the road, and the transmission was on the other. The Camaro was chopped in two," the chief said.

According to police reports, Bolinger had passed a coal truck on the curve just over the viaduct, only to smash into the front of another coal truck coming towards him in the northbound lane. That truck ran off a 15-foot embankment and would have rolled over, had it not hung in low lying telephone lines on the side of the road. The drive was not injured.

A second northbound coal truck hit the Camero engine which was lying in the road. A third northbound coal truck reportedly ran over the front of the car. None of those drivers was injured.

The pileup had traffic on Hwy. 25 blocked for about 45 to 60 minutes, the Vincent chief said.

Two loads of sand had to be trucked from the highway department's Calera operations and dumped on the road to absorb oil which had spilled when the automobile came apart.

"I wish the kid had taken his citations and gone on home," Humphries told the Reporter. "But he was in the saddle."

Saturday night Bolinger was listed in satisfactory condition at University Hospital in Birmingham.

Marijuana suspect bound to grand jury

The odor of marijuana smoke on a suspect he had stopped for speeding Oct. 14, prompted Helena policeman Alvin Coggins to search the driver's vehicle.

William Henry Boykin III of Shalimar, Fl. was subsequently arrested and charged with Violation of the Alabama Uniform Controlled Substances Act.

Testifying at the preliminary hearing Thursday for the 22 year old Florida man, the Helena policeman said that after smelling the odor of marijuana smoke on the suspect, he looked in the car. Coggins reported that the butts he saw in the ashtray looked like marijuana cigarettes.

After Judge Robert Armstrong heard further testimony from Coggins, another man riding in the police car with him, and Sheriff's Department Investigator Tom Barnes, he ruled that Boykin be bound over to the grand jury.

Boykin will remain free on $10,000 bond which he posted the day after his arrest.

Attorney Bill Swatek, who represented Boykin, claimed that his client's car had been improperly searched. But District Attorney Billy Hill contended that the Helena policeman had had probable cause after smelling the marijuana smoke on Boykin.

When the trunk of the car was examined, officers found a suitcase containing a white powerdy substance believed to be cocaine and a blue zippered satchel containing $152,500 in cash.

The contents of a drawstring pouch Coggins saw protruding from under the front seat is thought to be marijuana and a paper sack found in the trunk is also thought to contain that drug.

Barnes testified that when he questioned the suspect at the Alabaster Police station where he was taken after his arrest, Boykin had claimed the suitcase had been given to him by a man at the Ramada Inn at Ft. Walton Beach, Fl.

Boykin also told him, the investigator said, that the man had paid him $2,000 to deliver the suitcase to the baggage area of the Birmingham Airport by 10 a.m. the next day (Oct. 15).

Montevallo girl is county's Junior Miss

When the master of ceremonies called Kim Knowles' name first in announcing the top ten winners in the Junior Miss Pageant, it was a portent of things to come.

After 45 minutes of deliberation at the conclusion of the competition, the panel of judges selected the Montevallo teen as Shelby County's new Junior Miss.

In addition to winning the contest, Knowles also walked off with both the Youth Fitness and Creative and Performing Arts awards.

The new Junior Miss is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Knowles and attends Shelby Academy. Her talent performance was a jazz dance routine.

Runners up in the Cahaba Valley Jaycee sponsored contest were Marla Franklin, a Pelham High School student, 1st, and Freddie Tezak, a Thompson High School student 2nd. Tezak also won the Scholastic Achievement award.

Parents of the Junior Miss alternate are Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Aycock of Riverchase. The second runner up is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Tezak of Alabaster.

Named as Spirit of Junior Miss in the pageant were Allison Moore of Chelsea and Tonya Wood of Alabaster.

Although 32 girls signed up for the competition, 26 actually took part in the event which was held at Riverchase Middle School.

According to a member of the sponsoring organization, a record amount was raised this year from ticket and ad sales.

After expenses, he reported that $4,000 was given to winning contestants. This, he pointed out, was in addition to the scholarships from various colleges and universities and prizes donated by merchants.

Included in the monetary prizes were Mary Cicio and Jackie Joiner who came up with the most sponsors.

Other Junior Miss contestants that judges named in the top ten were: Susan Luker, Kim Nall, Debra Payne, Mary Beth Mobley, Toni Domian Lisa Puckett and Allison Moore.

Thompson Elementary students pen ideas on what Thanksgiving Day means to them

by David Moore

What is Thanksgiving?

For Mom, maybe it's an extra day in the kitchen, man-handling a 14 pound turkey. For Dad it might mean football on TV. For those in college, Thanksgiving is the first holiday of the school year.

But isn't Thanksgiving more than that?

To get a fresher view of this national holiday, the Reporter decided to ask some of the students of Thompson Elementary just what they thought of Thanksgiving. The following are selections from what some of those students wrote.

From the second grade classes of Judy Acker and Marian Sides:

"I think Thanksgiving means to give thanks to God for freedom. We give thanks to the soldiers, too. We give thanks for food. We give thanks for life. We give thanks because we have a free country. We also share food. The first Thanksgiving dinner was for thanks," wrote Velvet Robinson.

Laurie Long wrote, "...everybody is ready to eat. But Grandmother is telling everyone it is not ready to eat. And everyone is talking about eating..."

"I think about Pilgrims," wrote Kim Till. "Sometimes we go somewhere. My family has a Thanksgiving lunch and sometimes supper. I draw some turkeys and hang them in my room. Sometimes we go to the museum and see Indians and how they lived. I am very sad when it is over."

According to Chad Brownlow, "...Thanksgiving is a helpful and thankful holiday. And I like the way that the Indians helped the Pilgrims plant corn. But I did not like the way that they shot each other. Well, I guess that they didn't know each other then. But I am glad that they started building houses."

"I think it means that you can be thankful for our freedom in the U.S.A., because some people do not have freedom like we do," wrote Amy McDowell.

Laura Moon described Thanksgiving as a "time for thanks and harvest. We thank God for all the things he has made for us on Thanksgiving. We eat good things and pray. God has given us many things to pray for. We can pray for our parents and sisters and brothers and our friends and grandmothers and grandfathers, and those overseas."

From the fourth and fifth grade special classes of Kathlyn Boyd:

Darrell Keith wrote that he is thankful for his brother, sister, mother, father, God, friends and his "theter" (teacher).

Marlo Thomas was thankful for food and pencils.

Allen Johnson was thankful for Christmas and Thanksgiving, while Melody Nelms was thankful for her mother, family, food, dad, and friends.

Mary Davis' fifth graders turned in the following "poems".

Thank you Lord for Thanksgiving.
Thank you Lord for me to be living.
Thank Thee Lord for Thanksgiving Day,
Thank Thee Lord that I can play.
Thank Thee Lord for all my food.
Hope dear Lord that I will be in a good mood.

Thanksgiving turkey goes gobble, gobble, gobble
I want to hobble, hobble, hobble out of here
Please clear me a path,
I'm only a small beast.
I don't want to be somebody's feast.

Thanksgiving is fun, it's really great,
The Pilgrims started it in 1608.
The poor turkeys, they have no Thanksgiving at all.
I think I've said it all.

What is Thanksgiving?
Is it a turkey?
Is it a song?
"Or is it a holiday?" you might say.
But you'll understand someday.
Thanksgiving is a time of grace that you'll have to face.
Most people say, "It's another holiday!"
But what do you say?

Couple finds paradise on Caribbean coast

To the Editor

Several years ago, I wrote you about pensionado benefits in Costa Rica and our plan to retire there (my husband is retired Navy). You suggested I write again when we were settled. But we have been so busy living, I honestly haven't had the time!

However, today, listening to the news...gloom, wars, energy crises, the shrinking dollar, strikes and poor Jimmy Carter...it occurred to me your readers would possibly enjoy the second episode in "The Saga of the Birds." So, here I am, pen in hand.

We moved, bag, baggage, grandmother, teenagers and all, to Costa Rica more than three years ago and since that time have been happily settled in Ranchos Maricosta. Our experiences merit writing a book, for they have not only been exciting but, at times, hilarious. The only flaw was our inability to find easily-accessible, registered beach property; which was probably a blessing in disguise, for it made us look to Colombia (another democratic republic) in South America where, it turns out, the cost of living is even less than Costa Rica!

There, we found Palmas de Oro (Palms of Gold), a lovely, old coconut plantation on the Caribbean Sea. And, to complete its unique and perfect setting, when we looked away from the Sea, we saw, towering over everything, 19,000 feet high and snow-capped the year 'round, majestic Mount Colombus of the Sierra Nevada range.

It may be hard to believe...hundreds of green palms waving in the ocean breeze, blue sky and ocean, pounding surf and golden sand, snow-capped mountains...but it is all there in Palmas de Oro, situated on the Pan American Highway near Santa Marta, oldest and most fascinating city in all of the Americas.

So, now we have two loves: our ranch in Costa Rica and our beach in Colombia. We sincerely believe we have discovered a new, exciting American frontier and are eager to share our discovery with others-and if you have the idea you are too old for adventure, we are 59 and 63 and both of us have battled and, so far, conquered cancer! You can write us at P.O. Box 157, Liberia, Guanacaste, Costa Rica. Please send letters by international air mail (25- per half-ounce). We promise to answer.

For now, from Latin America, we wish you salud (health), dinero (wealth) and much amor (love)!

Cheated by mail fraud? Call Postal Service

Fraud by mail is on the increase in the United States and the Postal Service is trying to stop it.

According to W. C. Long, Postal Inspector for the Birmingham district which includes Shelby County, says, "Mail fraud is as old as this country and many of the older schemes are constantly updated and continue. In today's economic situation energy related frauds are coming into being along with older types, such as work-at-home investment and distributorship schemes."

To help combat the problem, the Postal Service has named Consumer Protection Specialists who are experienced inspectors in mail fraud to investigate complaints.

The specialist for this area is R. J. Gaines, who can be reached by writing Consumer Protection Specialist, care of Postal Inspector in charge, at P. O. Box 711, Chattanooga, TN 37401. The phone number is 615-899-9111.

The use of mail for buying and selling all types of products has always been a very convenient form of doing business and most of the offers are legitimate. However, fraud is increasing at such a rate that it endangers the entire system of doing business by mail, according to some postal authorities.

Anyone who feels cheated through offers by mail is urged to contact the postal authorities.

Local court system praised for disposing record number of cases

Chief Justice C.C. (Bo) Torbert, Jr. said today that in spite of a 10 percent increase in court cases filed, Alabama's trial judges disposed of 17 percent more cases during the first six months of 1979 than they did in the same period a year ago.

"The result of this," Tobert said, "is that since the first of the year, we have had an actual decrease in cases pending before our circuit and district courts and it has occurred because of the diligent work of many of our trial court judges."

Statistics compiled through the case reporting system of the Administrative Office of Courts show that judges in 16 state judicial circuits and in 29 district courts have reduced their pending cases, meeting a goal Torbert urged for all judges during late 1978.

The chief justice complimented Shelby County District Judge Robert R. Armstrong, Jr., for meeting this goal of a reduction in pending cases. He also complimented Circuit Clerk Kyle Lansford and local court sysem employees for their support effort in handling court cases.

Statistics show that the pending caseload of the Shelby County District Court was reduced by 9.4 percent during the first six months of this year.

"The primary purpose for the existence of our courts is to dispense justice in a fair, speedy and cost-effective manner, and I believe we are discharging that duty in Alabama," Torbert said.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, a member of the FDIC.

Sometimes talents spring up late in life, say around seventy, when a guy least expects it. I knew a fellow once who couldn't hit the side of a barn with a double-barrel shot gun until he got close to seventy. Then one day he shot a squirrel's eye out at sixty feet with a second-hand sling-shot.

And there was the guy down the street who didn't know a turnip patch from a bitterweed hill. He went off and got a job in the big town and worked all his working life within two feet of pavement. He came back to the country at age sixty-five and planted a half acre garden and passed his stuff out to half a dozen other families who didn't have time to make one.

And there was the young fellow who didn't like ball-- any kind of ball-- because he didn't feel like playing. He'd rather stay inside he said, and practice the piano. Somewhere along the way he had read that uniforms stunk and had believed it for over half a century. Unitl at age sixty-six, he took up softball and played like a guy possessed until he broke a leg and both arms one night sliding into home plate.

Belcamp Jones never went swimming in the wash-hole in Longshore's pasture or at Cates' pasture on Beeswax creek or at Browning mill pond in Ben King's pasture. He had no hankering to get dirt between his toes. And he didn't like the hot sun scorching his skin. But every year now along about the last of May you'll find Belcamp stretched out on the beach somewhere in Florida eye-balling the pretty girls with the sand a foot deep around his toes and the sun no more than ten inches above his head.

And another thing. My singing for over sixty years was a poor middling. But a few years ago, eight or nine maybe, I suddenly turned up with a voice that oozed out of my throat dripping honey and molasses in every direction. At least, I thought so.

It wasn't hard to know where I was. All you had to do was listen for the soft notes and let the honey and molasses drip.

Nobody asked me about a try-out for television. Maybe because nobody in the know happened around when I was filling the air with music. Or maybe they were and just didn't take time to say anything.

In fact, nobody ever said anything about my singing, good or bad, until one day last week.

I was on my round last Thursday. About eleven-thirty I got to Mamie and Yeager Horn's house on Jail Street. I started singing when I left my truck and by the time I got on the porch the melody was dripping and getting on everything around.

Mamie answered my knock. I was still letting the honey drip.

Until she said: "We like for you to come, Skillet. But it'll be all right to leave the singing in the truck."

Scrambled Eggs

Do you think that wearing glasses could affect your hearing?

If I had been asked that question a few weeks ago, I would have answered, "No, of course not!"

But after last week, I've changed my mind.

Now I realize this sounds strange, but this particular pair of glasses I was wearing made the person I was looking at seem fuzzy, and really, I couldn't make out what they were saying.

Since I didn't have time to replace my prescription glasses after I broke them, I bought some of those half glasses at the drugstore and they worked fine.

But one day after arriving at the office, I got ready to start typing and I couldn't find them anywhere, so I ran to the drugstore for another pair.

However, the style I got this time didn't permit me to look over the top.

So now when I'm reading or jotting down notes, everything is super sharp, but when I look up, images are a little blurry.

I noticed the phenomenon of not being able to make out what a person in the distance was saying while I was sitting in a courtroom trying to hear a witness. Their features were fuzzy and so was their voice.

However, when I took off my glasses, I was able to see the person on the stand and hear what they were saying. But alas, I couldn't make out what I was writing.

Although I'm sure I must have looked ridiculous, I solved the problem by just pushing the specs down on the end of my nose.

Taking pictures though, is another kettle of fish. I need to wear glasses to see those teeny tiny numbers on my camera, but I can't look through the viewfinder with the dern things on.

Consequently, at an event like a football game, I'm constantly pushing them up on my head and then yanking them back down on my nose again. It's enough to give a person a headache!

Is there a solution I wonder? Contacts sound good, but the thought of pushing those little discs against my eyeball gives me the cold shivers - and keeping up with them, well, I don't believe I could.

Probably, I should just resign myself to the fact that failing eyesight is one of the things an individual of my years must cope with.

And if I really admitted the truth, the hearing related problem is probably in my head, not in my glasses. Can senility be creeping up on me?

I'm sure there are those who might agree with that, but I think I'll just make another trip to the drugstore and see what a new pair of glasses will do for me.

Pelham 'Friends' move to better library

by David Moore

Pelham may be the largest--and some would say the most progressive--city in Shelby County, but when it comes to libraries it's at the bottom of the list.

The library, located in the basement of the city hall in what was designed as storage closet, measures 12 by 24 feet, a total of 228 square feet. The National Library Association recommends 3500 square feet of library space for a city the size of Pelham.

The NAL also recommends a total of 27,000 volumes for a city of Pelham's size. Pelham currently has about 3000 volumes, according to librarian Mary Carter.

Realizing the need for improved library facilities, concerned residents have formed a Friends of the Library group.

An organizational meeting of that group was held at Pelham City Hall last Thursday morning. Approximately ten people attended.

Charlotte Holder was elected president of the Friends. The vice president of the group is Carol Nelson, and Mary Pihakis is secretary.

"We don't have a treasurer, because we don't have anything to treasure, yet," said Mrs. Holder. But that is one of the things the Friends plan to change.

She goes on to say that the main intention of the group is to get citizens interested and acquainted with the library, and to make it "an educational force for the community."

Tentative long range plans, both by the Friends and city officials, call for a two-story library building to be constructed on the city hall lot next to Cummings Street.

In the city's new budget, $2,000 was added to the library's request for $8,000. The $2,000 was intended as a start on a building fund.

Between now and the next scheduled meeting of the Friends in January, committees will be drafting a constitution and set of bylaws for the group, Mrs. Holder said. These will be presented at the January meeting.

"One of the group's first undertakings will be a community survey to ascertain the interests and needs of the citizens of the Pelham area in regard to the library," the president said. Pellie Kraft was appointed to head up the survey committee.

Mrs. Holder called the turnout at the Thursday meeting "a good, basic starting group."

She said that anyone interested in supporting the Pelham Library is welcome to call her at 663-3960, or call city hall (663-3901) and ask for librarian Mary Carver.

Gateway of Opportunity

To further enhance the city's claim as "The Gateway of Opportunity," Pelham librarian Mary Carver (above) and Mrs. Charlotte Holder have organized a Friends of the Library group to generate the interest and support needed to improve the present, small facilities located in the basement of city hall. "The Question of Sprinkling for Baptism"

Since many practice sprinkling instead of immersion in endeavoring to fulfill God's command to be baptized, one is behooved to examine the teaching of the Word of God concerning what constitutes scriptural baptism, which is to take place "for the remission of sins." (Acts 2:38) What is necessary to constitute the act of baptism?

First, the word "baptizo" in the Greek translated "baptism" in the English denotes immersion in water. Arndt and Gingrich in A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Thayer in Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament both state that baptizo means to dip, plunge, sink, overwhelm, immerse. All reliable Greek authorities agree with the above definition. Thus, those practicing sprinkling or pouring for Bible baptism--immersion--are disregarding the clear meaning of the word baptizo and are substituting man's command for God's demand.

Second, the baptism of the New Testament demands immersion. Baptism is a birth (John 3:3, 5) a burial (Romans 6:3, 4; Colossians 2:12), a planting (Romans 6:5), a going down into the water, and a coming up out of the water. (Acts 8:22-39) John the immerser was baptizing in the Jordan near Aenon, for there was much water there. One could hardly be born out of a drop (s) of water or be buried into or planted into a drop (s) of water. One could hardly go down into or come up out of a drop (s) of water. And, much water is hardly needed if but a few drops are sprinkled upone one's head.

Third, the significance of Bible baptism is seen in its being immersion in water. When a person is baptized for the remission of sins, his whole person and being is to be devoted to Christ. The very fact that the whole body is plunged beneath the water is indicative of this truth.

Those wishing to do Bible things in Bible ways and to honor the authority of Christ will practice immersion for Baptism. It is then that forgiveness of sins can be received.

Dear Reader, you will receive a cordial welcome at the Columbiana Church of Christ, Hwy. 25 Bypass. God is glorified and His word and will is magnified.

During her testimony, Cunningham's homeroom teacher, Dot Bishop, said that other students gave the young black girl a hard time for telling stories. And Mrs. Cunningham admitted that her daughter was untruthful at times, but she called the lies, "childish ones."

Deputy District Attorney Bob Williams handled the state's case and because he was requested to be present by Mrs. Cunningham, attorney Oscar Adams Jr. also took part in the proceedings.

When the education superintendent met with the media Friday, he reported that the members of the Board of Education he had spoken with and local school trustees were in agreement with his decision to let Corbett remain in his present position for the time being.

Knowles noted that the MHS principal had effectively continued running the school since the alleged incident took place. However, if the grand jury returns an indictment, the superintendent said Corbett would be assigned duties outside the Montevallo school, probably in the central office.

Explaining why he had called the news conference, Knowles said, "Whatever affects the schools, affects the people. And we have an obligation," he added, "to keep our cards on the table."

DON'T FORGET FURNITURE IN CORNERS

Many people fail to make good use of corners when they furnish their homes. Here's one place where youcan really help yourself in both a practical and a decorative way.
For instance, you might consider a cabinet of some kind in a corner. This is an ideal way to give yourself a piece to provide extra storage and display, and if you pick the right looking cabinet, you've also improved the looks of a room.
That's what's known as making the best use of the space in your home.
There are many other options for using the corners in your rooms. You might want to think about a chest; or a desk in one corner if you don't have room for it elsewhere; or a chair-and-table in a corner.
Another good decorating idea for a corner is a console with perhaps a lamp on it and a mirror above it. This can add a beautiful spot to any room.
And, remember to think about using those corners not just in the living room but in any room of your home. Those corners give you the opportunity to increase the beauty and usefulness of your home, and we are here to give you a selection of furnishings for any or all of your needs.

DID YOU KNOW?
By 1981, Alabama Power will have spent $357 million for environmental protection.
That's about $350 per customer over the last ten years. Protecting the environment is an important—but expensive—undertaking. It's necessarily a cost of doing business these days and part of the reason for higher electric rates. We also are required to file 600 reports each year with some 30 governmental agencies. Alabama Power is proud of its record of protecting the environment.

Robbers heist $2500 from elderly couple

by David Moore

Two armed men, stockings stretched over their faces, entered the house of an elderly couple and took $2500 in cash at gun point Saturday night.

Sheriff's investigator Reed Smith named the victims as Frank and Mary Kickam, of Hwy. 13, north of Maylene.

Smith said that Frank Kickam was struck several times in the face by one of the assailants. The assailants bound both Kickams before fleeing with the money and two hand guns of unknown description.

The robbery happened between 7:00 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Smith said, noting that Mrs. Kickam was unable to tell investigators exactly when the incident occurred.

Mrs. Kickam was able to free herself and her husband after the robbers left, Smith said. She walked about a quarter of a mile and called the law from a neighbor's house.

The Sheriff's dispatcher logged that call at 7:56 p.m.

Smith said that apparently Mr. Kickam was napping on the sofa when the assailants entered the house. Besides stockings over their faces, the investigator reported that the men wore gloves.

Both men are believed to be white.

Kickam was taken to Shelby Memorial emergency room and later was transferred to Bessemer Carraway where he was listed in fair condition at press time. Neither the 85 year old Kickam, nor his wife were available for comment.

"Apparently the assailants had knowledge of the money," Smith said, adding that he and investigator John Pratt were currently following up leads on the case.

Preliminary investigations were made by Helena PD Officer Steve Fancher, and deputies (Sgt.) Wayne Watts and Richard Fox.

Watts said the robbery was the first of this nature in the county in several years.

That's a cabbage!

Jeff Jones holds a Hybrid Savoy cabbage he and his dad harvested in their Columbiana garden this week. With him are Ryan Richey and Shelley Bolan. The compact part of the head measured 10 inches across.

County soil proves good for cabbage crop

Even those without green thumbs are thinking about raising some of their own food these days.

County Extension Agent John Jones wanted to prove that large heads of cabbage could be produced in Shelby County gardens, so he and his sons planted cabbage seed in July in peat moss cups. They set out the plants in August, and are now harvesting big heads of cabbage.

He said his biggest problem was the cabbage looper, a small insect that was determined to ruin his crop. But after spraying five times, he defeated the varmint and is enjoying both cole slaw and boiled cabbage from his own garden.

At the same time, Jones planted broccoli and is also reporting a good harvest from that vegetable.

Check dates on grocery ad

Because of early printing deadlines this week, the dates were inadvertently omitted from the Piggly-Wiggly advertisement which appears in this week's issue of the Reporter on page B-8.

Prices in the ad take effect on the Friday after Thanksgiving, November 23, and are good through Tuesday, November 27.

Columbiana starts youth football

The Columbiana Youth Football club is working to join the Shelby County Welter Weight Football Association. Teams from Calera, Vincent, Childersburg, Chelsea, and Montevallo are now in the league.

Nov. 1st and Nov. 15th were the dates of the first two meetings. The officers are: William Blackmon, Pres., Keith Gould, Vice-Pres., Sarah Gould, Sec., and Mickey Gannon, Treas.

The next meeting will be Nov. 29th, at 7:30 p.m. at the Recreation Building in Columbiana. The help of all concerned adults will be appreciated.

It is further ordered that a copy of this notice, certified by the undersigned clerk as being correct, shall also be recorded as a lis pendens in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama.

Alabaster votes to give YMCA 20 year lease

Shelby County YMCA Executive Director Molly McGregor made her second appearance before the Alabaster Council Monday night to ask for a 20 year lease on the Siluria facility.

After listening to her explanation of why the extension was needed, the panel voted to grant the request.

Even though the local Y wants to construct a new building as soon possible, plans were to hold on to the present facility as a branch, McGregor reported.

But the pool is badly in need of repair, she told the council. Relating that the cost of fixing it would be in the neighborhood of $40,000, the Y director said that the metropolitan Y would need assurance of a long term lease before providing funds.

The present lease on the old Siluria recreation building is for five years.

In other business, the Council made appointments to two boards.

Joseph Louis was named to fill the unexpired term of Paul Cohill on the Planning Board. One year is left of the four year term.

Mrs. Ethel Gamble was appointed to replace Mary Kroell on the Library Board and Mrs. Katie Hill was reappointed to another term on that board.

MHS class focuses on saving money

Everyone wants to know how to save money. And that's one of the things members of the Family Living class at Montevallo High School have been focusing on during their study of marriage.

For the past two weeks, student teacher Rebecca Arrington related, the class has been making preparations for a mock wedding reception.

Since this is one of the most expensive entertainments ever undertaken by a family, noted Home Ec teacher RoseEllen Hankins, the class has been learning how to cut corners when preparing for the big event.

As part of their assignment for the unit, students sent invitations to parents and faculty members to be their guests at the Friday reception.

At 10 a.m., those who attended were ushered into the living room in the Home Ec building, and after being welcomed, were served wedding cake, mints and punch which the students had made.

"Class members have learned how to do a lot of things for themselves in getting ready for this kind of affair," Hankins pointed out,"and they've also discovered they can rent things," she added.

The Home Ec teacher emphasized that what the students learned could be used in preparing for any entertainment occasion and the skills developed could be used for a career or hobby.

"I feel that this has been a real good learning experience," remarked Arrington, who will be doing her student teaching at the school for seven weeks.

She mentioned that the students were also learning social graces as part of the class and the reception, she added, gave everyone an opportunity to get acquainted with parents.

Dogwood tree trails win national honors

For the third consecutive year, the Birmingham Area Board of REALTORS has been nationally recognized for its ongoing dogwood tree program.

The tree program, which involves marking of dogwood tree trails was initiated by the board four years ago. According to a board spokesperson, the program's purpose was to "put something tangible back into the communities from which we derive our livelihood."

This year, six dogwood tree trails were opened simultaneously on April 7th in Alabaster, Pelham, Mountain Brook, Eastern Birmingham, Southside Birmingham, and Hoover.

Accident

Leeds.

A fourth occupant of the Blazer, James C. Flowers, 33, of Birmingham was not injured.

The men were en route to a deer hunting expedition when the accident occurred at 7:58 p.m., reported Pelham PD officer Jerry Lewis.

Apparently Miss Huguley was pulling onto the busy highway from the Pelham Plaza Mall when the collision occurred, the officer said.

Lewis said that both cars were upside down, side-by-side in the median when he arrived on the scene moments later.

Corps of Engineers seeks contractors for Frederic cleanup

The Army Corps of Engineers Mobile District announced this week it is seeking contractors to clean up debris left by Hurricane Frederic in Mobile and Baldwin Counties, Alabama.

The Engineers said that more than 3million cubic yards of debris had been removed already, but that a considerable amount remained yet to be cleared.

Much of the debris consisted of downed trees and assorted scrap on road and street rights of way and around private dwellings. The engineers said much of the work will be in residential areas which were hard hit by the storm.

Contractors interested in the work should contact the Procurement and Supply Division of the Corps of Engineers District in Mobile. The address is P.O. Box 2288, Mobile, AL 36628, ATTN: SAMPS.

Reporter updates typesetting equipment

by Marcia M. Sears
Editor

If you noticed something different about our classified pages in the Shelby County Reporter last week, you were right.

We set them with our new machinery, and the type style for classified ads is just a little bit different from the style we used to use.

Last week we installed an up-to-the-minute kind of typesetting machinery, which we hope will enable us to keep up with the continuing demands for speed in getting out the newspaper.

The Reporter has continually upgraded its mechanical equipment through the past several years to better serve the people of Shelby County. Machinery in the printing business has undergone a major revolution in the past 25 years and new inventions have been coming forth at a rapid rate.

From the old linotype machine, the Reporter in the past 12 years has gone through IBM's MTSC system, which was a radical improvement at the time, into photo typesetting. The IBM will be phased out finally after serving us well. We have been using it for backup to our newer machines for the past three or four years. We will also phase out the first of our photo typesetting machines this week.

Our new system provides typesetting keyboards for our reporters to use when they write their stories. The stories are recorded magnetically on a disk, which is then proof-read by the editor on a 'television' screen which is part of the equipment.

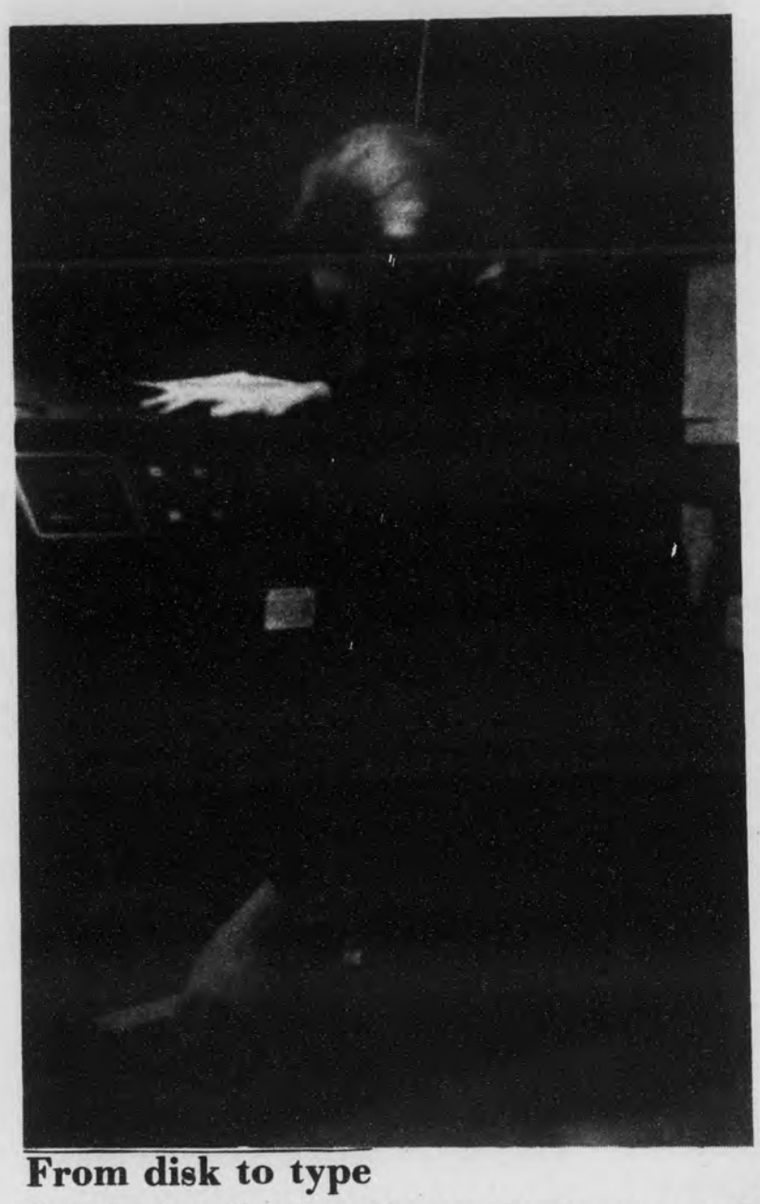
Corrections can be made electronically. Words can be inserted, spelling can be corrected, paragraphs can be deleted, and new paragraphs inserted.

Then the disk is inserted into a master machine, and the copy is printed on long strips of paper ready to paste down on the master sheets of the paper.

We are still keeping the major new machine we purchased two years ago, and it will be used for backup and for setting advertising copy at a rapid rate.

The difference in type is most noticeable in the classified and legal sections, because the type style used in the general news columns is exactly the same as we previously used. We feel that the "English Times" type is the easiest to read, so we did not alter the style when we added the new equipment. But on the classified pages we added a new style, called "Helios" which we hope our readers will find easier to read.

We welcome all comments and suggestions from you, our readers, because the Shelby County Reporter is published for you.



From disk to type

Production Supervisor Candice King shows how easy it is to use the new Compugraphic typesetting equipment at the Reporter by slipping a disk into the machine.

Poem presented

"Under Milkwood," a state adaption of the poem by Dylan Thomas, will be presented by the University of Montevallo Speech and Theatre Dept., Wednesday, Nov. 28 through Saturday, Dec. 1.

The play was written as a play for voices, said Jay Cady, director, and a UM student from Mobile.

"It was originally written for reader's theatre or radio," he said, "and is usually done in reader's theatre style. But this will be a fully staged event."

Eight actors who will be portraying 64 different characters.

All performances begin at 8 p.m. in UM's Reynolds Theatre.

Card of Thanks
Thanks - Thanks - Thanks!
I pen this note with deepest appreciation from my heart, to everyone who shared with the duties it took, to staff and manage our Columbiana PTO Concession Stand, for without the support, it would have been impossible. Special thanks goes out to: Our three city schools, SCHS, Middle and Hill Elementary, Shelby Co. High Beta and Jr. Civitan Clubs, Rebel Rousers CB Club, PTO Members and officers, concerned non-menbers, and our youth. There was about one dozen or more of our youth who faithfully came everytime the doors opened. They came, asking nothing in return, but only to be a part and that they were. I love each of you for it. I couldn't forget my co-chairman and vice-president, Nancy Cardwell, Nancy, couldn't have made it without you.
If I've over looked someone, its by mistake, thanks again.
Helen Lewis,
Columbiana PTO President and
Concession Stand Chairman

1979 Vincent Yellowjackets

Yellowjackets named Team of the Year

by Richard Crosby

Vincent High School's football team has been named the Shelby County Reporter Team of the Year.

Sports Editor Richard Crosby informed Coach Gary Garrett and the school of its selection late last week.

"Our selection of Vincent as the Team of the Year was a tough choice because of the many outstanding performances by teams around the county" Crosby said. "But we think Vincent showed that it was clearly the better ball club."

Vincent posted an 8-2 season record, matching the best record coach Gary Garrett has had at the east county school. Most notable in the performance of the team was the desire to win. Vincent lost all playoff hopes in the sixth game of the season, but fought back and won the final four games in spite of what must have been a letdown.

The Yellowjackets averaged 230 yards of offense each game during the 1979 season, and allowed an average of 175. Vincent also scored nearly 23 points a game while letting the opponents gather an average of 12.

"Our players never gave up despite knowing we couldn't make the playoffs" Coach Gary Garrett praised. "We're most proud of being undefeated in the county (4-0) and this is the second year we have done it."

Garrett added that his Yellowjackets were the only group to beat Talladega County, a team that has advanced to the second round of the state playoffs with a win last week, and Vincent is its only loss.

The coach also added that this year's team is the first he has had that he felt improved each week of the season. "Last year I thought we improved the last half of the season, but this year's group I really feel has improved every week we went out on the field."

Garrett also praised the boosters of the school and the parents for their support of the football program at the school.

So, to Vincent High School, its supporters, faculty, students and athletes, congratulations as the 1979 Shelby County Reporter Team of the Year.

Coach Gary Garrett announces resignation

by Richard Crosby

Vincent coach Gary Garrett anounced late last week that effective December 1st he is resigning his coaching and teaching duties at Vincent High School.

Garrett told the Reporter that his reasons for leaving were personal and that he would be moving to Florida to pursue private business.

"I have been real happy with the years I've been here" Garrett said of Vincent. "We have an outstanding athletic program and a lot of that is due to the administration, the assistant coaches and good athletes.

"But, it's time to move on. We're moving back to Florida and I'll be getting out of coaching. I plan to stay out unless I find I can't live without it," Garrett told the Reporter.

"I can't say enough about the support the people of Vincent have given our athletic program. They have given of themselves in both time and money and we couldn't have come this far without them."

Garrett's record at Vincent the past seven years is 42 wins, two ties and 26 losses.

Although no announcement has been made as yet, it is expected that Harold Garrett, brother of the resigning coach, will assume the head coaching job at Vincent.

BEST WISHES to the Team of the Year!!

Moderate success reported

Deer season underway

by Richard Crosby

Deer season opened last Friday throughout Shelby County and the morning resounded with hoofbeats and and crack of firearms.

While it's still to early to tell, early reports indicate that this year will be a good one for deer hunters but it will take more patience to bag a buck then in past years.

I don't know whether the animals are getting smarter or not but that seems to be the case. The successful hunters this season will be the ones who prepared the best.

Planting food plots and building blinds may have been the best forethoughts of resident hunters. Bowhunters have been reasonably successful during the first month of either sex hunting. I've heard of more deer killed than actually seen so sometimes the grapevine isn't as reliable as it used to be.

Know one Columbiana hunter who got up before the crows last Friday only to have truck trouble. Last I saw, Clark was wheeling and dealing to trade cars.

In Harpersville, Jerry Gardner has been busy but hasn't brought any meat home yet. The Abbott brothers of Vincent have also been scouting the area for bucks but haven't heard how they have fared.

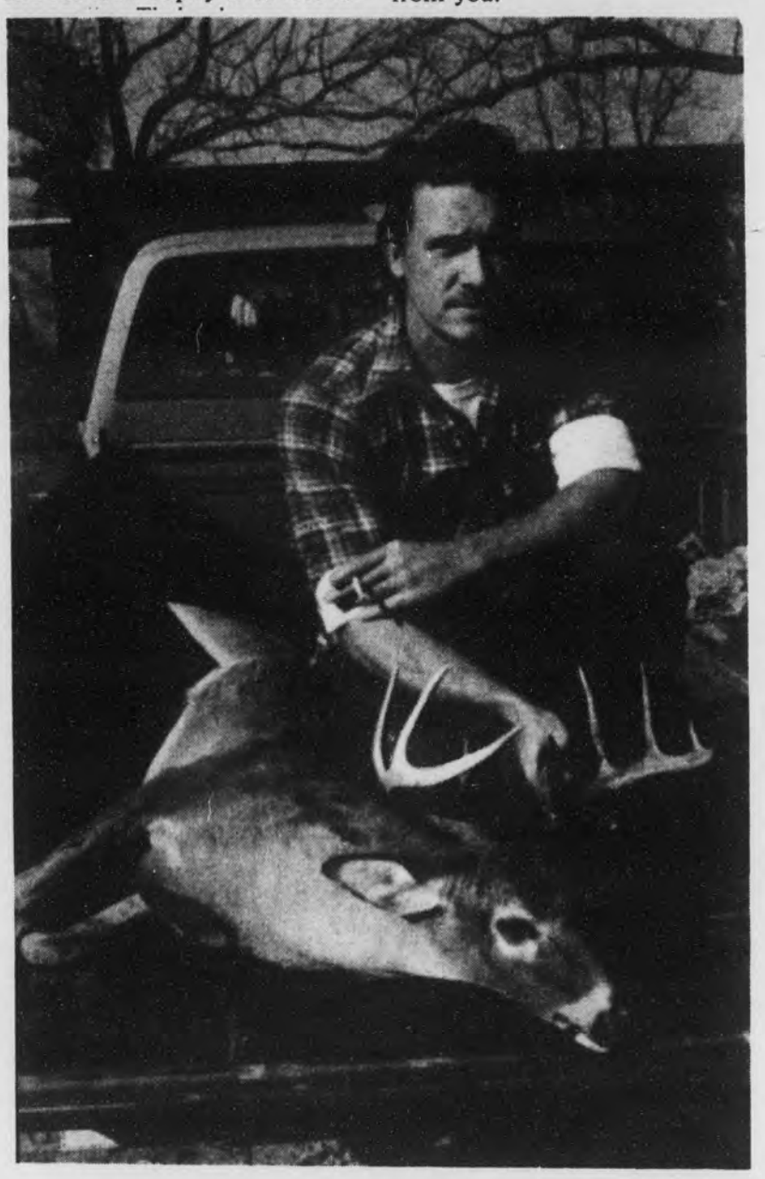
Down in Kingdom, Mike Griffith is sporting a new rifle but with that fancy case you can bet the rifle won't see much sunlight.

We've had two successful hunters come by the Reporter office for their trophy to be recorded on film. Their pictures are in this week's edition.

If you'ld like to brag in print, just come by the Reporter office and ask for the picture person. We'll take a snapshot and run it in the next edition.

In case you can't come by, take your own picture and send it in or bring it by either of the Reporter offices. We'll make sure you make the paper and get your picture back.

Good hunting and let us hear from you.



John Henry of Wilsonville started off the deer hunting season with a nine-point buck he shot with a 30-30 silver tipped bullet. Henry was hunting near Yellowleaf Creek when the buck appeared. It was about 7:55 a.m.last Friday,the opening day of the season.

'Brighthope' gets new funds

It's "go" again to produce "Brighthope," Alabama's first professional outdoor pageant, next summer.

Marty Everse, director of Brierfield Ironworks Park, site of the historical pageant, said that enough private funds had been pledged for the park board to again plan the pageant. And he said he and park board members still plan to raise another $30,000 in private funds.

Written by Kermit Hunter, who also wrote "Unto These Hills" and several other historical pageants, "Brighthope" details the growth of Alabama's early iron and steel industry near Brierfield, a northeast Bibb County community near Montevallo.

The play was first presented at the park in 1978.

Everse said that $30,000 in state funds has also been allocated to the play -- a $20,000 line item appropriation guided through the Legislature by State Rep. Walter Owens of Centreville and $10,000 from interest on Gov. Fob James's revenue sharing fund.

The park board is also seeking funds from the National Endowment for the humanities and the Alabama State Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Dr. Charles Harbour, chairman of the UM speech and Theatre Department, said that he will begin soon recruiting actors for the show's six-week season, which will begin July 2.

Watch traffic on Thanksgiving

"Thanksgiving is the traditional time for family gatherings. Unfortunately, because many people must travel to be with their families, it is one of the highest traffic death periods," said Colonel Jerry Shoemaker, Alabama Department of Public Safety Director.

"Last Thanksgiving, 14 people died in traffic accidents on Alabama's streets and highways. Five of these people died in rural Thanksgiving day accidents," Colonel Shoemaker said. "From the trends in traffic accidents this year, we expect 16 deaths in traffic accidents during the 102-hour Thanksgiving holiday."

The Thanksgiving holiday period begins at 6 p.m. November 21 and ends at Midnight Sunday. During this time traffic is expected to be heavier than usual.

UM Chorale to perform

The University of Montevallo Chorale will give a presentation of Christmas Music, Tuesday, Nov. 27 in UM's LeBaron Recital Hall.

Directed by Randall Veazey, member of the music faculty, the program will include "Ceremony of Carols" by Benjamin Britton, "White Christmas" by Irving Berlin, and "I'll Be Home for Christmas" arranged by Randall Veazey.

The concert, beginning at 8 p.m. is free and open to the public.

Milking three times a day proves good move

by David Moore

"Folks who hadn't tried it, said I was crazy," says Ralph Bearden.

But as the saying goes, three times is a charm. and recent figures prove this true. They prove too that maybe Bearden isn't so crazy after all.

Last November the Vincent dairyman changed his milking schedule from the traditional two times a day, to three times a day. His results after one year--22% increase in milk production.

Of course an additional milking means the 165-head herd has to eat an extra meal each day, increasing Bearden's daily feed cost by $35. The electric bill for his milking machines and the cost of other supplies has increased about $15 per day, too.

Even so, Bearden says his profits have increased to the tune of about $100 a day. And since dairy farming is a 365-days-a-year job, that profit increase is indeed substantial.

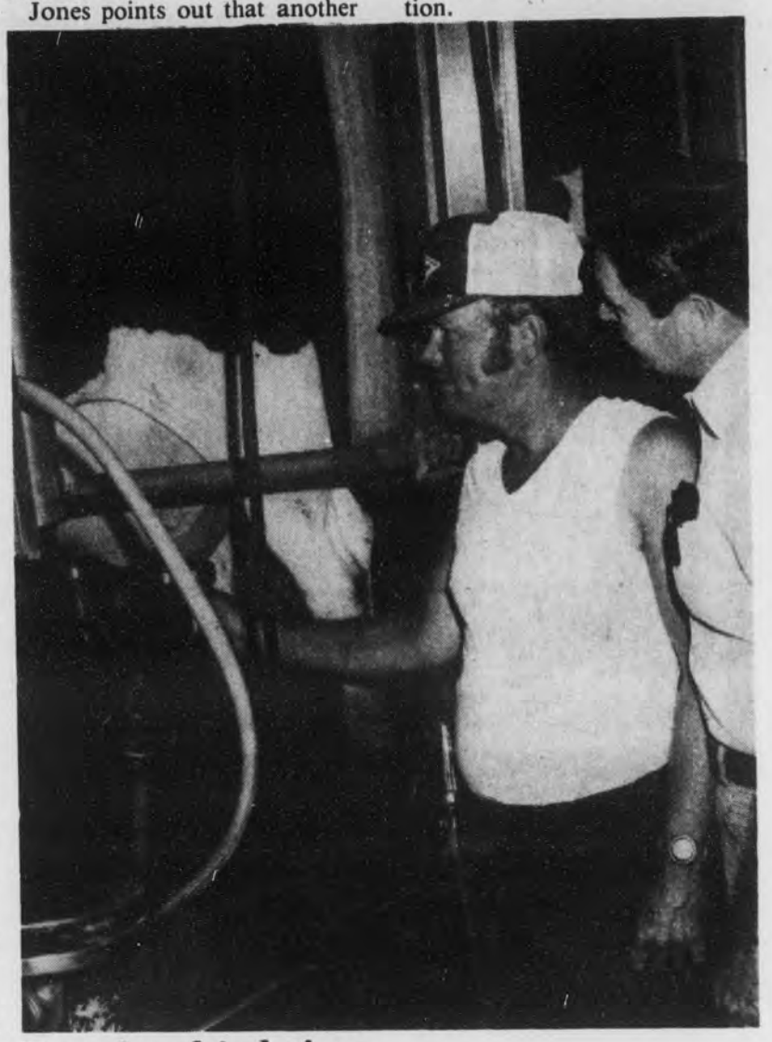
But according to county extension agent John Jones, milking three times a day would not be profitable for all dairy farmers. The key, Jones says, is the labor factor.

If extra labor is hired to milk the cows that additional time, it may make the new schedule financially impractical, Jones says.

"I ended up with some extra help. That's why I tried it when I did," explains Bearden. "It wouldn't work for everybody, but it worked for me."

According to Auburn animal scientist Dr. William Barnes, the average milk production for the state is 13,013 pounds per cow per year. During the past year Barnes kept a computerized check on Bearden's herd (which was already above state average) and found that the herd is now giving an average of 16,939 pounds of milk--an increase of 2415 pounds per cow. (Note: 8.6 pounds of milk equals one gallon.)

Jones points out that another advantage Bearden has realized since going on the new schedule is a reduction in cows' calving interval from 13.6 to 13 months. This, he points out, means that a cow can enter its lactation or milk producing period sooner, thus aiding in the increase of production.



For the third time

Dairyman Ralph Bearden, left, shows John Jones through his dairy barn, where his cows are milked three times a day.

Dairymen attest that cows, much like people, have varying personalities and different needs, and Jones and Barnes say that the animals respond well to the added attention of a third milking.

As late as the 1920's, Barnes continues, cows were milked five and six times a day. As times changed and the number of dairies began to decrease, herd sizes began to grow, resulting in the move to mechanical milkers and the concept of twice a day milking.

Bearden claims that switching from two to three milkings has completely altered the life style on his farm. Before going on the new schedule, he milked his herd at one o'clock, mornings and afternoons. Now he or his milkers take the cows to the parlor at 1 a.m., 9 a.m. and again at 5 p.m.

For the first couple of months, the Vincent dairyman says, three milkings "liked to have killed me." Now he says he's used to it, and enjoys it.

"It's worth a little extra work," Bearden says with a laugh, adding that if he had to, he'd rather cut the size of his herd than return to two milkings.

Bearden recommends that anyone wanting to switch to the new concept of three milkings should make sure they have ample labor to handle the job. He also suggests sticking with the schedule at least a month to give .. a fair chance, and not trying to change over during a busy time of the farming season.

According to the extension office, besides Ralph Bearden, the only other county dairy farmers on the new concept are his brother, Joel Bearden in Helena, and Carey Kendrick in Montevallo. The remainder of the county's 18 dairy farms still run on a twice a day schedule.

Though the profits, at least for some farmers, offset the extra labor and costs of three milkings a day, what do the cows themselves think of the overtime work?

"They're about as well satisfied as I am," Bearden says as spokesman for his herd.

Kiwanians sponsor Farm-City

Dr. Robert N. Brewer, Auburn University, who has headed a project on solar energy for farm application, will be the featured speaker for the Farm-City Week Dinner for Shelby County.

Col. J. Claude Smith, (Ret.) Chairman of the Shelby County Farm City Week, advises that Dr. Brewer has been working for three years under a project financed by the Alabama Poultry Association. A major cost in raising broilers is that of heat and Dr. Brewer and his team have been working to reduce the cost. The principles involved in solar energy for poultry houses can be applied to other heating requirements on the farm, the home, or in manufacturing.

Evan Majors, President of the Columbiana Kiwanis Club which sponsors the Farm City Week dinner, h as set the dinner for November 29 at the Community Service Center in Columbiana.

Coconut by mail

Calera Mail Carrier Sonny Davis, left, delivers a coconut to the LeSueur children (Karen, Ken and Kevin) that was mailed to them from Hawaii by their vacationing parents, Mr. and Mrs. Doug LeSueur. Davis says it is one of the more unusual pieces of mail he has delivered, but says the Postal Service is glad to handle "all kinds of packages." The name and address were written directly on the nut. The stamp was stapled in place.

New law may help

Could you adopt one of these?

Most children in Alabama will sit down to Thanksgiving dinner with family and friends, but Gary Cooper, Commissioner of the State Department of Pensions and Security, knows of at least 120 who will not.

"We currently have 120 children available for adoption who have not been placed," said Cooper. "Many of them are older children, black children, physically or mentally handicapped children, or members of sibling groups."

In an effort to make the plight of these children known, Governor Fob James has proclaimed the week of November 18-24 as Adoption Week in Alabama. National Adoption Week is being observed concurrently across the country.

The Department of Pensions and Security and a number of other private agencies licensed by the department have the authority to place children for adoption in the state.

Cooper said that he was particularly concerned about children who are hard to place. "We have no problem finding homes for healthy, white infants because they are what most prospective adoptive parents want," he said. "But there are many other children who need and deserve permanent homes just as much." He added that Alabama, along with many other states, has few white babies available for adoption.

Of the children currently awaiting adoption, almost half are black, school age or older, or members of a sibling group. Cooper said that sibling groups are hard to place because many prospective adoptive parents cannot afford more than one child. Pensions and Security tries to find homes where brothers and sisters can be placed together.

The adoption subsidy law, passed during the last session of the state legislature will go into effect in December and is expected to ease the plight of many children seeking adoption, said Cooper. Currently, many families of moderate means would like to adopt handicapped or older children but cannot because of the expense. The subsidy law will allow many of these families to adopt.

How to get the most heat from wood-burning stoves

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Installing a new wood-burning system in your hunting lodge or camphouse may be your best bet in reducing your own energy costs. But to get maximum benefits, you must consider wood to burn, when to harvest it, etc.

For instance, how do you measure your wood for fuel? A cord is a stack of wood 8 ft. by 4 ft. by 4 ft. This represents a volume of 128 cubic feet, which includes about 80 cubic feet solid wood and 48 cubic feet of air space and bark.

What woods are best for burning? Of universally available trees hickory heads the list with 24.6 million Btu's per cord. To refresh your knowledge of physics, a Btu is British thermal unit and is the quantity of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree F° at or near the 39.2 degree mark. White oak is second with 22.7 Btu's; followed in descending order by beech, red oak, southern pine, red maple and elm. The importance of the top two woods is shown in that, compared to stoker coal delivered for $60 per ton, hickory is worth $67 per cord; white oak, $62. Beech breaks almost even at $59.40.

Many oldtimers in wood cutting for household burning -- your grandparents, and beyond -- knew the best time to cut and season firewood. This is more important today because this is part of wood conservation and was especially important 50 years ago since everything had to be cut with crosscut saw and ax and split with ax and wedges and hauled home in mule-drawn wagons. Nowadays the chain saw and mechanical wood splitter do the job in record time and you use your truck to haul the wood to your lodge.

Dry wood was the key then and still is today. For example, wood for this winter's fires should have been cut last spring so that it could air-dry during the hot summer months. A pound of air dry wood cut six months ago has about 25 percent moisture content and will contain 6,400 Btu's. That same wood, cut, say a month ago, is green and will average about 4,000 Btu's. (If that wood were oven-dried, it would average 8,500 Btu's) Just think, you get 40 percent more benefit by early cutting and curing firewood!

All this means that if dry wood is burned, less wood will be needed to get the same heat output from your stove or fireplace than if green wood is used. If you plan to install a wood-burning cookstove in your lodge or cabin, you should use dry wood for maximum benefits. Remember, if you cut your own wood with a chain saw and use a mechanical log splitter, cutting that wood in early spring means getting the most heat for an hour's work.

In most cases those persons with a cabin usually own a few acres and those acres grow sufficient trees for firewood. Harvest of dead and diseased trees will mean wood that is already dry or partially dry.

However, I urge you to leave those trees that may serve as den trees for squirrels, wood ducks, owls or even bees. Do not drastically reduce your hardwoods, else you will also reduce mast production -- acorns, beechnuts, etc. - that is most important for game species during fall and winter.

Some of the larger timber companies will grant low cost permits to cut certain hardwoods for personal use. Contact those with offices in your vicinity. In some cases you may be able to work out a deal with private landowners. Even if you have to depend upon someone cutting, hauling and delivering wood to your cabin or lodge, the price in rural areas may be more than reasonable. It's a good idea to have a rick of wood to fall back upon if disaster knocks out your electricity for several days, or fuel oil deliveries are delayed.

By all means take all safety precautions with your wood-burning system. Have sufficient insulation beneath a stove in a room. Place a screen over a fireplace at all times to catch flying sparks. Don't burn wood that pops, such as poplar or cedar.

There can be other advantages associated with your wood-burning stove, furnace or fireplace. The newer models of stoves can double for cooking. On one European model you lift the "cosmetic" front thus exposing a cast iron surface for pots and pans. It also has a pull-out grill for broiling hamburgers, steaks and roasts.

While you may not be shoveling ashes as often as in the past, those wood ashes contain potash and can be thrown on your garden as fertilizer.

We may not be returning to the past with our new interest in wood-burning techniques, but we're certainly making the past a part of our future!

Suspect gets escort

Personnel from the Shelby County Sheriff's department escort murder suspect Steve Smith to his bond hearing last Wednesday. Rushing him through a downstairs corridor are: Chief Investigator Reed Smith, Investigators Tom Barnes and John Pratt, and Chief Deputy James Jones.

Suspect in murder turns down bail

by Bert Seaman

When he was brought to the Shelby County Courthouse for arraignment last Wednesday, the 23 year old Shelby County man charged with the murder of a Mountain Brook grocer, said he didn't want bail.

Steve Smith, who grew up near the area where the body of Larry Osborne was found, had been formally charged with the crime the previous day.

Describing the manner in which the young Western Supermarket assistant manager had been killed as heinous, District Attorney William R. Hill Jr. asked that no bond be set.

Osborne had been tied to a tree and beaten to death with a limb.

Appearing without counsel at the bond hearing, Smith was quick to second the DA's request that he be kept in jail.

Although Smith has six brothers and a sister, none of his family was present in the courtroom.

Later, as he talked to the media, the District Attorney called Smith's refusal of bail a "most unusual gesture. In fact," he said, "it's the first time I've ever seen it happen."

Because the murder suspect was unable to afford a lawyer, Judge Robert Armstrong appointed former Jefferson County District Attorney Fred Pickard to represent him.

A preliminary hearing for Smith was set for Dec. 6. Hill said that the case could be tried during the December term of court, but more likely it would be set for spring.

The battered body of the man Smith knew causally during his employment at Western Supermarket was found around noon Nov. 19 by Mountain Brook police.

The wooded area on a dirt road between Calera and Columbiana was near the dairy farm where Smith was born and where he spent much of his boyhood.

S. L. Tolleson Jr., owner of the farm where Smith's father was employed, recalled that the suspect had seemed like a "fine youngster."

"We were shocked when we heard about what had happened," he said.

According to the dairyman, the family moved several times as the elder Smith found employment on other farms.

When the Mountain Brook Supermarket closed at midnight Saturday, the last time that Osborne was seen alive, employees reportedly saw Smith inside the store talking to the assistant manager.

Around 4 a.m. Sunday, Calera policeman Robert Walker saw Smith walking along Hwy. 25 in the direction of Montevallo and gave him a ride.

When he got into the patrol car, Walker reported that Smith wasn't carrying anything. But suspecting that Smith might have discarded the money that was missing from the supermarket's safe along the roadside, police later searched the area without any success.

Montevallo police took the suspect the last leg of his journey. Policeman Jessie Payne related that he left his passenger at the intersection of County Roads 73 and 8.

He continued on foot, Payne said, to the trailer just over the Chilton County line where he lived with his aunt Daisy Lucas and her son Curtis.

Having been fired from his job at the Western Supermarket in Alabaster in August, Smith was unemployeed and he had also been through a recent divorce.

While he was in the two police cars, neither officer remembered anything unusual about Smith's appearance or the way he acted.

After he was arrested, police found some of his clothes alongside the road near the trailer, some of them containing bloodstains.

Mountain Brook police began their search for Osborne when he was reported missing Sunday morning when the store opened. One source gave the amount that had been taken from the safe as $8,000.

A spokesman for Western Supermarkets reports that a $500 reward is being offered to anyone having information that will lead to the recovery of the stolen money.

During their questioning of Smith, Mountain Brook police changed his status from witness to suspect and he spent Monday night in the Mountain Brook jail. The next day a warrant was sworn out charging him with murder and he was transferred to the Shelby County jail.

Mountain Brook Police Chief John Haley reported that information obtained from Smith and other facts gathered during the investigation led to the discovery of Osborne's body. The murdered man's car was found three miles away at the Clara Neal Motel in Calera.

When Shelby County Coroner Billy Thompson examined the victim's body at Cooper Green Hospital, he set the time of death at approximately 3 a.m. Sunday.

The day before had been Osborne's 20th birthday. His place of residence was listed as 3307 Ridge Manor Drive. For a short while during his high school years, he had lived with his grandmother in Pelham.

High speed chase starts in Pelham

by David Moore

Three Decatur youths in a stolen pickup truck led a dozen patrol cars from Alabaster to Homewood on a high speed chase early Sunday morning.

In the process they ran several road blocks, smashed two patrol cars and the stolen pickup they were driving, and apparently attempted to run down three police officers.

Shortly before 4:30 a.m. Sunday, Pelham PD officer Virgil Rice spotted a new red Chevrolet pickup pulling up in back of a cleaners at the Chandalar convenience center. As Rice moved to investigate, the pickup took off, heading south down the highway at a high rate of speed.

"I was running full out trying to catch them," Rice told the Reporter. "What they were doing (speed) is hard to say. I was running about 115 miles per hour."

The pickup turned into Pelham Industrial Park and smashed twice into a fence at the road's dead end. Rice pulled into a parking lot there and started to get out when he saw the truck come straight for him.

It smashed into the left front of Rice's patrol car, backed away and started in for a second hit, but changed course, sped back to the highway and headed south.

Rice took out after the pickup. In police radio jargon it's called a 10-100--hot pursuit.

The pickup spun out in front of Car World, but continued down U.S. 31 in the northbound lane.

Alabaster police units attempted a road block near Sherman Holland Ford, but the pickup swerved out of the way, in the process nearly running down an Alabaster officer Road spray flying, the truck then sped north on U.S. 31, now with Rice, two other Pelham units and two units from Alabaster in pursuit. Along the way a sheriff's deputy joined the chase.

According to reports, further attempts at road blocks by Hoover and Vestavia patrol units failed to stop the truck as well.

One Vestavia officer at a road block at the intersection of U.S. 31 and Old Creek Trail was nearly hit by the speeding truck, police said.

Chief deputy James Jones points to the spot in a patch of leaves where the head of murder victim Larry Osborne rested. Osborne's hands were tied to the tree and he had been beaten to death with a limb.

Auto dealer named to hospital board

Ken Terry, Sr. was unanimously elected to serve on the Shelby Memorial Hospital Board by the County Commission Monday.

He will take the place held by Oscar Harris who resigned "because of my wife's health and my age."

Terry was nominated for the position by Commissioner J. E. "Ned" Bearden, and was unanimously praised by the other Commissioners. Chairman Tommy Snowden said "He is a well respected business man. We couldn't find a better hospital board member, I've worked with him on projects and I know how he feels about his community. He always takes an active part."

Harris had served on the hospital board for 11 years. In his letter of resignation he stated reasons why he is against any plan to sell the hospital.

He said that costs at Shelby Memorial are from $30 to 46 per Commission opposes annexation

by Marcia M. Sears

The Shelby County Commission is unanimously opposed to the idea of Riverchase being annexed to the City of Hoover.

At the Monday Commission meeting, Chairman Tommy Snowden said he had talked with the five members of the state legislature who represent parts of Shelby County, and said, "They have heard no opposition."

So Snowden asked that the Commission go on record opposing the plan. Snowden said that if Riverchase votes to become part of Hoover, the boundary lines of Shelby County may later be changed, putting Riverchase into Jefferson County.

The Commissioners do not want to see Shelby County losing territory, and feel strongly that Shelby County is such a desirable place to live that in the long run the Riverchase residents would be much better off to remain a part of Shelby County.

Commissioner Harold Davenport made the motion to oppose the annexation of Riverchase and his motion met unanimous agreement.

Davenport said, "I don't see the point. There are people in Hoover who are opposed, but they won't get to vote."

Authorization of a vote must be made by the state legislature, and moves are well underway to introduce such legislation. According to reports, Representative J. T. "Jabo" Waggoner has agreed to do it.

Only the residents of Riverchase would vote on the question.

There was general concensus in the County Commission that the developers of Riverchase "just want to pass on their sewer debt to Hoover." Hoover has agreed to take on Riverchase's $3 million sewer debt, one Commissioner said.

Under the annexation, Hoover would assume responsibility for providing sewerage and other city services.

Riverchase was planned by the Harbert Construction Co. and the Equitable Life Assurance Society of America as a complete planned community, with business, industry, churches, schools, health care facilities and various types of housing. Most of the homes and apartments were planned for the Shelby County side of the Cahaba River and most of the businesses are on the Jefferson County side.

Problems developed over the sewerage system when laws were changed that required stiffer sewerage treatment than those originally approved.

Shelby county worked with the developers on water and sewerage treatment plans, but various environmental and financing factors complicated the entire issue.

Because of the fact that residential property owners do not pay as high a percentage of taxes as business and industrial users, but require more services, Shelby County has been placed in a difficult financial situation to serve all the new residents. In addition, changes in the law requiring Riverchase to have 'tertiary' instead of the less expensive 'secondary' treatment of sewage have ballooned costs for the developers.

For a number of years, Scott served as Chairman of the Board of Directors of Shelby Memorial Hospital. He was a partner in an Alabaster lime company, a board member of the First Bank of Alabaster, a member of the Montevallo Rotary Club and he belonged to the Central United Methodist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Caroline B. Scott; three sons, Albert L. Scott Jr., Atlanta, Ga., William G. Scott, Gretna, La., Robert W. Scott, Paxton, Ill.; two daughters, Mrs. John B. Walters III, Orange Park, Fl., Mrs. Charles F. Jones, Birmingham.

Other survivors are one brother, Victor Scott, Montevallo; two sisters, Mrs. W. M. Farris, Alabaster, Mrs. Pauline Towery, Montevallo.

Funeral services were held Nov. 23 at Central United Methodist Church with Rev. Tom Hammons officiating. Burial was in Nabors Cemetery.

Stiff bond set in abuse case

District Judge Robert Armstrong set a $50,000 bond last Monday for an Alabaster man charged with child abuse.

Twenty one year old Phillip Martin was arrested Nov. 17 by Alabaster police for allegedly harming a four year old boy he was looking after while the child's mother was at work.

Noticing signs that indicated her son might have been abused, the mother took him to Shelby Memorial Hospital.

After being released from the hospital, the child was placed in a foster home.

It was called one of the worst cases of abuse he had ever seen by District Attorney William R. Hill Jr.

Pelham Boosters plan Vegas Nite to boost school funds

Saturday night will be a night of wheeling and dealing for Pelham sports fans.

The Pelham Academic Booster Club is holding its second annual Vegas Nite at the Plaza Hotel South in Birmingham.

According to club president Jack Acton, 75 blackjack tables, four crap tables, two chuck-a-luck tables and one wheel of fortune will be set up in the downstairs convention room, and quarter-million pieces of "funny money" will be available to gamble at the casino games.

An auction of TV's, a microwave oven, sporting goods, and mopeds will be held at midnight to give the big winners a chance to cash in their funny money.

According to Acton, some 180 volumteer workers from the Pelham area will be dressed in formal wear and dealer's garb to assist the expected crowd of 700 people.

Acton said that last year Vegas Nite netted $3300 towards books, lab supplies and other academic needs at Pelham High.

Live music, dancing, beverages, snacks, free parking, and fun money are included in the price of admission.

The fun and dealing begins at eight and lasts til the wee hours, Acton said.

Though limited tickets will be available at the door, he suggests that adults wishing to attend the extravaganza contact him at 988-0352, Diane Busby at 988-0212, or Dick Mace at 988-0115.

Many of the door prizes and auction articles were donated by Pelham and Jefferson County merchants, and the event is sponsored by the Vestavia Exchange Club.

Pelham policemen further training

Three Pelham officers recently completed different phases of their police training.

After a month of FBI classes in Selma, Tommy Thomas now holds the distinction of being the only active certified fingerprint identification expert in Shelby County. Thomas can now be used in federal and other courts as an expert witness in fingerprint comparisons.

The classes were sponsored by the state department of safety. Thomas, along with detective Lt. Allan Wade, also attended the month long evidence technician school at Jefferson State University, taught by the Birmingham PD. The two officers attended classes in photography, fingerprint processing, crime scene diagramming and other aspects of investigation.

The classes qualify Thomas and Wade as experts in certain phases of evidence collection, preservation and presentation.

Thomas has since been promoted to Pelham's detective division, joining Lt. Wade.

Officer Mike Brasher recently completed his formal police training at the Law Enforcement Academy in Tuscaloosa. Brasher averaged an overall grade of more than 90 percent on the six-week course.

Two returned to DPS by Commission

Mrs. Emmie Davidson of Helena and Hylott Armstrong of Columbiana were re-appointed to the Board of the Shelby County Department of Pensions and Security.

The County Commission made the appointments last Monday, unanimously praising the work of the two members for their past service to the board.

Clerk certified

Willie Mae Dennis, City Clerk of the City of Pelham, is presented a certificate noting she has attended ten municipal management training institutes for city clerks at the University of Alabama. The presentation was made by Dr. Franklin Blitz, of the Center for Administrative and Policy Studies at UA

Montevallo business shows off expansion

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Rockco were hosts Sunday at the open house and dedication of their expanded funeral home and florist businesses in Montevallo.

Seating capacity in the funeral home chapel has been more than doubled by the new construction project that was recently completed.

The family room now can accommodate about 120 persons, and the general seating area is greatly expanded.

Three additional sitting rooms were added across the front of the building and several other improvements were made. The funeral home is re-decorated throughout with new furniture, draperies and carpets.

Commission miffed with county librarian

Shelby County Librarian Pam Williams came under fire from the Shelby County Commission Monday.

The library came up in the Commissioners' deliberations after they had filled vacancies on the county library board. (See other story)

Commissioner J. Alph Lowe of Vincent said, "While we're on the subject I just want to say I don't appreciate that librarian over there putting an article in the paper (not the Reporter) saying we didn't give enough support to the library."

Commissioner Harold Davenport chimed in, saying he had received three letters on it, one of them complaining that the Commission contributed only 'meager' funds to the library. He said he answered them with "I consider $60,000 more than 'meager'. If we had placed things this county needs in true priorities, 1-2-3-4, I think the library would have come out worse than it did."

Commissioner Jimmy "Jake" Morris of Wilsonville said "I don't think we have anyone on this Commission who's not concerned about the library."

Riverchase

At one time it was reported that the developers wanted to incorporate Riverchase as a separate city, but because it is in two counties, that was not legally possible under Alabama law. They then began negotiations with Hoover, reportedly.

Eighty five year old Josh Gibson has a way with bananas. The Columbiana resident grew a stalk over 40 bananas on it this summer. Here he shows off some of the prize fruit.

Columbiana man grows bumper banana crop

Having the main ingredient for banana pie or pudding on hand was no problem for a Columbiana family last summer.

All that was necessary was to walk outside.

Eighty six year old Josh Gibson, who lives just south of Mt. Dixie, grew a bumper crop of bananas on the stalk he's had out for three years.

According to his son, Columbiana Postmaster Elbert Gibson, there were more than 40 bananas on the tree.

That's the most ever grown on a single stalk in this part of the state, the postmaster reported.

One of the secrets for successful banana growing, Gibson related, is to remove the tree from the ground when the weather gets cold, and take it indoors.

He also noted that takes three years for a tree to bear fruit.

In Spain Park

Observatory takes shape

by David Moore

On a clear Shelby County night the galaxy Andromeda, 2.5 million light years out in deep space, appears to be just another dim star among the heavenly hosts. But with the aid of a 12.5-inch reflecting telescope the spiraling galaxy, turned on its edge, suddenly bursts into a cold, dazzling array of starry brillance.

But first you need a telescope. And second you need a clear place to use it, away from the lights and pollution of the city.

This is the reason the Birmingham Astronomical Society has chosen Spain Park on Valleydale Road as the site for the club's new observatory.

Working with donations and money they raised, the astronomy club has to date, built the foundation and walls of their 16x20-foot observatory on the hill behind Spain Park's greenhouse, according to former club president Conrad Kussner.

Kussner said that the club has a 12.5-inch reflecting telescope (the diameter of the reflector), eight feet long which they will permanently mount in the observatory sometime, he hopes, before January. The club will also house an eight-inch reflecting telescope in the Shelby County facility.

According to Kussner, the main phase of construction left to be finished on the building is the lift-off, fold-back roof which will allow visual access to the night sky.

A second planned building is ready to have its foundation poured, he said, noting that it would be used as a photography darkroom, and possibly to house computer equipment in the future.

Kussner noted that the observatory is being built to aid the club in "deep sky" research, and although it will be used primarily for that purpose, the observatory would be available on a limited basis to other groups such as college classes and scouts.

Though some controversy has arisen over the club's use of Spain Park for the location of their facilities, Kussner said, "We have an understanding with the (Birmingham) park and recreation board." He indicated that there were no legal problems and the club's activities had the sanction of Spain family which donated the land to the city.

Spain Park is used as the Birmingham Park Board's nursery and has been in operation some eleven years, according to a park spokesman.

The president of the 50-60 member Birmingham Astronomical Society, Dr. David Davidson, was unavailable for comment.

The park has been used for four or five years as a location for local astronomers to set up portable telescopes.

"We're doing this (the observatory) all on our own," explained Kussner. "Whatever we can scrape up will help."

He suggested that anyone interested in helping the society with the observatory contact Dr. David ... on at 934-6150.

Two new members join library board

The Shelby County Commission accepted without question the nominations for membership on the County Library Board that were made by the Board Monday.

Reappointed to serve were Mrs. Karl Harrison of Columbiana and Mrs. Albert Scott of Montevallo.

New appointees were Thelma Walker and Mrs. Sybil Dearing of Helena. No one on the Commission knew Thelma Walker, but agreed to appoint her to the board because she was recommended by the other members of the Library Board.

It was later learned that Ms. Walker is from the Cahaba Valley area.

She and Mrs. Dearing will take the places created when the terms of Mrs. Emmie Davidson of Helena and Mrs. T. D. Harper of Alabaster expired. They did not seek re-appointment.

The terms are for a period of four years.

Appraiser named by county tax assessor

Steve Hager was recently named to the newly created position of Appraiser for Shelby County by Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds.

The position was authorized, at a salary of $16,000, by the Shelby County Commission.

Hager began his work immediately following the authorization, three weeks ago.

Hager holds a Bachelor's degree from Western Carolina University. He worked with the PRC Jacobs Company in Shelby County for about two and a half months during the hearings that the company held last year.

He has previous experience in property appraisal and has been approved as an appraiser by the State of Alabama Department of Revenue.

His work in Shelby County will consist of coordinating all the appraisal work that has recently been completed, and of keeping county ad valorem records up to date.

In federal funds

County schools get only 6%

Shelby County's schools receive the lowest level of federal funding of any county system in the state, and local funding is also well below average, Montevallo Rotarians were told last Thursday night.

Dr. Richard McBride spoke at the meeting on the subject of problems in education.

A breakdown of revenue sources for Alabama School systems in 1977-78 revealed that of the $12,252,967 received by the Shelby County school system in that year, only 6 percent came from federal funds.

This figure was as low as or lower than any other county in the state, and was higher than only two city systems, those of Mountain Brook and Vestavia Hills.

Local money raised for Shelby County schools, at $2 million, or 16 percent of the total, was also below the state average of 21 percent, he said.

In the third major area of school funding, state revenue, Shelby County took in 78 percent of its budget, higher than the state average of 66 percent.

McBride, a longtime educator and former state representative from Jefferson County, has been in Montgomery with the State Department of Education for the past two years.

Stressing the capital importance of finances to education, McBride distributed a number of statistical information sheets prepared by the Education Department's division of research and information service, which he heads.

Several of these analyzed the Special Education Trust Fund, with its 22 sources of income, including 14 different taxes.

The fund totalled $1,184,799,050 in 1978-9, with projections varying from $1,366,000,000 to $1,378,000,000 for 1980-1. About $4 million is spent yearly to collect the fund.

Disbursements (appropriations) included $5,368,554 for the University of Montevallo last year, plus a conditional appropriation of $400,000 that was wiped out by proration. At Gov. James' request, the UM budget request for the present year is the same as last year's.

Another item of interest to educators was a summary of the exemption-caused losses in revenue of the state sales and use tax, which goes mainly to the education trust fund.

The tax's 68 loopholes let $285,756,121 gush out of the treasury annually. Exempting food and drugs, as Gov. James has proposed, would almost double that.

Of the present exemptions, three auto-related ones (a 1½% rate on new car sales instead of 4%; a break on trading in used cars; and a total exemption for gas and oil) account for well over half the revenue loss.

One sheet illustrated the high cost of today's fringe benefits by breaking down the state's cost of hiring a teacher for a year.

The average teacher's salary in Alabama is $12,567.55, but when sick leave, personal leave, insurance, funds to replace fees, social security, retirement, unemployment compensation, and other expenses are added, the state winds up paying $18,309.65 for the nine months of instruction.

McBride announced that the state education department was working to raise local education funding levels across the state, a goal recently supported by UM president James Vickrey in testimony before a legislative committee.

State money was originally intended to provide only a minimum program, when the present system was enacted in 1935, McBride said, but many local systems lacked the will power to tax themselves and rise above the minimum.

Two other problem areas besides money that McBride addressed were the issue of union control of education, and teacher competency.

On the first, McBride took a conservative stand and decried the weighty influence of the AEA, with its 41 registered lobbyists and $16,000 political contribution for a single state board of education seat in 1978 that didn't pay that much in four years of salary.

Even scarier is the national parent of the AEA, the NEA, said McBride. Larger than either the teamsters or the auto workers, the NEA is the only union with its own cabinet position, and has as its goal a federal takeover of the present state-based educational system, he said.

On the second issue of teacher competency, McBride endorsed the liberal view that the system as a whole is responsible for classroom failures, including lack of supervision by local school systems, mediocre teacher training schools, and perhaps too lax licensing requirements of the state board of education.

McBride took no stand on competency testing, but said that strengthening the office of principal, which presently has no legal standing, would go a long way toward changing the present "convenience-oriented" decision making toward a "student-oriented" system.

Montevallo Rotary meets again on 29 November, to hear Dr. Joseph Jackson, headmaster of Indian Springs School, express his views on private education.

Letter of appreciation

SCHS coach gets praise from loyal supporters

There are times in our lives when we need to stop, sit back, and take a long realistic look at what is happening in our lives. This is surely one of those times.

Here we are at the end of another football season with more losses than wins, which is not unusual according to our recent history. An outsider might look at our record and feel real sorry for us. But we, the undersigned, do not - only because we still have you, Mark Bradley, and your most capable assistants, Don Pouncey and Bill Reid.

A year and three months ago, when you first came to Shelby County High School, you brought new hope to our community. We wanted a winning season as badly as you did. But we now realize that it takes time and work and more work to build a winning team. Some of those who praised you so highly in the beginning of the season were not so kind at the end.

Take heart - Coach Bradley, all is not lost! We are still excited about you and what you are trying to build at SCHS. We know the principles that you stand behind and appreciate the fact that you are building not only football players, but men with real character. How few there are left these days!

At this time, we want you to know that you have our full support and our heartfelt thanks for the total person that you are. It would be so wonderful if you could have the support of the whole community, and not just a few "old faithfuls"!

With love and hope for the future,

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana a member of the FDIC.

Things to be thankful for: That I grew up in a neighborhood, in a big house on a high hill, where Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Teague and Mrs. Wallace and Aunt Annie Bird and Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Longshore and Granny and Pennie lived.

That He let me be a ball player, and a pretty good one, so that I had fellowship with guys like Mollie Brasher and Red Amos and Dunk and Louie Wilson and Red Mahan and Tag Elliott and Cecil Shaw and Jack Stone and Prof. Ballenger and dozens of others too numerous to mention here.

Three years at the old Newala School, teaching kids who were so well behaved that a guy, fifty years later, is amazed that they were such splendid kids.

A lady named Clarice White Luck who, in her splendid fashion, kept me writing when the going was tough.

That day on the campus at the University of Alabama when I asked this man my way. A man who turned out to be Hudson Strode, the famous professor of creative writing, who would help me to get myself straightened out in this writing business.

The first week in December, when I visit the finest folks I know, getting money so a lot of little folks will have Santa Claus, who wouldn't have had it otherwise.

For a bird dog named Gal that belonged to Hubert Sheffield and another named Bonnie that belonged to Leon Kelly and another named Queen that belonged to Bub Gordon. They knew more about hunting bobwhites than I did, but they put up with me, and I had a thousand happy days because of it.

And another bird dog named Dan that belonged to Skillet Bird. He taught me that perfection was an art, and that it didn't come to folks only, but it came along to animals too.

Over twenty years of swapping candy kisses to little folks for smiles and big talk at the P.O. Little folks who are big folks now, with little folks of their own.

For a talent to put words down for other folks to read, and sense enough to realize that it is one percent talent and ninety-nine percent work.

And for all the folks who read it, week after week, I hope there will always be something besides ugliness in it, in a world that knows so much that is ugly.

And for The First National Bank who made the whole thing possible.

For being able to get up in the morning for 72 years, and to get my clothes on and to get outside, where the flowers bloom and the birds sing and folks look good enough to eat.

Scrambled Eggs by bert seaman

There was a valuable lesson to be learned from a frustrating experience that happened to me one day last week.

I hope I learned it well because it almost cost me a picture.

Hopefully, in the future, I will stay at my post no matter how long it takes for the subject to arrive.

My almost fatal mistake, (picture-wise, that is), was to leave the area I had staked out at the courthouse to get a picture of a subject that was arriving under police escort.

Even when you have a valid reason for leaving, it doesn't count. I went to get a cup of coffee and a longer lens when I learned the subject wouldn't be arriving for another twenty minutes.

I had already been standing there for thirty minutes, but no matter, I shouldn't have left.

After leisurely sipping my coffee, I went back to the Courthouse to see if I could find a place to stash my big, bulky lens until I needed it.

During my earlier vigil at the site of the hearing, I had learned media representatives would be consigned to the rear of the courtroom and I figured I would need the lens to get a picture of what was going on up front.

With my initial pictures, I thought I would do better with my regular lens, which I'm able to handle better.

Well, the occupant of the office near the courtroom where I'd planned to leave the lens turned down my request. So I trudged downstairs again, carrying my camera with flash in one hand and the lens, notebook and pen in the other.

Before I had time to decide how to juggle everything, I caught a glimpse through the glass outside door of a striped shirt I had earlier seen an investigator wearing.

I was horrified - I couldn't believe it. After fooling around so long to get ready, my subjects were coming and I was unprepared.

My main problem was my flash - it takes a while to warm up. In critical situations, it seems as though it takes forever.

Anyway, as I hurriedly threw my switch, the subject I was trying to photograph, surrounded by a cordon of law enforcement people, came bursting through the door.

They literally raced down the hall, and I backpedaled along in front of them, hoping the red light on my flash would come on before we reached the end of the hallway.

What I did with my long lens and notebook, I don't remember.

Fortunately, my light came on at the last possible second and I snapped my picture as they rushed on past.

But until the film was developed, I had a sneaking suspicion that one of the investigators had stepped in front of my subject just as the shutter clicked.

It reminded me of a football game. I'd wait for the ball carrier to get in just the right position, and just as I'd take the picture, the referee would step in front of me. I have some nice pictures of striped backs.

Anyhow, this time I lucked up and managed to get my man without someone in front of him.

I was all fumble fingers in the courtroom though. I wasn't too successful in trying to change lenses and take notes at the same time.

In fact, it was even difficult to hear what was going on in the front of the room as no one was making much of an effort to talk above a whisper.

Since I hadn't used my zoom lens in a while, I got hold of the wrong ring when I tried to focus and I just bombed out. I wish I had just left the darn thing at the office.

So when all was said and done, I did have one useable picture from the hallway. But all would have gone more smoothly if I had just remained in place with my flash unit on and my focus set.

Next time, I assure you, I will not budge, no matter how long the delay!

Trial courts will not ask for budget increase

Alabama Chief Justice C.C. Torbert, Jr., said today that the state's trial court system can operate on its current level of funding and he will not ask the legislature to increase the 1980-81 budget for the trial courts above that level.

Torbert said that improved accountability of budgetary spending through the new expense accounting system developed by the Administrative Office of Courts coupled with increased savings in the area of jury management by trial judges and clerks of court will enable the system to hold the line on any budget increase for the 1980-1981 fiscal year.

"Because of savings within the system, we will be able to absorb the impact of inflation and rising caseloads on our budget without asking for more funds," the chief justice said.

The current annual funding level for state trial courts is $30.4 million, which includes the full amount for legislatively-enacted cost-of-living raises. "If the conditional cost-of-living raise for employees turns out to be less than seven percent, our budget will be reduced by whatever that amount turns out to be," Torbert added.

Torbert said the system's budget has been submitted for inclusion in the general fund budget which will be presented to the legislature in February.

Zoning change denied

A parcel of land adjacent to Montevallo's Hidden Valley subdivision will remain zoned for agriculture.

The decision not to rezone the land to a residential area was made Monday night during a regular meeting of the Montevallo city council. The decision came when a motion made by Councilman Herb Millstead to rezone the area died for a lack of a second.

The proposal to rezone has been discussed for more than a year. Earlier this fall the city's planning commission recommended that the area be rezoned to permit the owner to develop the property into a subdivision containing apartments and multiple family dwellings.

When present residents of Hidden Valley attended a public hearing on the proposal they objected to the change on the grounds that the change would possibly result in water run-off on their respective lots.

Council members twice postponed a vote on the recommendation from the planning commission. The postponement was designed to give time for discussions between the residents of Hidden Valley and the owner of the land in question, William Surface.

All of the residents of Hidden Valley were present at Monday night's meeting. They were accompanied by an attorney, William Swatek of Pelham.

When Mayor Ralph Sears was satisfied that all parties had an opportunity to express themselves he called for a vote on the recommendation of the planning commission. The motion to rezone, by Millstead, failed to gain a second. The motion failed and the land in question remains zoned for agriculture.

In other business brought before the council, the city's fire inspector, Jeff Payne reported that he had inspected the schools and found numerous violations of the fire safety code. The county superindendent of schools and each of the principals involved have been notified of the needed corrections. All parties agreed to full cooperation in correcting violations.

Council members opened bids for a new police car for the city. Bids were received from all new car dealerships in Shelby County.

Council members awarded the contract for a new police vehicle to the low bidder, Leach Pontiac-GMC of Montevallo. The low bid was $6,005.53. Other bidders include Ken Terry Chevrolet, Pelham; Sherman Holland Ford and Car World, Alabaster; and Bill Strickland Chevrolet, Columbiana.

Streets Committee chairman Millstead reported to councilmen that vandals are ruining the covered bridge that leads to Hidden Valley. Millstead said vandals apparently stand on the bridge and kick the sides into the stream below. He also reported that traffic on the bridge frequently travels at a high rate of speed, producing dangerous conditions on the bridge itself and on the approaches to the bridge. Council members authorized City Clerk Don Hughes to install speed breakers on the approaches and to erect signs warning of the breakers and the bridge.

In other action, the resignation of Jim Seaman as chairman of the city's water board was accepted with regret. The long time chairman of the utility recently moved his residence outside the city limits.

Councilmen nominated Phillip Lacey to fill the vacancy.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

"The Question of Inherited Sin"

A prevailent doctrine in the religious world today teaches that each person inherits the sins of his parents. This doctrine also teaches that a child is totally depraved and is wholly inclined to do evil. One scripture used to defend this doctrine is Psalm 51:5. Such use is a gross misapplication of this verse. The verse states, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me."

First, notice that this verse does not discuss David's birth at all. It discusses "conception"—not "birth." The above false doctrine would demand that the verse say "birth."

Second, this verse speaks of some time in David's ancestry when an adulterous relationship brought about a conception. This was of great significance to the Jew, for Deuteronomy 23:2 states, "An illegitimate child shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord; even to his tenth generation of the Lord." Thus, no descendent of one thus conceived could enter into the assembly of Jehovah.

Third, David was very aware of this regulation, because an incident of sexual immorality was in his ancestry. Genesis 38 tells of an incestuous relationship between Judah and his daughter-in-law Tamar. David was a descendent of Phares, who was then conceived.

Fourth, Matthew 1:3-6 details the genealogy from Judah to David through Phares. They are as follows: Phares-Esrom-Aram-Aminadab-Naason-Salmon-Boaz-Obed-Jesse-David. Please notice that none of the ancestors of David could enter into the assembly. David, the tenth generation, was the first one who could enter the assembly. No wonder he stated, "I was glad, when they said, Let us go up to the house of Jehovah." Thus, David was very much aware of his mother Tamar's having conceived one of his ancestors in sin. This is the meaning of Psalm 51:5. An attempt to defend a doctrine of man has dictated that this verse be misapplied, to uphold an unscriptural position.

Speedway gets new surface

Alabama International Motor Speedway will have a new look in 1980. The world's fastest speedway has been completely resurfaced since the Talladega 500 in August. In this photo, workmen lay down a fresh coat of asphalt in the number two turn at the 2.66-mile track. The 33-degree banked turns at Talladega are five stories tall.

Report shows 300,000 visited Oak Mountain during past year

Oak Mountain State Park entertained 300,000 visitors during the fiscal year ended September 30.

A report on the park's annual statistics was made public by Park Superintendent John Meredith in a letter to the Shelby County Commission Monday.

Meredith told the Commissioners he appreciated the cooperation the state has had from Shelby County in operating the park.

In his report he indicated 85 percent of the visitors were from Jefferson County; 10 percent were from Shelby County and the remaining 5 percent were from other areas.

It cost $901,000 to operate the park during the year, and the park took in only $669,000 in receipts from fees at the entrance, at the golf course, from rentals of boats and assorted other fees.

Meredith said that 60 percent of the costs were spent on salaries and related costs. There were 37 fulltime employees, 35 part time and seasonal employees, and 15 in the Young Adult Conservation Corps.

Meredith indicated that almost all of the money spent in operating the park went to Shelby County individuals and businesses.

New board member talks up county

The newest member of the Board of Directors of Shelby Memorial Hospital, Kenneth L. Terry, Sr., has lived in Shelby County since 1966 when he came to Montevallo to take over the Chevrolet franchise.

He had previously been Southeast Regional Merchandising Manager for Chevrolet in Atlanta.

From 1966 to 1971 he operated the dealership in Montevallo, and then moved the dealership to its present site in Pelham.

He and his wife, Claire, now live in the Inverness section of Shelby County and plan to live there permanently.

They have four children: Lynn Danner, of Toms River, N.J.; Ken Terry, Jr., Inverness; Susan Holsombeck, a graduate of the University of Montevallo, Alabaster; and Scott Terry, a student at UM.

Terry stated, "I can't think of a better place to live, work and conduct a business than Shelby County. While we and the County have had, and will have, some growing pains, I am sure that the fine people already here and those joining us will make Shelby County, not only the greatest County in Alabama but the best in the Southeast."

County high schools exhibit at art show

The work of Pelham and Thompson High School students is among the exhibits at the Youth Art Show in Birmingham.

Oils, drawings, sculpture and collages have been done by these students and others in the Birmingham area.

They are on display at the Birmingham Public Library on the 3rd and 4th floors.

"We're celebrating the International Year of the Child," remarked Grace Hayes Davis, who for the sixth year, has arranged the exhibit.

Another Shelby County artist participating in the show is Jeff Todhunter of Pelham who attends the School of Fine Arts at Birmingham Southern College.

New fireplace inserts increase heat tremendously according to testing

by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Millions of homeowners are installing wood-burning heating systems, so why shouldn't those persons owning or planning to build cabins?

Older dwellings in the backwoods or along a lake front are already equipped with the old fireplace. Most of the modern modest abodes in far back places are electrically warmed or are gas or fuel oil heating. A fireplace may be present but just for show. I'm turned off with any fireplace anywhere that has piped-in gas burning blue flames under artificial logs. That's the height of sophisticated vanity.

With the energy crunch beginning with the 1973-74 oil embargo, there's been a turn-around in the acceptance of wood-burning stoves, fireplace inserts, even central heating furnaces. There has been a 15 percent increase annually since 1974 in use of wood as a fuel. Between 1972 and 1977 numbers of wood burning stoves in use has increased from 250,000 to 2,000,000. One-fifth of homes in northern New England rely on wood as their primary heat source and 30 percent more use of wood as a supplemental source.

Seeing the upsurge in wood fuel use, I recently visited the Auburn University Woodburning Laboratory, which is the largest research unit in the nation experimenting with wood-burning fuel systems. Tom Pruitt, assistant manager, was helpful in giving information I want to pass on to you readers thinking about installing wood-burning systems in hunting lodges or camphouses.

"Old-fashioned fireplaces most of us know about," Tom pointed out, "burn wood with only three to 10 percent efficiency."

Imagine! For every 100 Btu's in wood, 90 to 97 go up the chimney instead of heating a room or cabin!

"But," Tom continued, "Some of the newer stoves on the market are burning wood with a 40 percent heating efficiency. The zero-clearance fireplace insert in an old fireplace may get 25 to 30 percent heating efficiency."

"This type of fireplace insert is so well insulated, you can place your hand on the wall and feel only a slight warmth. The heat is absorbed by the circulating air heated by the burning wood. Of course, this lessens fire hazards in an old chimney."

Incidentally, I discussed the "old chimney" situation with Pruitt and also with John Berardi, part owner and manager of Hearth Warmers, Opelika, Ala., a store that deals with sale and installation of wood burning systems. Both men said it's absolutely imperative the old chimney be scrubbed out by a chimney sweep, now readily available in many large towns in the state. And I once thought chimney sweeps existed only in the novels of Charles Dickens!

I also learned that where fire danger might be a factor in an old chimney, the lodge owner can install from a heater placed on the old fireplace hearth insulated flue pipe. If the chimney is solid and sound, regular sheet metal flue pipe can be used. After winter is gone, the lodge owner will simply have to clear out the flue with a special brush. While I was discussing wood heating problems with Berardi, a shipment of fireplace inserts was being unloaded. The particular brand had been tested by Energy Systems, Inc., a private firm testing wood-burning equipment for commercial firms. This particular model of fireplace insert produces 44,000 Btu's per hour in burning 8± pounds of wood at low "speed." The average burn rate of 11.4 lbs. wood per hour produces 53,571 Btu's per hour. Pushing the wood burning rate to 17.6 lbs. wood per hour produced almost 81,000 Btu's. Most amazing is the heating efficiency. The low burn rate registered more than 61 percent; the average, 5516 and the high range, 54.6! Remember, these statistics are produced under controlled laboratory conditions, but they are still a far cry from three to 10 percent!

Other interesting features of newly developed wood-burning stoves, fireplaces, etc. are that they need be fired only at long intervals, in some cases only two or three times daily. Burning is so complete that ashes have to be removed only every three or four days.

If our forefathers had had available these statistics and research and scientifically manufactured equipment, many more millions of us today might not be facing a fuel shortage!

Keep alert to the poisons of the winter season

Children's Hospital Poison Information Center alerts you to winter season poisons. Remember to keep children away from them.

ANTIFREEZE, used in car radiators, is 90-95 percent ethylene glycol. Small amounts can cause severe illness and even death. Unfortunately this highly poisonous cold weather product has a sweet taste and is attractive and palatable to children.

If you use antifreeze at home, please store it behind a locked cabinet and in its original container with a child proof cap. If you discard any remaining antifreeze, rinse the empty container with water, place the safety cap back on the container and place it in the garbage.

DE-ICERS, used to de-freeze car windshields, generally contain methanol. Methanol is the alcohol capable of causing blindness. Follow the same storage instructions as mentioned with antifreeze.

CARBON MONOXIDE is a non-irritating, colorless, and odorless gas that may leak into the car when the muffler fails. In the wintertime when car windows are closed and the muffler system on the car is faulty, carbon monoxide gas may leak into the car. Small children in the backseat may be the first affected as the fumes escape into the car.

Possible signs or symptoms of exposure to this poisonous gas may be headache pain, nausea, vomiting or sleepiness. If these symptoms occur while riding in the car, immediately seek fresh air, have the car exhaust system checked; consult your physician or hospital if vomiting and sleepiness have occurred.

While you're having the car tuned for the winter, have the exhaust system checked.

FEMALE BLACK WIDOW SPIDERS have a red hour glass marking on the abdomen.

If you believe someone has been bitten by a Black Widow Spider, clean the bite area well with soap and water, then call the poison center or your private physician.

BERRIES from various houseplants and bushes in the yard can be highly poisonous. It is very important that we know the botanical name as well as the common name of all plants and bushes in or near our homes. The poison center can offer the best information concerning plant ingestions only when the correct names of these plants are known.

INSECTICIDES are now being stored for the winter so store them safely.

RODENTICIDES are now being placed in various areas inside and outside the home as rats and mice are searching for warmer areas to live. Be familiar with the brands that you personally use. If a professional pest control service places various baits around your home, have the technician give you the names of the baits he uses.

Most of these poisonous baits have the appearance of food and many are flavored with beef and fish. This makes them attractive and quite palatable to curious children exploring throughout the household where the baits may be placed.

Hospital

day less than at Birmingham hospitals, which results in considerable savings to local residents. He also noted that the hospital's money is placed in 8 county banks, which helps the economy, but if the hospital were sold, the money would doubtless go to Birmingham banks.

He added that indigent care amounted to $900,000 last year and that no one was turned away because of inability to pay. He questioned that a private corporation would allow this.

Chase

By now, two units apiece from Vestavia and Hoover had joined the chase after the red pickup. As the truck entered Homewood, two units from that city joined the race, too.

Still northbound, the pickup entered the Red Mountain Expressway in the southbound lane, pursued by a dozen flashing patrol cars.

While attempting to turn off the expressway on the Mountain Brook, Hwy. 280 exit, the pickup lost control and spun out again. Within seconds the patrol cars boxed in the vehicle.

But the driver of the pickup was not quite ready to throw in the towel, and in an apparent last-ditch effort rammed a Vestavia police car.

The driver of the truck, Charles Cox, Jr., 18, of Decatur, was arrested and charged with assault on an officer with a deadly weapon, and buying, selling and concealing stolen property.

Two juveniles in the truck with Cox, also from Decatur, were charged with the same offenses.

The arresting officers were Virgil Rice, Tim Whittaker and Jack McKerley, all of the Pelham PD.

The pickup was reported stolen from a Decatur dealer and further charges may be pending from that city.

Damage to the two patrol cars was estimated to be about $2000.

The three youths had stocked the pickup with a case of beer and were allegedly enroute to Texas before the chase began.

Holiday saves UM money

Faculty and staff at the University of Montevallo will have a three week holiday during the Christmas season.

Vacation will extend from Monday, Dec. 17 to Monday, January 7.

Approximately $3,000 a day is saved when the central steam-heating plant is shut down, according to university sources, and most buildings on the campus will be unheated during the vacation period.

Mrs. Philip Hubbard
former Miss Kathy McClure

McClure-Hubbard wed in candlelight rites

Miss Kathy McClure, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Porter L. McClure, Utica, Kentucky, was united in marriage to Dr. Philip C. Hubbard, son of Dr. Leslie H. Hubbard, and the late Mrs. Gene Lewis Hubbard of Montevallo, in a candlelight ceremony at the Hartford United Methodist Church, Hartford, Kentucky, on November 3, at 6:30 p.m. Dean Gray, of Hartford, officiated.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned of organza, designed on Victorian lines. Lace formed the standing collar and detailed the bodice styled with full bishop sleeves. The full circular skirt swept into a chapel train. A lace cap secured her fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of teal blue silk camellias and navy silk roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Teresa Evans, Hartford. She wore a floor length gown of teal blue qiana and carried a bouquet of silk flowers in shades of teal and navy blue.

Flower girl was Miss Cindy Adkins, Utica, Kentucky, niece of the bride. Her dress of teal blue qiana was covered with a white lace pinafore.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. McClure chose a dress of darker blue and wore a white silk orchid corsage.

Dr. Leslie H. Hubbard served his son as best man. Ushers were Kenneth McClure, Owensboro, Kentucky, brother of the bride, and Dr. Coy St. Clair, Dundee, Kentucky. Ring bearer was Chris McClure, Owensboro, nephew of the bride.

Mrs. Gale McClure, Owensboro, sister-in-law of the bride, attended the guest register and Mrs. Gail Adkins, Utica, sister of the bride, presented the wedding party with thieir flowers.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the chuch social hall. Serving were Miss Alice Baxley and Miss Jacqueline Henry, both of Hartford, and Mrs. Nora Lee of Tuscaloosa, sister of the groom.

Out of town gusts were Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Lee, Tuscaloosa, Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Givhan, Mr. and Mrs. Lance Hubbard, and Mrs. Phillip E. Lacey, all of Montevallo, and Dr. Ellen Surber Hendersonville, Tennessee.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the couple is at home in Hartford.

Man of many hats

When Bob Dorsey, the chef at Columbiana Middle School wears his hat, students know what they'll be having for lunch that day. Here Dorsey wears his pizza hat. Another chapeau denotes fish day and still another gives away the fact that hamburger will be on the menu. Besides the special hat that Dorsey came up with for Halloween, he also has one other piece of headgear that he wears when chili is being served.

Conservation office refuses to pay rent

The State Conservation Department has written the Shelby County Commission that it will not pay the $279 annual rent that the county has asked it to pay for office space.

The Conservation Department now occupies a small office of 62 square feet in the Food Stamp building.

The Commissioners asked Chairman Tommy Snowden to write a letter to the Conservation Department officials in Montgomery and ask them to reconsider.

Many people in Shelby County are preparing for the winter by cutting wood for their fireplaces and wood burning stoves. If you are planning to cut your own wood with a chainsaw, remember these safety tips.

Always put the saw on the ground and brace it by putting your foot on the handle before pulling the starter cord. Never hold it in one hand and snatch the cord with the other-- a lot of accidents happen this way.

When cutting wood, the saw blade may hit a knot or rough spot and kickback. Many injuries to face and legs occur each year because of kickbacks from chainsaws. Watch what you are doing and be careful to help reduce risk of injury when using your chainsaw.

Thompson Vikings win state championship

Viking cheerleaders are winning squad, too

The Viking football team wasn't the only winner this season at Thompson. The cheerleader squad made an excellent showing, too.

During the season the cheerleader squad competed in two exhibitions held in Birmingham, capturing the Spirit Award, the highest award given at the shows.

In a later competition, held at Birmingham's Lawson Field and judged by the North Alabama Cheerleaders and the National Cheerleaders Association, the Viking cheerleaders won first place.

On Thanksgiving the squad traveled to Atlanta with the Vikings for the Six Flags Holiday Bowl and Cheerleading Competition. The Thompson girls were awarded second place in that competition.

The cheerleaders chose Dee Dee Horton to participate in the individual competition and she, too, placed second out of the field of competitors.

The Viking cheerleaders were coached by Tonya Wood and sponsored by Jane Wood. Mary Jones was director of cheerleaders for the youth league.

Vikings drop bowl game for ll-l season

The champs got beat. But it was close and they have nothing to be ashamed of.

The 115-pound Thompson Vikings, after going 10-0 on the season and capturing the Alabama Youth Football League championship, finally got a taste of defeat. Playing in Atlanta at the Six Flags Holiday Bowl on Thanksgiving Day, the Vikings were defeated by the North Clayton, Georgia War Eagles. The score was 22-20.

But the team pulled itself together to defeat a Fort Lauderdale, Florida team by a score of 30-8. The game was played Saturday in the rain in Atlanta.

Kevin Haynes, Jimmy Curl, Chuckie Dover, Curtis Ware, Preston Hansford, David Pryor, Glenn Rickard, Chuck Hedrick, Darron Pickett, Mike Oglesby, Stanley Ledford, Glen Martin, Kieth Carter, Mike Stuart, Alfred Pickett, Dana Washinton.

Pete Jones coached the Vikings to their 11-1 season with the assistance of Johnny Cobb, Tommy Holbrook, and Ron Russell.

Many local individuals and businesses donated time and money to make the Vikings' trip to Atlanta possible.

As buzzer sounds

Shelby Academy wins thriller

Shelby Academy defeated Burney Point just as the buzzer sounded in a thriller of a basketball game last Friday.

It was the first game of the March of Dimes Exhibition, sponsored by the University of Montevallo at Pelham High School.

Shelby Academy was trailing 55-56 as the game drew to an end.

With 15 seconds left, the score bounced up to 57-58. Then with six seconds left, Terry Crabb connected with a long shot just as the buzzer sounded, pushing over the final score one point in Shelby Academy's favor.

Obie Moore was high scorer with 22 points and 11 rebounds. Dick Carson was next with 20 points and Crabb was third with 11.

It was Coach DeWayne Kervin's first game as head basketball coach.

Next Saturday SA will play Edgewood at SA at 7:30. The junior high will start its game at 6:30.

Next Tuesday night the junior high will play at 5:30, the junior varsity at 6:30 and the varsity at 7:30 all at Bessemer.

New tire manager aims at 'personal' service

"We aim to please" is the credo of Steve Golden, recently employed as service manager for Cahaba Radial Tire in Pelham.

Enthusiastic about his new position, Golden compared the business to a "neighborhood garage."

The new service manager pointed out that he and owners Jim McCorstin and Floyd Crooks tried to give customers "personal" service. "We really care about what happens to their vehicles," he emphasized.

Golden has been in the automotive business for five years and has worked for several firms in the Shelby County area.

A graduate of Bessemer State Technical College, Golden is a native of Marvel where he lives with his wife Sherry and three month old daughter Tara.

Services Golden will be in charge of at Cahaba Radial Tire are: front end alignment, brake and tire work, including custom wheel, oil changes and lube jobs.

The business is open from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. weekdays and from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturdays.

Drama plays this week

"Under Milkwood," a stage adaptation of the poem by Dylan Thomas, will be presented by the Unviversity of Montevallo Speech and Theatre Dept. each evening this week through Saturday.

The play was written as a play for voices, said Jay Cady, director, a UM student from Mobile.

"It was originally written for the readers' theatre or radio," he said, "and is usually done in readers' theatre style. But this will be a fully staged event."

All performances begin at 8 p.m. in UM's Reynolds Theatre.

DID YOU KNOW?
It takes a smaller portion of your Social Security check to buy 750 kilowatt-hours today than it did in 1965.
In 1965, it took 18.5% of the average monthly benefit in Alabama to buy 750 kilowatt-hours of electricity. In 1978, it only took 13% to buy the same amount. But it's still mighty hard to live on a fixed income. Our free Levelized Monthly Billing service can help you keep your monthly electric bills from going up and down. And you won't pay for one kilowatt-hour more than you use. Call us today and ask about Levelized Monthly Billing.

Roundball season hits the courts

by Richard Crosby

Basketball season is underway with all county schools involved in the roundball game. Reports indicate that several schools from last year that finished strong have again come out on the court in a show of force.

Thompson High is always a contender for Area honors and this year should be no different. The toughest competition will be Sylacauga who has every player returning from last year's squad.

Calera should be able to compete in basketball in its last year in the 1A arena. The Eagles are under new head coach Mark Lovette.

Vincent coach Richard Crumpton has been poor mouthing so it's no telling what talent the Jackets have. The last offensive comment Crumpton made was, "We're going to get the ball to Dexter McCrimon and let him shoot."

Shelby County's Don Pouncey is coaching the efforts of the Wildcats who had a good turnout for the varsity team. There's still some improvement in store for the cats but they should turn in a respectable year.

Montevallo has been practicing hard the past several weeks and the Bulldogs may be a better team than rival Thompson. Two key starters return for coach Kurt Pnazek and their experience could be the difference.

Chelsea will see an uphill battle in the basketball ranks this season. The Hornets are competitive in their Area but only barely. Fans will see coach Mike Sims and team win a few for Hornet Pride.

Pelham High may be the toughest in inter-county games. The Panthers have been building steadily under coach Tony Taylor's guidance and this may be the year for a Panther growl that shakes a few Warriors and Aggies.

Coosa Valley will have to wait for a few football injuries to heal before getting the toughness it takes to build toward the state tournament. The Rebels have a good nucleus to work from and some good talent that moved up from the Junior team. Look for them to be strong.

Shelby Academy also has a good chance at being District contenders. The Raiders have some skilled players in the ranks and plenty of pride to build upon. The annual Private School clash between Shelby and Coosa is sure to be a fight.

Basketball fans will get plenty to view this fall and despite the disappointments, there will be plenty of victories for the true fan to enjoy.

Deer season enters third week

by Richard Crosby

Another week of deer season has passed and the action seems to have slowed. The weather has been the main deterrent but clearer skies are forecast and action should be picking up as we head into December.

Quail season is also underway around the county and dogs have been doing their part in making treks through the woods successful.

Here's a couple of paragraphs I picked up from a news release about hunting dogs.

"Female dogs are good hunting dogs, but.....the dog owner who spends time training his female dog, only to have her come into heat when the hunting season arrives, is often a disappointed hunter.

Spaying has been the logical answer to the problem of female hunting dogs coming into heat for some hunters. But many hunters don't like the permanence of spaying and have turned to liquid contraceptives. The chemicals are available from veterinarians and a daily dose of drops either on the dog's food or in her mouth, keeps the female out of heat.

The developer of the unique drug did ten years of testing on well over 2,000 dogs in both field situations and laboratories.

Some hunters feel that the removal of the dog's reproductive organs just might negatively affect the dog's natural instincts. Other hunters find that their spayed dogs are less active and tend to gain too much weight. Spayed dogs require less food, so many owners often overfeed them.

In any event, it appears that hunters with unspayed dogs can now look forward to enjoying the sport more than ever. Thanks to the birth control agent that keeps their dogs out of heat during the hunting season."

Here's another note picked up from news releases that usually end up in the round file.

"When getting ready to store your boat for the winter, don't overlook the need to get water out of the gas tank. Even a small quantity left there for months can result in corroded spots.

A full tank is the best solution to this problem. A full tank is immune to explosion, and it won't let condensation form on the inner surfaces.

Another quick check before saying goodbye to your boat for the winter is to check the fuel filter for signs of an undue amount of water. Change it if you're in doubt of its seaworthiness."

Well, that's all the tips this week. Keep hunting and let us know of your results in Shelby Outdoors.

Sports Editor hangs up cleats

So long folks

by Richard Crosby

This is the last week for this reporter. After three years as Sports Editor of the Shelby County Reporter I'm hanging up my typewriter and coaching shoes to pursue private business.

During the past three years I've witnessed many sporting events - from coaching changes, All County Banquets, basketball games to who knows how many football contests.

Although I leave the ranks of the 'full timers' of the Reporter staff, you will still see my name occasionally in the sports pages. I'll be helping out in the months to come till someone figures out what I've been doing the past three years.

While in retirement I hope to have the opportunity to do all the things I never had time for while on the staff. Such as learning the name of my ll month old son, cleaning out the car, taking all those scanners and CBs out of the dash board, and coming home for dinner on Monday nights.

I'd like to thank all the coaches I've had the pleasure of working with. Despite a sometimes sharp pointed pen, I admire the work they do and the hours they keep. I hope all the communities appreciate their hard work.

In leaving, I bequeath my typewriter stand to Bert Seaman so she'll have something to write 'Scrambled Eggs' about next week. My files go to David Moore who could use another big mess. To the Sears who have allowed me to work at the Reporter I leave my legacy of writing ability that could only have been enhanced by their editing.

In closing, I'd like to say thanks to the readers of the Reporter who have made the job here rewarding. Your letters and phone calls spurred my endeavors at serving you. Thanks!

Letter to Editor

An Unpatriotic Army

A general is a leader. If an army loses a battle, is it right to blame the general, one man, for this defeat?

What if the army of a bunch of unpatriotic men were fighting a war? These men undoubtedly would follow the generals orders to the letter. If these men who are supposed to be trying to defend the honor of our country, do not love our country, then what? Do they put as much effort into their actions, as a patriotic American would?

If you were a general whose men were fighting a loosing battle year after year, would you go A.W.O.L.? Probably.

I know one man who in a sense is a general. He has had many a "Army". He is Richard Conkle, coach of the Chelsea football team. He seems to have lost a countless number of wars. But why? Is it right to blame a single man, for many men's mistakes? Can anyone see any point in discharging a general who has done his best?

All this may sound ridiculous and it is, but it has a meaning. Do you suppose our "General" could have been commander of "an unpatriotic army" all these years? This could account for some of those lost battles in Hornet Country.

Outdoor expert discusses cattails and bass caviar

For Better Hunting and Fishing
by Earl Franklin Kennamer

Now and then I'm faced with a paradox.

For 40 years I have been recommending steps to prevent, suppress and eradicate cattails in farm ponds. I have always suggested a pond shoreline be dug before flooding so the water anywhere in a pond or lake will be two to 2{ feet deep and thus prevent cattails and other shallow-water growth becoming established. If cattails are well entrenched, the pond owner must use herbicides to kill the plants. Too many cattails and other water weeds provide unnecessary cover for small fish and also interefere with fishing and sap the water of nutrients. I assure you any chemical must be used regularly for "continuing" eradication and certain chemicals pollute the water and possibly fish.

Now I learn that Douglas C. Pratt, botany head, Univ. of Minnesota, has done work to develop the cattail into a commercial energy unit.

Here are startling statistics he's unraveled on cattails -- which could become a cultivated crop like corn or soybeans in the near future. One ton of oven-dried cattail biomass (amount of living matter) contains 15 million British thermal units (Btu's). One Btu equals 252 calories, or amount of heat energy required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree F. Annually you might produce 15 tons cattail biomass per acre yielding 225 million Btu's. Minn. has between four to six million acres of wetlands which could produce some managed cattail production for energy. The energy yield from 4.9 million acres of cattails would equal Minn.'s total energy consumption in 1975! Managed stands of cattails produce 16 to 19 tons of dried biomass per acre annually, compared to 11 to 12 tons from corn. Cattail productivity exceeds high yield corn by 50 percent.

With Ala.'s warmer climate and longer growing season, we could possibly outproduce Minnesota cattail yields by 50 percent. I can see city dwellers calling their local cattail processing plant and ordering a ton of cattail bricks for this new wood-burning stoves!

* * * *

Have you caught this fall a bass with the two familiar sacs of golden caviar or eggs? Did you think the bass was about to spawn? State Game and Fish Biologist Fred R. Harders recently issued a report to help clear up the picture in the minds of bass anglers who don't know the whole story.

Harders points out that "presence of eggs (even at this time of year) does not always mean the fish failed to spawn or is going to spawn. Not all eggs produced by bass are used in spawning. All eggs do not mature at the same time. This would account for female bass containing eggs after the spawning season. Eggs are formed in fall and winter and are held until the spring spawing season."

The point I have stressed so often is that female bass are producing eggs now for the next spawning season. Remember, a woman does not become a mother until nine months after her egg is fertilized. During spring, water temperature is the trigger for bass spawning. When the water warms to 60-75 degrees F. in March, April and May, the female will shed her eggs.

The male bass selects a site and sweeps out a nest. After spawning, the female abandons the nest, leaving the male to guard the young fish for several weeks. Some females will spawn more than once during spring with several different males.

So now you know the whole story.

UM Falcons win title in Pelham Classic

A 3-0 week, highlighted by the championship of the Second Annual Pelham March of Dimes Classic, brought the Univeristy of Montevallo Falcons to a 4-1 record, and coach Bill Elder closer to a personal milesone.

Now in his sixth year at the helm of the UM basketball program, Elder has led the Falcons to a current 98-57 record, and a first grader could tell you he only needs a pair of victories to hit the 'Magic 100' in Montevallo wins.

"I don't even want to talk about it," Elder laughed when appraised of his present standing. "That's stuff for statictic-ians to think about. All I'm concerned about is the next game; records will take care of themselves."

If the Falcons can win their next game, against Stillman College on Nov. 27, then Elder would have a shot at No. 100 against the team's biggest rival, the Panthers of Birmingham-Southern College. That showdown is scheduled for Saturday. Dec. 1, at 7:30 in UM's Myrick Hall, and will be considered a true test of this year's Falcons.

Reggie Harris copped MVP honors in the Pelham Classic, leading Montevallo to the tournament title with 21 points in the first round 84-70 win over Talladega, and a 25 point output in the 75-64 win over Spring Hill in the championship contest. In the two games, Harris canned 22 of 29 field goal attempts, a sizzling 75.9 percent!

There were a number of outstanding performances, teamwise and individually, in the tournament. Spring Hill went into double-overtime before beating Shorter College 123-111 in the first round, while Talladega, down 24 at the half, almost caught Shorter in the consolation game before falling 78-72.

UM volleyball team hoping for berth

Wait and hope.

That, in essence, is the situation for the University of Montevallo Lady Falcons, who finished a strong third in the AIAW Region III Division II Volleyball Tournment over the weekend at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

The top two teams from each regional tournament (Region II was won by the University of Central Florida, with Florida International University second) get automatic berths in the AIAW Division II National Tournament, set for Dec. 6-8 at UCF in Orlando, Fla. Two at-large bids are given out, and the Lady Falcons are hoping one of those goes to them.

Teams are required to bid for the at-large spots, and UM coach Beverly Warren makes a strong case for her team.

"First of all, we've got a very good record (42-13) against an awfully tough schedule, and our results show that," she explains. "Second, our region is probably the strongest in the country; Central Florida and Florida International came in first and second in the national tournament last year. And third, we showed in our last match against FIU that we can compete with the 'big folks'."

Indeed, Montevallo almost clinched a national spot outright, dropping the semi-finals of the double-elimination tournament to FIU 9-15, 15-13, 14-16.

Making it all the more disappointing was the fact that Montevallo had a 14-6 lead in the final game, but couldn't notch that one last point.

"That one hurt," Coach Warren admitted, "but it wasn't because we played bad; we really played well. We would make a great play to get the ball back, then lose it on our serve, then make another great play and get it bnack again, so on like that. FIU came back a point at a time, not quickly like Troy State did to us in the state tournament.

"I'm sorry we didn't win, but I'm proud of the team, especially after we played so poorly on Thursday. The girls aren't getting their hopes up too high about this at-large bid, so they won't be disappointed, but I think we've got a pretty good chance of going, and they certainly deserve to go."

So, all in all, it has been a magnificent year for the Montevallo volleyball team. A trip to the nationals would cap it off, but that decision won't be announced until Nov. 26.

Meantime, it's wait, and hope...

Lady roundballers win first game

It probably seemed as if it would never come, but University of Montevallo Lady Falcons' basketball coach Becky Glass got her first win at the school.

In their first five games, the Lady Falcons had not produced a vicotry for their first-year coach, who joined the program inn August from Asbury College in Wilmore, Kentucky. In fact, playing against an extremely tough early schedule, they had only come close once, losing a 79-75 decision on November 20th at home to Talladega.

In the Covenant College Tip-Off Tournament, Montevallo fell behind early against Tennessee Wesleyan on Nov. 23 and bowed 75-60. But the following evening, the team was at its finest, chopping down host Covenant 74-68.

"It was a nice one to get," signed a relieved Coach Glass. "The team played well, and deserved to win one for a change. Now, we just want to come back and do well against some of the teams in the state."

The Lady Falcons will get their chance to do that in the next few games, visiting the University of North ASlabama Nov. 27 and Alabama A&M Nov. 30, then returning home for games against Calhoun Community College on Dec. 4 and Stillman on Dec.6. The Calhoun game is a 5:15, a preliminary to the UM men's game with Talladega College, and the Stillman game is set for 7 p.m.

Mid State Tourney starts Tuesday night

The annual Mid State conference basketball tournament gets underway next Tuesday night at B.B. Comer High School. In first round games that begin Tuesday night, Pell City faces Thompson at 5:30, with Childersburg and Shelby County playing at 7 and Vincent and Sylacauga squaring off at 8:30. Comer drew a first round bye in the tournament.

In the semi-finals Thursday night, the pell City-Thompson winner will face the Childersburg-Shelby County victor at 6:30 with Comer playing the winner of the Vincent-Sylacauga game at 8.

The tournament finals will be held Friday night at 8 p.m. with a consolation game starting earlier, at 6:30.

Comer and Sylcauga are the favored teams in this years tournament.

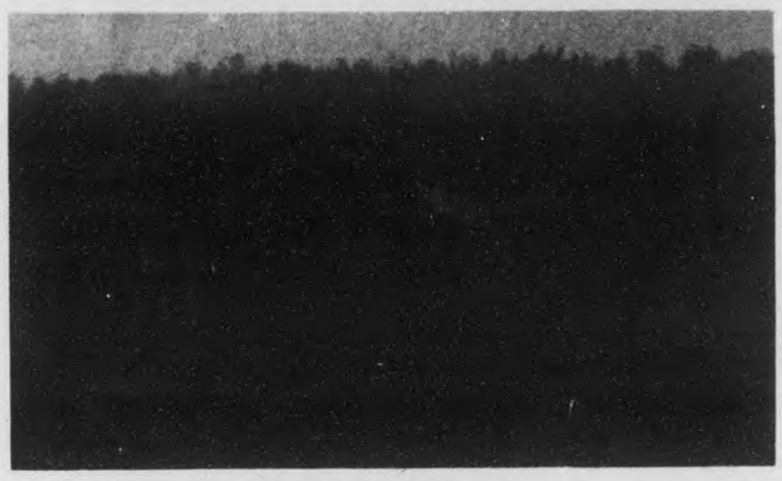
Shelby County Soil and Water Conservation District

"JUST TO LET YOU KNOW"

Our Shelby County Soil and Water Conservation District wants you to know that we are here to serve you. So this passed spring we decided to erect signs on our county boundary. Pictured here District Supervisor Wayne Archer (right) and Elvis Walton (left) check out new sign on 280 near Childersburg.

THE BIG PUSH !

"Failure to protect our agriculture, and the natural resources on which it depends, will put us on a collision course with disaster." Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland made this statement out of extreme concern for our prime farmland every day that passes. The thief is Urban sprawl. We must look for, and plan for development on lands not suitable for agriculture production. Shelby County is a good example of "The Big Push".



MINING AND CONSERVATION

A team effort to make useful, orphaned mined land, is just one of the many new conservation programs to help restore and beautify America's landscape. Federal cost share is available to owners of mined land in Shelby County who qualify for the Rural Abandoned Mine Program. (RAMP for short.) One other very important community oriented program recently funded for the five county areas around Birmingham in CaWaCo. A Resource Development Project aimed at community wide benefit programs. The name CaWaCo is taken from, Cahaba, Warrior and Coosa Rivers which flow through the five county area.

BOUNTIFUL HAY CROP

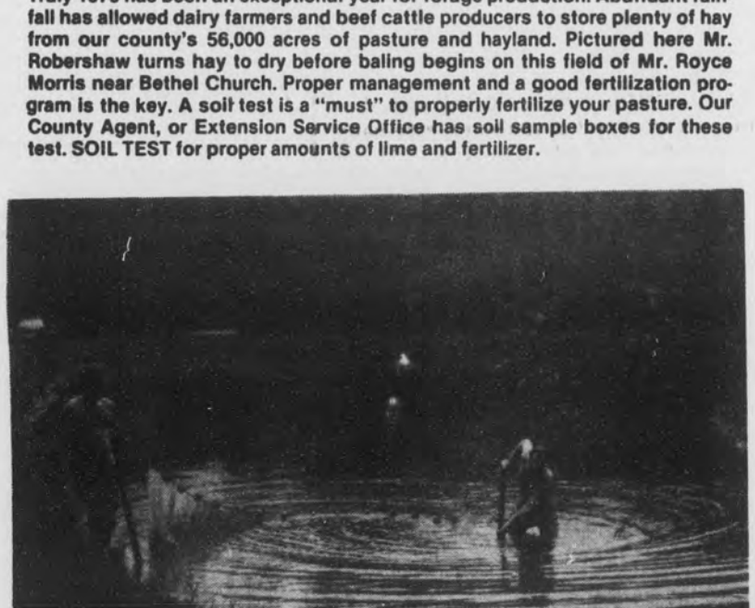
Truly 1979 has been an exceptional year for forage production. Abundant rainfall has allowed dairy farmers and beef cattle producers to store plenty of hay from our county's 56,000 acres of pasture and hayland. Pictured here Mr. Robershaw turns hay to dry before baling begins on this field of Mr. Royce Morris near Bethel Church. Proper management and a good fertilization program is the key. A soil test is a "must" to properly fertilize your pasture. Our County Agent, or Extension Service Office has soil sample boxes for these test. SOIL TEST for proper amounts of lime and fertilizer.

CALERA FLOODING PROBLEMS UNDER STUDY

Buxahatchee Creek floods and backs water into the Town of Calera creating all kinds of problems, so Calera Town Council and Mayor George Roy decided to try and do something about it. A watershed application was made through our District Office and now something is being done. Here a team of officials from Environmental Protection Agency, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, and Town of Calera meet to discuss the problem. Survey work will begin the last of November to study and eliminate the flooding problem.

"A TOO FAMILIAR SCENE"

Flooding scenes like this one along Bishop Creek are becoming an instant replay every year. As more development and commercialization of floodplains along our streams takes place, flooding will continue to increase. Land developers and home buyers can find out about problems and save themselves a lot of money and headaches if they will just call our district office in Shelby County.



POND CONSTRUCTION AND MANAGEMENT "GO HAND n' HAND"

Alabama Department of Conservation Biologist and Soil Conservation Technicians work "hand n' hand" to help you construct and manage your fishing lake. Here District Fishery Biologist Dan Katching and Fred Harder check a pond for correct fish balance. You can also get financial assistance from the ASCS Office to construct ponds. These are free services to you the land-owner and tax payer of Shelby County. Call us if we can help you!

Cotton and soybeans are still the county's leading row crops, and they make up a large portion of our agricultural economy. In 1979 approximately 10,000 acres of soybeans averaging 30 bushels per acre and cotton about 1 to 1½ bales per acre. Pictured here, District Supervisors Rex Perry and Herschel Lansford pick a field of cotton near Harpersville.

Environmental and health concerns are becoming increasingly important as large tracts of land are being developed throughout Shelby County. Here, from left to right, Soil Scientist Cleo Stubbs and Bob Stevens discuss county soil conditions with Frank Sloan of Allen Whitley Engineering, James Brown, Soil Scientist SCS State Office Auburn, and Ron Stutts, Shelby County Health Department. We prepare over two hundred soils reports per year for landowners, developers, and engineers in an effort to eliminate any major developmental problems associated with soil conditions.

LEARNING GOOD LAND-USE

Students from all over Shelby County get first hand experience in making land-use decisions. Each year, FFA students learn about soils and land-use through a county wide land judging contest. Here students study soil conditions and discuss best use of land. Our district always supports this effort with a $50.00 check to the winning school.

SOIL SURVEY NEARS COMPLETION

A detail soil survey for Shelby County is only about 1 year away from completion. Pictured here, left to right, County Soil Scientist Bob Stevens, and Cleo Stubbs discuss mapping details and soil conditions with Assistant State Soil Scientist, Jim Brown. Approximately 390,000 acres of the 512,000 have already been mapped and described. When complete, the published report will contain maps and detail descriptions of all land in Shelby County. Sound land use decisions must be based on accurate soils information.

As a team, our District and the Soil Conservation Service has been involved in many activities to improve our land through sound soil and water conservation practices. These practices cover a wide range of activities from erosion control to designing ponds, lakes, terraces, waterways, ditches and total land-use planning. We won't bore you with lots of facts and figures, but we would like to mention that we worked with 780 different landowners and rendered 1,020 technical services to you on various land use problems depicked in the articles and pictures above. Call us at 669-7136 if you need advice or help in solving any soil and water related problem. We are here to serve you!!!

Trailers cause Columbiana hassle

by Bert Seaman

Trailers were being set up everywhere in Columbiana in the late 1960's when a pipeline was being constructed.

In a move to keep any more of the mobile homes from being brought into the city, the Columbiana City Council in May of 1969 passed an ordinance prohibiting them except in trailer parks.

However, in recent years the ordinance hasn't been enforced. So when Mr. and Mrs. Don Gothard appeared at a council meeting Tuesday night to request permission to put a trailer on their lot, the panel felt they couldn't refuse.

Before final approval is given though, Mayor Bob Bolton asked that the couple submit written consent from neighbors even though Mrs. Gothard had reported no one with adjoining property had any objections.

A written request from the Gothards to put a trailer behind their home on Carter Lane was read at a previous Council meeting, but no action was taken at that time.

When she talked to the Council last week, Mrs. Gothard reminded members that three other trailers were on the street and another on a nearby street.

Before the meeting began, representatives from city departments studied a breakdown of annuity benefits that had been worked up by the Council's finance chairman Paul Smith.

The city has been considering instituting a retirement plan for city employees and several companies had submitted proposals at the last Council meeting.

Before the Tuesday session ended, the four representatives, who had retired to discuss the proposals, reported that they favored the Trans American Life plan submitted by the Rux Carter Agency.

However, before a plan is put into effect, the Council will have to vote on it. It's expected that this will be done sometime in December.

At the present time, the city pays 2½ % of the cost for employees who have life insurance with Liberty National. This will be discontinued if the panel votes to accept the retirement plan chosen by employees.

Agreement had been reached earlier by Council members, that the city would pay 5% of the cost of the retirement plan with the employee matching that amount.

Street Superintendent James Palmer brought to the Council's attention some work that needed to be done in connection with a beautification project in the city.

The area to be improved is between the Post Office and the Western Auto Store. Although trees are to be planted there, Palmer said the architect wanted the new curbing and some brick work put in first.

The present sidewalk and curbing will all have to be torn up, Palmer related, and he went on to tell the Council that a brick mason would have to be engaged.

Considering the cost involved, the panel recalled that they had only agreed to furnish city employees and equipment. It was also noted that $2,500 had been donated to the Beautification Committee to be used as it was needed.

Before going ahead with the project, it was agreed that further discussions be held with the architect.

Acting on a recommendation from Police Chief Howell Horn, the panel voted to make a permanent No Parking zone in front of Clay's Fabric Store. It was pointed out though, that merchants can still use the space for loading.

The reason for not allowing parking on the section of North Main which intersects with Depot is because of the number of accidents which have occurred there.

Home Decorating with Becky

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED FURNITURE IN DIFFERENT SHAPES?

Take a look at the average living room. Very often much of the furniture in the room has the same shape, and while you don't want a reckless hodge podge of furniture, it's still generally a good idea to have some furniture in different shapes to increase the interest in a room.

For instance, the pieces in a given room may be either mostly rectangular or mostly curved. In that case, why not consider, for example, something like a curved table in front of a rectangular sofa or a rectangular table in front of a curved sofa--or a chair in a different shape, or some piece of furniture somewhere in the room that offers a good contrast if your room has too much of the same shapes.

A new mirror or picture that's in a different shape and proportion than the furniture in a room may bring some new excitement, and that goes for any accessory that can give you needed shapes that your rooms don't now have.

The best bet is to come in and browse around with an eye towards how the shape of a piece can really help one of your rooms.

Whether you are looking for the usual or the unusual, you'll always find good furniture values here.

'Giving is the spirit of Christmas'

County retailers expect good Christmas sales

by David Moore

Even in the face of inflation and forecasts of recession, North Shelby County retailers are optimistic about Christmas sales this season.

One of the most often cited reasons for a good sales season is the high cost of gasoline which local merchants predict will cause people to shop closer to home, as opposed to making shopping expeditions into Birmingham.

The cashier at an Alabaster hobby shop is one man who claimed shoppers won't be driving as far this Christmas due to the gas situation, but he also added another advantage the gas situation has lent to the hobby business.

"The hobby business is going to come into its own," he said. "People are going to have to stay home more."

And, according to him, hobbies are an excellent form of home entertainment. He not only predicted good sales on toys for children, but for "older boys, too. As they say, the only difference in men and boys are the price of their toys. As long as there are kids, people are going to buy stuff," he said.

Martha Morrow who works at an Alabaster music store said that since people are home more these days, they're buying more records. "They buy a lot for gifts, too," she added.

Among the stars of the plastic discs, Mrs. Morrow predicted the Sugar Hill Gang, Fat Back Band, Smokey Robinson, Funkadelics and the Eagles to be big sellers. The Bee Gees, she noted, are doing "pretty good."

If people are staying home to listen to records, then it follows that they need a stereo to play them. Joe Roca, manager of a Pelham radio and electronics shop, said his stereos are in great demand this time of year. Raco pointed out, however, that his biggest sellers this year will be electronic toys and computerized games.

"I look at it (the Christmas season) optimistically because we've been doing a relatively good business the last five months. Maybe it's because the recession, or inflation--whatever it is we're supposed to have--hasn't hit this area yet," Raco said.

A sales clerk at a Pelham cosmetic store said their sales are traditionally up this time of the year because women buy new makeup for Christmas social functions. But, she added, the store also sees an increase in the sales of gift items such as lingerie.

"Buying and spending is Christmas to people," she explained, adding that "once they get Thanksgiving out of the way, they concentrate on Christmas--one holiday at a time."

Though these interviews were conducted the day after Thanksgiving, considered by retailers nationwide as the heaviest shopping day of the year, there were few, if any customers in the stores that morning. Many potential shoppers apparently had their spending spirits dampened by a near constant rain which fell, often heavily, throughout the day.

"The weather may slow things down, but if we have a cold snap, sales will pick up," predicted Susan Byars at a Pelham fashion shop.

Though some customers have already purchased large articles, such as suits, and put them on layaway, she admited she is "Scared to death, but we're getting ready for it (sales) just to be optimistic.

Her husband, Michael Byars, who manages the men's department of that fashion store, said that tight money may stop people from buying early, but that last minute shopping will probably be good. He also said that it's not yet true that people are buying just necessities.

The Byars noted that sweaters and velour tops are their biggest movers so far, and that women's clothing generally sells better than men's at Christmas.

A Pelham sporting goods store manager said that people spend most of their money on entertainment, behind groceries and gasoline, and with gas prices still going up, people are going to stay home more and play.

"I think they'll spend money on sporting goods, as opposed to a new suit," he said.

His reasoning behind the slow sales on the day after Thanksgiving was that most of those sales are realized by large department and discount stores who are running big sales.

He, like nearly all the other retailers, pointed out that Saturdays and the few days just prior to Christmas are his biggest volume days.

Ruby Morgan of Helena was one shopper the rain didn't dampen (spirit-wise) last Friday.

"The gas--that's the only thing that really altered my Christmas shopping. I try to do as much as possible on one trip," she said.

She and her husband had been to a few discount department stores in Riverchase the previous weekend and found them so crowded they had to leave.

Mrs. Morgan said she is a firm believer in Christmas savings clubs, and therefore had money available to buy presents. Friday, she had already purchased 16 out of 25 gifts she had to buy. She noted that without dropping anyone from her list, she was spending more this year on the same number of presents due to inflation.

"That's the spirit of Christmas--giving," said Mrs. Morgan.

Though most retailers remain generally optimistic, and my yet weather the stormy economy this Christmas, one Alabaster store manager appeared calmly certain that his seasonal sales would not be dropping.

"We haven't seen any change yet due to what you're talking about," stated Leslie Snow at the green-fronted liquor store.

"People want to enjoy themselves whenever they get a chance," he said.

Deck the stores

They weren't "boughs of holly," but Michael Byars was busy decorating his Pelham fashion store for the Christmas season last Friday.

Christmas decisions

Mrs. Ruby Morgan of Helena, gets an opinion from her husband on the possibility of buying a hair dryer for one of the remaining nine people on her Christmas list. Mrs. Morgan indicated that the current economic woes are affecting her Christmas spending.

Gardens on slopes need cover

If your Shelby County garden is located on sloping land, you should take special measures to guard against erosion this winter.

Do not leave the garden bare. If possible, plant and prepare the land in some kind of a cover crop to prevent erosion and leaching. Oats, rye and clover may be used on a prepared seedbed. Ryegrass may be planted without any soil preparation. However, if ryegrass is used, it should be turned early in the spring before it begins to form a heavy soil.

If the garden cannot be planted in some cover crop, it should not be stripped of its cover and left bare to wash away during the heavy winter rains. Mow the land to scatter old crop residue or sprinkle a light covering of oat or pine straw over bare spots to reduce erosion.

The end of the garden season is a good time for Shelby County gardeners to start planting for next year's crop. Soil testing should head the list of fall and winter garden jobs.

Spread lime recommended by soil test results as quickly as possible. The best way to spread lime on a small area is by hand. Take one-half the lime and broadcast it going in one direction, then spread the remainder at right angles to the first application. Lime applied just ahead of land preparation can be incorporated in the plow layer when turning the land.

Soil test samples should be mailed in special mailing boxes. They are available free of charge from the Shelby County Extension office.

Card of Thanks

Thanks - Thanks - Thanks!

I pen this note with deepest appreciation from my heart, to everyone who shared with the duties it took, to staff and manage our Columbiana PTO Concession Stand, for without the support, it would have been impossible. Special thanks goes out to: Our three city schools, SCHS, Middle and Hill Elementary, Shelby Co. High Beta and Jr. Civitan Clubs, Rebel Rousers CB Club, PTO Members and officers, concerned non-menbers, and our youth. There was about one dozen or more of our youth who faithfully came everytime the doors opened. They came, asking nothing in return, but only to be a part and that they were. I love each of you for it. I couldn't forget my co-chairman and vice-president, Nancy Cardwell, Nancy, couldn't have made it without you.

If I've over looked someone, its by mistake, thanks again.

Helen Lewis,
Columbiana PTO President and Concession Stand Chairman

In Memory of my daddy
O.H. Whitfield, who passed away Nov. 29, 1976

I never came to you
when you were not there,
I never talked to you
when you did not hear,
I never asked
when you did not give;
Asking nothing in return.

I have memories enough to last a lifetime,
I will always hold them dear,
For you were an inspiration to me and all that knew you here.

Loving memories,
Your daughter,
Judy

In loving memory of our mother Lou Tencie Vanderslice who passed away Nov. 22nd, 1968.

The within described property,

Quinn, et al
Defendants

In The Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
In Equity
Case No. CV-79-367(E)

TO; The following described land:

A lot situated in the SE¼ of SW¼, Section 14, Township 20, Range 3 West, Shelby County, Alabama, described as follows: Commencing at the Northwest corner of the SE¼ of SW¼ of Section 14, Township 20, Range 3 West and run thence East along the North line of said forty 430 feet to point of beginning; run thence East along the North line of said forty 420 feet; run thence South and parallel to the West line of said forty 430 feet; run thence West and parallel with the North line of said forty 420 feet, run thence North and parallel with the West line of said forty 430 feet to point of beginning, less and except any portion of subject property lawfully conveyed by the previous owner, Al Sykes, deceased, from the 4th day of September, 1943 through this conveyance of said property to the Plaintiff on June 24, 1957, said conveyance being recorded in Deed Book 187, Page 450 in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; and the following named person, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees:

Queen Esther Quinn; Paul Mallett; Susie Mallett; Samuel Lewis Bryant; Eloise Bryant; Annie B. Collins, the trustees of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Pelham, Alabama, to-wit: Tom Sanders and Oscar Sykes, and their successors; Benjamin Alexander; Bonnie Lee Alexander; Prince Bryant; Adell Bryant; Rev. Homer Jackson, as pastor and Don Coplen and Willie Jones as deacons of the Pelham Immanuel Spiritual Church, and their successors; Plantation Pipe Line Company, a Corporation; and any and all unknown parties, including any persons claiming any present interests therein and including any persons claiming any futurs, contingent, reversionary, remainder or other interest(s) thereon, who may claim any interest in the above described property.

Take notice that Ozella Watson Grayer has this day filed her verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest thereon, and against all other persons and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Ozella Watson Grayer and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiff alleges in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the Plaintiff on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that Plaintiff claims title to said lands through and by virtue of that certain warranty deed from Al Sykes dated June 24, 1957, and recorded in Deed Book 187, page 450 in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of Plaintiff's ownership, she has been in actual, peaceable, notorious adverse possession of the above, described property, and has paid taxes thereon for a period of more than ten(10) years next preceding the filing of this bill. That certain instruments have been subsequently filed of record purporting to convey title to portions of subject property to certain defendants, which said deeds create a cloud on the title of the Plaintiff's property.

Plaintiff further alleges in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, Plaintiff's only information of the above defendant's is:

That Plaintiff after most reasonable and diligent search and inquiry was unable to locate the following named persons to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to Plaintiff, said persons being as follows: Paul Mallett; Susie Mallett; Annie B. Collins, the trustees of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Pelham, Alabama, to-wit: Tom Sanders and Oscar Sykes and their successors; Prince Bryant; Adell Bryant; Rev. Homer Jackson, as pastor and Don Coplen and Willie Jones as deacons of the Pelham Immanuel Spiritual Church and their successors; and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to Plaintiff, may claim an interest in or to the above described property are unknown.

It is, therefore, ordered by the undersigned Clerk that publication of this notice by made in the Shelby County Reporter, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in Shelby County, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, and that all those to whom this notice is addressed and any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon, the above described real estate, or any part thereof, or any interest thereon, be and they are hereby required to plead, answer or demur to the complaint in this cause within the time required by law, and not later than the 10th day of January 1980.

It is further ordered that a copy of this notice, certified by the undersigned clerk as being correct, shall also be recorded as a lis pendens in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama.

Water from heaven

This sky crane helicopter, carrying a bucket loaded with 2,000 gallons of water, douses a fire buring in the woods south of Columbiana. The fire was a controlled burn and helicopter pilots practiced drop patterns last week in preparation for unplanned fires.

Airborne 'water buckets' fight county woods fires

by Bert Seaman

Two giant birds hovered over the Coosa River several times Thursday, each time sucking up 2,000 gallons of water apiece.

The birds were actually helicopters and attached to their undersides were huge buckets recently purchased by the Alabama Forestry Commission to be used in firefighting.

Assistant State Forester Charles Pigg told the Reporter that there are only between six and eight of this size bucket in use in the entire United States.

He explained that only helicopters with the lift capacity of those used by the Air National Guard in Birmingham were capable of carrying the huge buckets and their water load.

Pigg reported that the State Forestry Commission paid approximately $25,000 for both buckets which will be kept at the Air National Guard base in Birmingham. However, he noted they are available to every county in the state.

Forestry personnel from District 2, which includes Shelby County, and U. S. Forestry representatives were on hand last week to observe a demonstration over Gulf States land southeast of Columbiana.

The sky cranes carrying the bright orange buckets were CH-54 B's, and a smaller rotor craft known as a Huey, also participated in the exercise.

Relating that fires were set at various locations on Gulf State land to do a controlled burn on 150 acres, County Forester David Stone said copter pilots were working on accuracy in hitting fire sites.

Five forestry service technicians, one from Boise, Idaho rode in the helicopters to observe from above the effectiveness of the deluge on the flames.

Former County Forester Dave Duckett, now Fire Control Chief for the state, was also part of the shake-down operation.

Solar roof catches fire

A dry run by the Montevallo Fire Department paid off a week later when flames were spotted on the roof of Alabama Power Company's Solar Energy building in Montevallo.

According to reports, someone on the street noticed the roof fire at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon.

Montevallo City Clerk Don Hughes notified Power Company officials and the 30 employees in the building were evacuated.

The Montevallo Fire Department, following the plan they had mapped out last Monday in the event the building ever caught on fire, had the flames extinguished in less than five minutes.

Using the snorkel unit, firemen directed water on the flames from above.

No one was injured and there appeared to be no damage to the interior of the building.

District Manager Nolan Hardin said the fire was probably started because of the intense heat in collector panels. He reported that fluid flowing through pipes to keep them cool had been turned off because of a leak.

About 15 of the collection panels were broken. Although Hardin said he didn't know immediately how much it would cost to repair the damage, Engineer Bill White recalled that the panels had cost $19 a square foot to install.

The building has been occuppied for a year and a half.

Traveling board meets little success

An effort by Board of Education members to make themselves available to school patrons in various sections of the county fell flat at Tuesday's meeting held at TES.

Although approximately 30 people from the Chelsea school zone area were present to hear a discussion of two suspended Chelsea High School students (see related story), very few people from the Alabaster vicinity were in attendance.

Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles expressed disappointment at the poor turnout from the area.

In addition to electing trustees for county schools (separate story), the panel also elected Mrs. Elaine Hughes to serve a third term as chairman of the Board. They further agreed that Doug Kent would continue as vice-chairman.

It was reported that Caddo Construction Co. was the low bidder on roof repair work for the Central Office building. In addition to repairing the roof, the firm will also insulate the building and glazing exterior woodwork. The board voted to accept their bid of $30,769.

At their Oct. 16 meeting, the Board had approved the expenditure as part of the capital outlay in the 1979-80 budget. However, only $25,000 had been set aside at that time for the project.

Taking action on another matter, the panel voted to raise travel mileage and the daily expense allowance for board employees. Keeping the amounts equal to what the state pays, the Board will allot 18 cents per mile for travel and 30 cents per day for expenses.

Salaries will also be raised for substitute support personnel. An increase of $3.20 will bring their pay to $17 per day which is on a par with the State Department of Education pay scale.

Three board employees will see their checks increased this year due to their promotion to master mechanics. The pay raise went into effect Dec.1 and will cost the Board an extra $1,940.

The meeting also included a presentation by Ted Lansford, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. Lansford defined the Montevallo-Thompson school attendance zone lines.

Vincent Elementary School will be the site of the Board's next meeting on Dec. 18. Knowles says he hopes for better attendance.

Pelham wreck proves fatal

A Montevallo woman died early Saturday morning from injuries suffered in a two car collision in Pelham. Her husband and young daughter, also riding in the same car, were injured.

Pelham police report that Carol S. Ratliff, 21, received first aid treatment from paramedics on the scene and was then rushed to Shelby Memorial Hospital where she died at 1:51.

The accident occurred Saturday night at 11:55 at the intersection of Crosscreek Trail and U.S. 31.

Police reports by PPD officer Virgil Rice indicate that Ray-

Smith indicted

by Bert Seaman

Investigators at the Shelby County Sheriff's Department and Mountain Brook police are continuing to investigate the case of a slain Mountain Brook grocer.

A 23 year old Shelby County man, charged with first degree murder in the death of Western Supermarket assistant manager Larry Osborne, was indicted by the Shelby County Grand Jury last week.

Steve Smith, who grew up in the Shelby Springs area where the body of the grocer was found, will enter his plea before District Judge Harold Walden on Jan. 4.

According to Fred Pickard, the lawyer appointed to defend the accused killer, he will file a motin for his client to undergo psychiatric testing.

Investigators still have not determined how the 20 year old Osborne came to accompany Smith to the wooded spot where his body was found tied to a tree Nov. 19.

Reportedly there are no other suspects in the case so far and no weapon has been found. Osborne was beaten to death with a stick.

Investigators are also continuing to search for the reported $8,000 that was found missing from the safe at the Mountain Brook store early on the morning of Nov. 18.

Smith is a prisioner at the Shelby County jail. At his bond hearing Nov. 28, he refused bail.

Grand jury clears Montevallo principal

When word reached Montevallo High School Friday morning that Principal W. C. Cratie Corbett had not been indicted by the grand jury, student office workers threw an impromptu party for the administrator.

Corbett, who has headed the school for twelve years, had been charged by a 15 year black student of making sexual advances toward her.

At a preliminary hearing Nov. 15, Marilyn Cunningham testified that the incident had taken place in the principal's office on the morning of Oct. 25.

After considering the evidence, Judge Robert Armstrong had ordered Corbett bound over to the grand jury.

In what is considered an unusual move, Corbett's lawyers Richard Bell and Robert M. Echols Jr. had the principal testify before the grand jury last week.

The 18 member panel listened to testimony for approximately ten hours and didn't disband on Wednesday until after midnight.

"I've never seen such a diligent jury," remarked Bell, who noted that in most instances testimony wasn't heard after 5 p.m.

"We feel that if everyone used the legal system as Mr. Corbett did," Bell continued, "instead of the court of public opinion, everything would work out beautifully."

Saying he was grateful for the tremendous support he had been given by faculty, students and members of the community, Corbett said the only reason he could give for the student bringing the charges against him were because of personal and emotional problems she might have.

"I was first exposed to the charges," the principal said, "at the preliminary hearing." He pointed out that the facts in the case showed that her story was "fabricated."

After Corbett's preliminary hearing, Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles had announced that the MHS principal would remain in his post until the grand jury's verdict.

If an indictment had been returned, Knowles said Corbett probably would be transferred to the central office.

According to reports, the sophomore who brought the suit against Corbett will remain as a student at Montevallo High School.

Alabaster Council donates gas to help senior citizens

by Bert Seaman

Services have had to be cut back in the Program on Aging due to the high cost of gasoline.

But after Monday night's Alabaster Council meeting, the group in that area will be able to get on the road again.

The panel voted to provide 25 gallons of gasoline a month to fuel the van which transports members to meetings and other destinations.

Sue Tedford, Coordinator for the program appeared at the meeting to ask for assistance. She told the panel that the cost of operating the vehicle was amounting to $150 monthly and a ceiling of $80 had been set by the agency.

Since Helena and Alabaster residents are also served by the program, Tedford said she was also going to ask assistance from those cities.

Since the Veterans of Foreign Wars are in the process of relocating their club, Post Commander James Carter appeared at the meeting to ask for the transfer of a malt brew and beverage license.

The VFW also submitted an application for a club liquor license. Carter assured the council that there would be a kitchen in the facility, that all health requirements would be met and that a proper entrance would be installed.

Renovation work is now underway to the building on 112 Main Street where the VFW Club is being relocated. It was formerly a 5&10 cent store.

When a vote was called for, the panel unanimously granted both requests.

Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek called to the council's attention the now unlit curve on the off ramp of I-65 where a number of accidents have occurred.

The lights were turned off there by order of Governor Fob James, Zuiderhoek reported, as a cost cutting measure.

Police Chief C. E. Carter affirmed that accidents have been reduced on the dangerous curve after the lights were installed.

After discussing the possibility of paying the $55 a month to have the lights turned back on until the interchange was opened, it was agreed a letter should be sent to the governor making the request.

Solar research

Energy saving advised at Farm-City banquet

Put the windows on the south side of the house, with an overhang.

That is the advice of Dr. Robert Brewer, who spoke to the annual banquet marking Farm-City Week in Columbiana last Thursday.

Brewer, a professor of poultry science at Auburn University, has been engaged in research in the uses of solar power in recent months. His studies are aimed primarily at the uses of solar power for livestock buildings, but many of the things he is finding can also be adopted for home builders.

He showed slides which illustrate why windows on the south side of a home are the best for conserving energy and using solar power.

In the winter, the sun's rays would be on the windows and would help heat the home, he said. In the summer, the rays would be directly overhead, and the overhang would prevent their adding additional heat to the home.

Brewer's talk touched on all the renewable sources of energy such as solar, wind, ocean tides, wood, biomass, hydroelectric energy and nuclear fission.

He indicated there is tremendous research going on in the field of solar heat for agricultural uses such as drying of grain, peanuts, etc.

He emphasized that people will need to change some of their traditional habits to conserve energy and to try new sources of energy.

The banquet was sponsored by the Columbiana Kiwanis Club and was attended by about 40 persons from throughout the county.

Problems

Pelham ponders dog, water, parking

by David Moore

Troubles with dogs, parking, telling the truth and city water were discussed Monday night at Pelham's council meeting.

Ordinances concerning the first three matters are still under consideration by the council.

Concerning the fourth matter, the council voted unanimously to sell $386,000 worth of bonds teo finance the costs incurred when the city expanded its water main system into areas of Highway 52 east and Highway 119 north, outside the city limits. The expansion also included a new well and pump, and a new half-million gallon water tank in the Oak Mountain area.

The bond sale will be used to close the FHA loan which the city took out to finance construction of the water system expansion. That expansion was completed last spring.

Mayor Burk Dunaway said he would send a copy of the bond issue to anyone desiring one.

"Send me a copy, will you," requested J.D. Walters. Walters is a resident of Pelham who had earlier during the meeting complained about not having city water for five or six years at his house off Highway 52.

Walters said that it didn't seem right that he paid taxes to Pelham, yet could not get city water to his house. He pointed out that former Pelham Mayor Paul Yeager had promised him water lines would be extended to his residence.

"I'm not going to argue with you, because it may not be right," Dunaway answered. The mayor did, however, promise to check and see what the cost would be to extend the lines to Walters' house.

Dunaway pointed out that no city taxes are channeled into the city water system.

The council is still considering a leash law for the city and is reviewing such a law, now in effect in Alabaster.

Mayor Dunaway stated that the city "probably gets as many complaints about dogs running loose as we do about anything else."

The ordinance currently undcer consideration would make it illegal for dogs to run loose without restraints such as a leash or fence.

Dogs would have to be tagged by the city and tagged also for rabies shots. Any dog running loose would be picked up by the city dog catcher and turned over to the county animal clinic where it would be kept for no less than six days before being disposed of in a humane fashion.

After hearing a complaint by R.C. Rockett of Cahaba Valley, the mayor instructed PPD Chief D.O. Watson to have officers cite motorists who park in the fire lanes in front of the Winn Dixie grocery on Hwy 31.

Watson agreed to have officers patrol the parking area more often.

The council decided to further study an ordinance requiring Pelham residents and businesses to fill out ad valorem assessment forms for vehicles.

Councilman Willard Payne pointed out that people will sometimes fill in the proper address but check a block on the form that says they do not live within the city limits.

City clerk Willie Mae Dennis attested to the fact that she had heard a long time resident of Pelham tell a tax clerk in Columbiana that he did not live inside the city, a claim which would have saved that person money on his ad valorem taxes.

Mrs. Dennis said that she reminded that person, in front of the tax clerk, that he did, indeed, live in Pelham.

The council decided not to act on the ordinance until its wording and intent could be made more precise.

Bill Hartzog of Crosscreek Trail thanked the council for having stop signs and rumble strips installed on that road, and thanked the police department for beefing up patrols there.

Referring to traffic control on Crosscreek Trail, Hartzog said, "Marked improvement has been noted."

Concilman Roy Jowers said he had spoken to the city's garbage collector about complaints he had received from residents who found their plastic garbage cans broken after pick up.

Jowers said he was told by the collector that the plastic cans tend to break when picked up during cold weather.

Fire Chief William Bryars reported that his department answered 58 alarms during November, 27 of which were fire calls and 31 of which were rescue calls.

Bryars said the firemen spent a total of 167 man hours training in November.

In addition to that training, PFD Lt. Rick Miller spent four days studying arson investigation at the State Fire College in Tuscaloosa, Bryars said.

Chief Watson reported that the PPD for November issued 215 citations, investigated 42 accidents, three of which were fatal. Police investigated 4 drug cases, 7 vandalisms, 1 rape, 1 grand larceny, 1 petty larceny, 5 burglaries, 1 assault and battery, 2 assaults on officers with deadly weapons, 1 armed robbery, 2 stolen vehicles and 2 cases of buying, receiving and concealing stolen property, he said.

Eight residents and all councilmen attended the meeting.

Helena names couple as Grand Marshals

The City Council of Helena named Mr. and Mrs. George Kelley to be Grand Marshals of the Christmas parade.

Mr. Kelley is 100 years old and his wife is nearly 95. They will be featured in the parade which begins at 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon.

In other action taken at the Monday night Helena Council meeting Richard L. Jones was added to the Police Auxiliary and the council agreed that Leonard Griffin may become a part time policeman. Griffin is already qualified having passed the course for policemen given by the Department of Public Safety.

Dough Sprouse from Riverchase will become new fire chief on December 15, the council announced.

The governing body reluctantly took steps to pass along the next increase in the cost of natural gas to consumers. On January 1 the cost will increase by 21 percent. There is no way the city can absorb the increase, the council agreed.

The proposed relocation of the Helena Post Office also came up for considerable discussion at the council meeting.

Several persons think it would be advantageous if the post office were located near the intersection of Highway 261 and 52, near Joe Tucker Park.

Crash kills Montevallo woman

mond Ratcliff, 22, was traveling south on U.S. 31 with his wife and daughter when they were struck by a car driven by Matthew Thornton, 17, of Siluria. Thornton was turning onto U.S. 31 from Crosscreek Trail.

Three year old Jennifer Ratliff was taken to Children's Hospital in Birmingham where she was listed Tuesday in fair condition. Raymond Ratliff was taken to University Hospital, treated and released the same day.

The second occupant of Thornton's car, Buford MacDaniel, 17, was taken to SMH emergency room, treated and released.

Pelham paramedics administered first aid to all victims at the scene.

According to Rice's report, the highway was blocked by the wreck for about 30 minutes.

Both vehicles were said to be totaled.

Helena backs

Carter's actions

The Mayor and City Council of Helena are supporting President Jimmy Carter in his actions in the present crisis in Iran.

Monday night the council unanimously passed a resolution backing the president and giving their support to his policies, especially during the past week.

A copy of the resolution is being mailed to the White House at once.

"I TOLD HIM THERE WAS NOTHING WRONG WITH THE SET.. THESE THINGS ARE REALLY HAPPENING!"

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of The First National Bank of Columbiana a member of the FDIC.

An early note to Santa lest I get caught up in the rat race and forget:

Send some little guy an air rifle-- a 50-shot Daisy. Some little guy who'll like it as much as I liked my 50-shot Daisy 60 years ago.

And oodles of grass sparrows in the long pasture from the public school to Mr. J. B. Turner's house on the curve. And a bright, sunny day so he can hunt from sun-up until it gets too dark to see.

A bright, shiny jelly glass like the little girl brought Mrs. Lillie Mae McKnight on Christmas Eve. A little girl whose folks didn't have money for presents.

Mrs. McKnight must have got a hundred presents that year. Little tokens of love from her fourth grade pupils.

But that night, before she went to bed, the little jelly glass was the only one she brought out to our house for Pennie and me to see.

An Auburn win for Hap Hatchett and an Alabama win for Skillet Bird. I don't know how you'll manage it, Santa, but do it anyhow. If it turns out you just can't do it, give Skillet a win and Hap a darn good try.

A dance at Annie John Haynes' house on East College, or Helen Leeper's house further up East College, or Mrs. Rose Teague's house still further up East College.

One each night through a whole Christmas week-end with girls like Jimmy Polk and Catherine Parker for guys like Fred Harrison and Holland Cox to dance with.

A ten inch snow, covering everything on Granny's hill, with half a hundred robins drunk on chinaberries.

A rabbit hunt in the snow, except the rabbit turned out to be a robin while the trail gave out. I suppose because the robin flew away.

A sling-shot with a brass handle and a pocket knife with two blades. And if some guy down the street got a new bicycle, so be it.

A whole sack full of spee-jink marbles. And a game under the magnolia tree, shooting for keeps. And two new songs: K-K-K-Katie and My Buddy.

A big hen, with dressing. And new home-made ham and red-eye gravy. And four socks, hung in a row, with candy and nuts and an apple and an orange and a banana.

And just for a little while, before the season is over, Santa, maybe a little dab of happiness. Just a little dab. That's all it'll take to make an old gink happy.

Employing 'special' people helps all

Employers in the Southeast have saved millions of dollars in taxes since January 1, 1979. They have done this by hiring and certifying workers under the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) program, according to James A. Lowe, of the U.S. Labor Department.

Says Lowe, "we urge even more Southeastern employers to take advantage of this innovative program. They will find it requires very little paper work but yields significant tax savings";'

The Targeted Jobs Tax Credit can be applied to wages paid by taxpaying employers betweeen Jan. 1, 1979, and Dec. 31, 1980, to certified employees hired from seven catagories of jobseekers. The credit is 50 percent of first-year wages up to $6,000 and 25 percent of second-year wages up to $6,000 for each eligible employee.

The seven targeted groups are:

1. Recipients of Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments,
2. Handicapped individuals referred from state vocational rehabilitation agencies and the Veterans Administration.
3. Youth, 18 through 24, in economically disadvantaged families, i.e., if income for the 6 months preceding the hiring date, annualized, is less than 70 percent of the Bureau of Labor Statisticsd lower living standard,
4. Vietnam-era veterans under 35 who are economically disadvantaged,
5. Recipients of general assistance payments (state or locally financed welfare) for 30 or more days,
6. Youth, 16 thorugh 18 participating in an approved cooperative education program, and
7. Ex-convicts (convicted of a felony) who are ecnomically disadvantaged and hired within 5 years of release from prison or date of conviction, whichever is later.

Information on the TJTC program can be obtained by calling a local office of the State Employment Service or the national jobs tax credit hotline, 800-424-5194 (toll free).

Heflin urges letters

Washington, D.C.--U.S. Senator Howell Heflin called upon all Alabamians to join in a nationwide movement demanding the immediate release of all the Americans being held hostage in Iran.

The Alabama Senator joined other Congressional leaders in urging a massive letter writing campaign to illustrate American solidarity on the Iranian issue.

"The Ayatollah Khomeini has said the American people do not support the President in his refusal to give in to blackmail to obtain the release of the 49 hostages still held in Iran," he said.

"It is urgent that we send a clear, unequivocal message to Khomeini and the student kidnappers that the American people are united and solidly behind the President and his policies," he said.

Heflin accused Khomeini of attempting to pit American against American and American against its government by releasing only some of the hostages.

"Since the Embassy takeover November 4, the American people have been asking themselves what they can do. Now there is something we can do," Heflin said.

"We can and we must get the message to the Ayatollah and the Iranian people that every man, woman and child in the United States demands release of the hostages."

Heflin urged each Alabamian to send a letter or a telegram to the Ayatollah Khomeini insisting he release the hostages. Letters can be sent to: Ayatollah Khomeini, Qum, Iran, or sent in care of the Iranian Embassy, Washington, D.C. 20008.

Editor's note: The Reporter occasionally receives unsolicited material for publication. The quality of the work varies widely, and usually the topic is something that we feel would hold little interest to our readers.

But this one is unusual and thought-provoking and we pass it along with the young author's letter. (Although he offered three stories for the price of one, we selected the one we thought was the best.)

Dear Sir or Madam;

I am sending to you three stories that I have written in hopes that you will consider printing them in your newspaper. You may print one or all three once for the price of U.S. $6.00. I am a thirteen year old trying to save up enough to enter college when I am older. Any comments you may have would be welcome.

Three Days To Hear

If I had only three days left to hear, I would spend them like this: The first day I would spend in the forest, being audience to the birds and hearing the great orchestra of a muddy pond. Then I think I would just lie down upon a soft, velvety, emerald green bed of moss and let all the sounds of the forest permeate my senses.

The second day I would go to the vast, endless ocean and hear the seagulls cry, the gigantic, frothing waves crash on the shore, and the happy cries of children diving off the rocks, and to hear the foghorn spout its dismal warnings.

Then I would go to a ferry, and hear the massive docking port doors yawn slowly open, and hear the cars whilst they are boarding. Then I myself would board the massive vessel and listen to the traffic director as he directs the cars to their proper positions. Then I would walk up the stairs, thudding my feet on the hard wood to hear the groaning and creaking this action would produce.

Once standing on the passenger deck, I would closely observe the long, mournful cry of the horn.

During the trip I would hearken to the lapping of the waves against the massive hull. That night I would be lulled to sleep by the music of my favorite tapes.

The next morning I would lie awake in bed awhile and listen to the cheery song of the birds' morning orchestra. Then at breakfast I would give ear to the sizzling of frying bacon, the popping of the toaster, and the sound of juice as it poured into a cup.

Next I would go to a farm and listen to the rooster's cry, the cows cheerful "moo-oo", the horses as they romp, the sheep and the pigs, the dogs and the cats.

The last thing I would do would be to donate my tape recorder and tapes to the Institute For The Blind, and to hear their surprised and happy cries as they received this gift.

Under The Courthouse Dome

Robert Tucker, Jr., Civil Defense Director for Shelby County reported to the County Commission that progress is being made on the application to lengthen the runway at Shelby County Airport.

The Federal Aviation Administration has ruled the airport is eligible for funding by the FAA and can now "compete with similar applications from other grantees."

In addition to letters received earlier by Tucker, backing the plan to lengthen the runway he also received a letter from John E. Virtue, vice president - operations of S I Lime Company.

In his letter Virtue said, in part,

"One of our lime plants is located about three miles from the airport and it would be excellent if our corporate aircraft could land at Shelby County rather than Birmingham Municipal Airport which is the case now because of inadequate runway length at Shelby.

I hope your plans are approved. The results would provide a great asset for the county."

ADC payments average $38 per month

Editor's Note: This article is one in a series on the programs and services of the Department of Pensions and Security, which has offices in all 67 counties.

Because Alabama traditionally pays among the lowest public assistance benefits in the nation, it is not a very good state in which to be poor, said Gary Cooper, Commissioner of the State Department of Pensions and Security.

"We need to raise our payments," Cooper said. "but, like many other state agencies, we operate on a very tight budget that, so far, has prevented us from increasing the amount we pay."

"When people talk about "welfare" they are usually talking about the Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) program. ADC is a public assistance program that provides aid to children who have lost the care or support of one or both parents because of death, illness or continued absence from the home.

The payment for each ADC recipient currently averages just under $38 per month. Cooper said that this figure is among the very lowest in the nation, with only two other states and Puerto Rico paying less. In comparison, he added, at least 13 states pay more than $100 per recipient per month.

The amount paid to ADC recipients is determined, in part, by how much money is available to pay them, said Cooper. The money comes from a combination of federal and state funds, with the federal government paying the major share.

The ratio of federal to state funds changes from time to time, but the match is currently about 71 percent federal and 29 percent state. "The federal dollars brought into the state through ADC contribute considerably to our economy," Cooper pointed out. "They help business and industry while they are helping poor people."

Although the cost of living in Alabama is lower than in many states, it is not low enough to justify such low ADC payments, said Cooper. Other programs such as food stamps help out, but ADC recipients in Alabama are still far worse off than in most other states.

The average payment to all 60,000 ADC families is just undert $110 because the average family size is less than three persons. A family must meet several qualifications in order to receive ADC. The child, or children, must be under 18, or under 21 if in school or training. there are also limits regarding income and resources. If a family qualifies for ADC because one of the parents has deserted, the family, in most instances, must cooperate in trying to obtain child support. Most able-bodied applicants must also register for work with the Work Incentive Program, called WIN.

Can diet cut cancer rate?

If America alters its eating habits, could it cut its cancer rate?

Increased evidence pointing to a link between cancer and America's dietary habits has led to preliminary suggestions by the National Cancer Institute that the average person might take certain steps to inhibit his chances of developing cancer.

Scientists at The University of Alabama in Birmingham's Comprehensive Cancer Center are collaborating with colleagues from the first of the nation's fou. nutrition sciences centers in investigating this possible link between cancer and eating habits.

Dr. Richard A. Gams, deputy director of the Cancer Center, and Dr. Charles E. Butterworth, chairman of the Department of Nutrition Sciences, agree that preliminary findings around the country point to the beneficial effects of these diet-changes:

*Maintain the body weight best for the individual, especially avoiding overweight.

*Reduce consumption of fat, preferably so that it represents 30 percent of caloric intake; it now is 40 percent, a figure called imprudent by medical authorities.

*Try to maintain an intake of some fiber foods regularly.

*Seek a balanced diet based on a variety of foods.

*Use alcohol in moderation if at all.

The scientists say, "Good nutrition is essential to maintenance of healthy body tissue and critical to the body's ability to heal itself after being damaged by cancer."

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

The Question of Inherited Sin

The doctrine of Calvanism teaches that when Adam swined in the Garden of Eden, Adam's descendents were all totally depraved and inherited Adam's sin. Thus, we are all rank swiners and that at birth. This doctrine violates the free-moral agency of man and completely disregards clear scriptures that teach that little children are free of sin. It also disregards what took place when Adam sinned, which this article will discuss.

First, Adam and Eve were mortal, fleshly, when they were created and placed in the garden. When Eve was made from the rib of Adam, Adam stated, "This is now bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh." They were to eat of the fruit of the garden in order to sustain the food needs of the flesh. If they had been spirit beings, what need would have existed for physical food?

Second, since flesh has the natural inevitable deteroration leading to death, something was necessary to keep Adam and Eve from dying. The tree of life was given and eaten for the purpose. Otherwise, they would have died physically.

Third, when Eve was faced with the first temptation, she sinned. Satan no doubt wasted no time in tempting her, and she sinned immediately.

Fourth, the sin of Adam and Eve did not cause man to be totally depraved. It did separate Adam and Eve from God (Isaiah 59:1,2), but they no doubt were later saved. The way the descendents of Adam and Eve were influenced by the sin is that they would die physically, as Adam and Eve did. This is the only way. When Adam and Eve sinned, they were put out of the Garden of Eden, thus no longer able to partake of the tree of life and thus live forever. We are likewise unable to eat of the tree of life and partake of this virtual "fountain of youth."

Fifth, Adam and Eve, as free-moral agents, had the innate potential to do right and also the innate potential to do wrong. Man today has the same innate potentials: The Bible nowhere indicates that the sin of Adam brought depravity upon man which is inherent and innate. Such teaching does away with the free-moral agency of man. Where is the one scripture, even, that teaches such a doctrine? Even in this sinful environment do many people resist the first temptation (which Eve did not do). Man has no greater innate tendency to do evil today than does he have the tendency to do right. It is for this reason that Ezekiel states, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die; the father shall not bear the iniquity of the son, nor the son of the father." (Ezekiel 18:20) Christ could say that little children are like the kingdom of heaven. (Matthew 18:3) Surely Christ would not liken the kingdom to rank, depraved sinners! "Like sheep, we all have gone astry." (Isaiah 53:6) We were not born astry.

Sixth, we are fleshly like Adam, our physical father, but God is the father of our spirits. Like Adam, when he lost access to the tree of life, we lost access to the tree of life. Thus, we die physically. However, we do not inherit our spirits from Adam. They are direct from God. (Hebrews 12:9) Does man inherit evil spirits from God? If so, God would of necessity be evil. He is not! We are not totally inclined to evil!

Fire razes house in Columbiana

The Columbiana residence of Lonzo Hall was totally destroyed by fire Sunday evening.

When the fire was discovered around 8 p.m., it was thought that Hall and his son were inside.

Calera and Shelco firemen were called to back up the Columbiana department. However, when they arrived, it was determined that no one was at home.

According to Columbiana Fire Chief Bob Barrett, the house was well involved when firefighters arrived.

"We flooded it down and stayed on the scene until 10:30 p.m.," the Fire Chief reported.

The wood frame home is located on a side road near the Southern Railroad depot.

Traffic fatalities across state continue their downward trend

Alabama traffic fatality figures continue to reflect a downward trend in all four categories, according to the Office of Highway and Traffic Safety.

The categories of pedestrian, bicyclists, motorcyclists and motor-vehicle occupants total 839 deaths from January to October of this year, a decrease of 77 over the same period last year.

The OHTS credits its own programs, more law enforcement, less auto travel and the 55 mph national speed limit for the decrease in the number of traffic-related fatalities.

DID YOU KNOW?

It costs less for us to read your electric meter than for you to read it and report the information to us.

We have to process 45,000 meter readings a day. The readings are recorded on special forms and in a certain order so that they can be handled quickly, accurately, and efficiently by a computer. Even if everyone read their own meter and sent the information to us on time, a lot of additional, expensive work would be necessary before our computer could read it. We're always looking for ways to cut costs, but customers reading their own meters isn't one of them.

County starts ID system to curb thefts of farm equipment

Seven digits and three letters can make a big difference. They can that is, if they're stamped on a piece of equipment or personal property that has been stolen.

Sheriff Buddy Glasgow is administiring a program recently begun in the county for Rural Property Protection. And if those ten characters have been placed on item that is stolen, it will more than likely be recovered no matter where it ends up.

Ralph Golden, with the Alabama Farm Bureau who serves as director of the program, points out that some stolen farm equipment has turned up in such far flung places as Africa and South America.

Statistics show that rural theft has tripled in the past five years. In 1978, two organized theft rings were broken up in Marshall and Clarke counties, yielding more than $3 million of stolen farm equipment.

Another in Monroe county involved over one million dollars worth of tractors, logging equipment and other machinery.

Reporting that he has been working for a year and a half getting the program going in Alabama, Golden noted that it has resulted in a 35 per cent reduction in theft in one of the first states to use it.

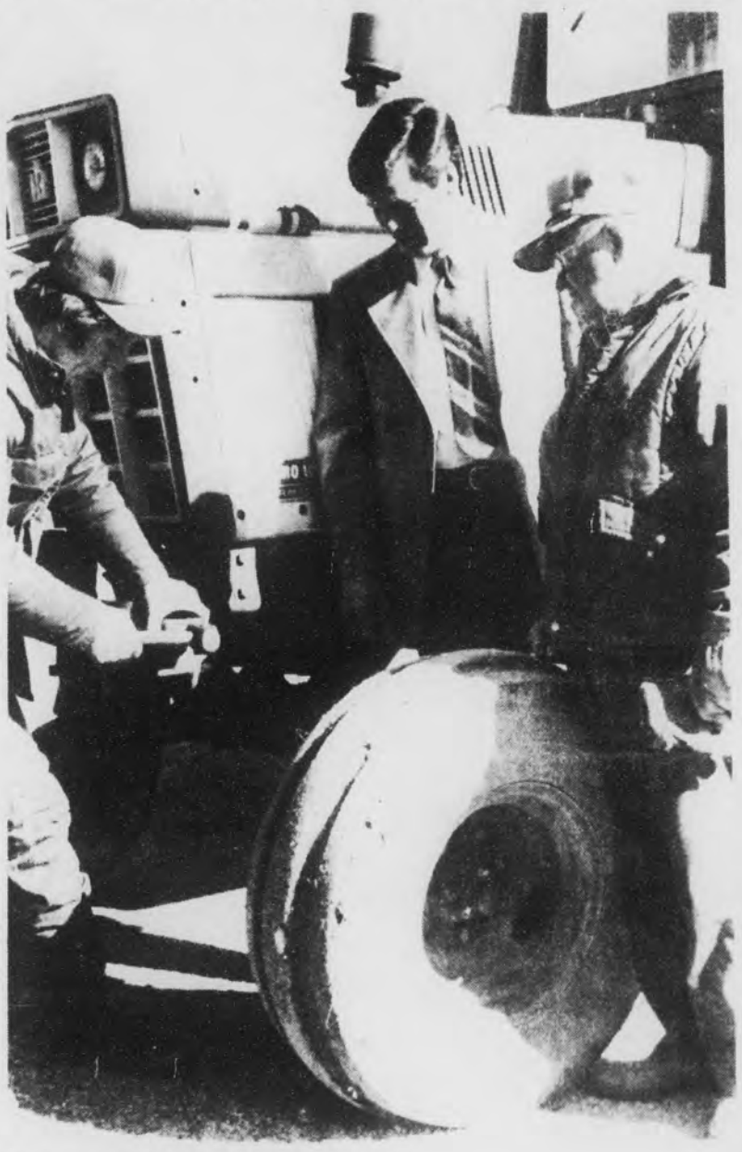
The marking system was developed by the FBI, Golden noted, and it includes state, county, the first letter of the persons surname and where he falls in the list of people with that letter in the county marking system.

Last week, Golden, Sheriff Glasgow and Tommy Martin, a field representative with the Alabama Farm Bureau, traveled to the Royce Morris farm near Columbiana to put the first stamp markings on his equipment.

According to Golden, the identification number should not only be placed in certain specified places, but in other locations on the property being marked that will be known only to the owner.

He also noted that it would be a good idea to put up a sign making it known that equipment has been marked.

Anyone interested may contact Sheriff Glasgow to make arrangements to use his marking set.



Preventing theft

Randy Morris affixes the first identification stamp on a tractor which is part of the equipment on the family farm south of Columbiana. Looking on are Sheriff Buddy Glasgow and Royce Morris.

WIC offers nutrition to women and children

A special food program called WIC is available to residents of Shelby County. The Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children is a program designed to provide supplemental food to certain infants (up to one year old), children up to five years old, pregnant women up to six weeks after delivery and breast-feeding women.

Participants must be at "nutritional risk" because of both inadequate income and nutritional need.

The purpose of WIC is to provide good health care and teach how to eat the right foods to be healthy.

The foods provided by WIC include milk, eggs, cheese, cereal high in iron and juice high in Vitamin C. Vouchers issued to the participants are redeemable for these foods at local grocery stores.

The County Health Department can provide additional information.

FURNISHING THE AREA THAT GIVES FIRST & LAST IMPRESSION

Remember the first and last place a guest sees in your home is your entrance area--and, fortunately, no matter what the size of that area, you can do an attractive furnishing job there.

You can put your best foot forward in your entrance area. Even if you have only a tiny space, there are ways you can show both hospitality and decorating skill. It is what you make it.

It's one place, by the way, you can really personalize. For example, you can use an outstanding accessory or perhaps one dramatic piece of furniture there.

You can also make the area useful with such things as a chest and mirror, which will not only dress it up, but also serve functionally. If you have the room, a chair or bench can be helpful.

The entrance area is a good place for a picture or other attractive wall items, and don't forget the right lighting.

You can display friendliness and pretty decorating in your entrace area, and we can help you with furnishings there--and, of course, for any room in your home. Stop in and look around.

W.T. Chichester's farewell portrayal of Charles Dickens reading his "A Christmas Carol" will be presented by the University of Montevallo Department of Speech and Theatre Sunday, Dec. 9, in UM's Reynolds Studio Theatre. The performance begins at 8 p.m.

Chiche ter, who will retire this yeai after 18 years at UM as a professor of speech, began the now traditional Christmas readings in 1970 at UM.

For many years a professional actor and director, Chichester began the holiday readings to revive a tradition of one of his professors at the University of North Carolina, Frederick Koch.

Each year, "Chi" and several other of Koch's former students continue the tradition in his honor in various parts of the country. Chichester said.

At Chelsea High

Students expelled

A problem that was described by Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles as "overripe when it fell off the tree," brought about the decision by the Board of Education to expel two Chelsea High School sophomores.

The panel voted last Tuesday that Kim and Carol Welborne, who are cousins, remain away from the school until the fall term.

Although school administrators, teachers and some patrons from the Chelsea school attended the meeting, the parents of the girls were not present.

Mrs. Shirley Welborne and Mrs. Judy Welborne had requested their names be put on the board's agenda so they could speak at the meeting.

When she was contacted later in the week, Mrs. Shirley Welborne related that the girls hadn't been suspended when she had asked for an opportunity to speak.

Explaining that she and Mrs. Judy Welborne had planned to discuss another problem with the Board, she said the two had gone through channels to handle the matter without any success and she hadn't anticipated that the Board would take any action either.

Neither of the women knew that the matter of expelling the girls would be discussed, Mrs. Welborne said.

Commenting on the Board's action, Knowles said that the two girls had had a number of suspensions. Saying he didn't want to give the impression the girls were "bad," he described the situation as one of "attitude."

Both he and Mrs. Welborne admitted that the girls had been having problems at Chelsea before this year.

Because of discipline problems in the schools, the superintendent said that a great deal of valuable teaching time was lost every year. He indicated that steps were being taken to remedy the situation but wouldn't elaborate on what they were.

According to one source, the incident which resulted in the girls being expelled involved one of them slapping a classmate who had reportedly told a lie about her.

Knowles said he hoped the girls would return to school at Chelsea in the fall, but they say they don't plan to.

Gymnasts show winning ways

On their first outing, members of the Shelby County YMCA gymnastics team proved they can be winners.

The 27 member team traveled to Gardendale Nov. 16 and returned home loaded down with ribbons.

According to team coach Mary Byrum, judges were impressed with her girls' work which included floor exercises, beam, vault and bars.

This was the first meet for the recently organized team, Byrum reported. Expressing pride in the girls' performance, the coach said she was also pleased with their parents' backing.

At their Thursday afternoon sessions, Byrum said the team was now working on a meet set for Feb. 23. She noted that their first outing had given them an idea as to how they compared with other gymnasts.

In addition to the gymnastic team, Byrum also has classes in the sport which are held Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

Residents of Briarcliff Nursing Home and a young guest look on as members of the Montevallo Evening Garden Club put up and trim a Christmas tree.

The group also sang carols and enjoyed refreshments at the annual afair.

At Briarcliff

Christmas season begins

There was a faraway look in the eyes of some Briarcliff Nursing Home residents Saturday as members of the Montevallo Evening Garden Club put up a Christmas tree and trimmed it.

The men and women gathered in the dining room of the Alabaster facility remembered bygone years when they had taken part in putting trees up in their own homes.

Some of them helped garden club members trim the tree with ornaments the club has made over the years.

The newest decorations were made of stuffed felt. They included a train, a horn, a star and a boat. Some ornaments resembled stained glass and others are painted wooden shapes.

Garden club members say they look forward to the annual visit which they've been making for the past 15 years.

In addition to the tree trimming and refreshments, the club also provides musical entertainment. Members of Dr. John Stewart's conducting class from the music department at the University of Montevallo performed and led residents in singing Christmas carols.

The Christmas tree was provided by Richard Ballentine and Jim Wilkinson helped the garden club put it up.

Pelham Panthers tromp Carroll in overtime

by David Moore

Pelham picked the hard way to do it, but eventually got the job done. The Panthers beat John Carroll Friday night in overtime, 60-58.

It was the first defeat Pelham has handed the Birmingham team in the series' four year history.

"It was quite a moral victory for our kids," coach Tomy Taylor said. "I hope they found out something about themselves."

If the Panthers did learn something about themselves, it was that they can come from behind to win, because that's just what they did.

Taylor's team worked themselves into an early 14-4 hole with a defensive breakdown and eight fouls in the first period.

Pelham took their only lead in regulation time during the second stanza when Jeff Adams grabbed the rebound on the second shot of a Pelham one-on-one and put it through the hoop for a 18-15 lead.

But the lead was short lived and the Panthers played most of the game on the low side of the scoreboard, sinking in the third quarter to a 41-51 deficit.

In the fourth quarter, however, the defense found itself and held John Carroll to five points, allowing the home team Panthers to close within one point with 52 seconds left on the clock.

John Carroll hit a free throw with 14 seconds left and Pelham called timeout.

The Panthers threw the ball in, worked it under the goal and missed two shots before guard Keith Forstman hit the hoop with 00:00 left on the clock.

After a brief discussion with the scorekeepers, the officials ruled Forstman's shot good and the game went into a three minute overtime with a score of 56 all.

With 20 seconds left in the game, Pelham hit a free throw to make the score 60-58.

John Carroll missed a free throw with 13 seconds left on the clock, and failed to cash in on an interception a few seconds later.

"I was glad to win this one," Taylor confessed. "They (John Carroll) got that big lead and we had to play catch up."

The coach went on to say that the Panthers played "intensely and over their heads" to come from behind and win.

Contributing to Pelham's hitting 47 percent of their shots from the field were Mike Edwards with 18 points, Mike Enoch with 15 points and Jeff Adams with 12. Taylor complimented center Buddy Champion for a good defensive effort and 10 points.

Now 3-1 on the season, the Panthers faced West Blocton in an away game Monday night after press time.

Last year the Panthers started out the season with an 0-6 record.

Game saver

Had this shot by Pelham's Keith Forstman (32) come one second later John Carroll would have walked away victorious Friday night. But Forstman was on time (and target) and the Panther took the game 60-58 in the ensuing overtime. (Photo by Moore)

Calera takes Wildcats in wild game

by David Moore

Calera home team beat the Shelby County Wildcats Thursday night. After four foul-filled quarters of basketball the score was 58-53.

"It's a ragged game," one of the officials commented during the third quarter while the teams lined the lane for a County free-throw.

Seven players, five of them from the Eagle's bench, fouled out, and both teams had numerous turnovers. Three technical fouls were committed.

"We threw the ball away 19 times in the first half," Wildcat coach Don Pouncey said after the game when asked it he, too, thought the game was "ragged".

He added that Shelby County hit only four of 14 free throws in the first half. (For the game, SCHS hit 40 percent of its free throws and Calera hit on 30 percent.)

"They got after us," Pouncey said of the Eagles. He pointed out, however, that his team showed a good effort during the last seven minutes of the game.

The Eagles, who were never behind in the game, at one point posted a 15 point lead, but the Wildcats had cut that to five points by the last nine seconds of the contest.

High scorers for Calera were guard Andrew Dowdell and forward Bill Seay, with 20 and 19 points respectively.

For Shelby County, Terry Carter scored 14 points, Mike Burns scored 12 and Arthur Johnson scored 9.

Coach Pouncey pointed out that Johnson was not quite up to par after a recent injury, and that Fred Lilly was not even able to play also due to an injury.

"You'll be a good club come tournament time," Calera coach Mark Lovett told Pouncey after the game.

"I was pleasantly surprised," Lovett commented to the Reporter. "That first win is always the toughest."

The Eagles were winless coming into the game after dropping their first two meets to Jemison and Clanton in the Clanton Tip-Off Tournament, but, Lovett pointed out, at that time the team had only had three days of practice and had three players hurt.

"I look for us to be a real good team come February," Lovett said.

Tuesday night the Eagles were scheduled to play Clanton again for a shot at revenge, but the score of that game was unknown at press time.

Raiders beat Edgewood

The Shelby Academy Raiders upped their District 7 standings to 2-0 Saturday night with 50-38 defeat of Edgewood.

The Raiders fought off an early 2-7 deficit to lead at the half, 21-19.

"We were cold all night," Coach Dewayne Kervin said of his team's shooting, but pointed out that they played "very good defense," especially during the second half.

In the Raiders' guard position department, Dirk Carson scored 16 points, Terry Crabb scored 14 points and Billy Eiland came off the bench to score six points. Center Obie Moore scored ten points.

The Raiders put the game away in the third stanza with fast breaks and a strong defense.

Referring again to the defensive effort by Shelby Academy, Kervin said, "I think it helped us because we learned we can win in other ways."

"You bet your antlers"

Alvin Smith of Siluria was out on the first day of deer season, and he was in luck, getting his first big deer.

His story, as he wrote it to the Shelby County Reporter, is as follows:

"It was six o'clock in the morning but we were already excited. My friend Jeff Jones had spent the night with us.

It was the first day of deer season and dad was letting us use his jeep.

We drove to the end of the road, then we got out and walked. Then, about 8 we saw some does and walking behind them, were two bucks. I shot and knew I had hit him, but he took off running.

So we went after him, following the trail of blood that he left. We could see him at times and would shoot at him. We trailed him for about a mile then we saw him again, lying on the ground. He was a ten pointer.

After some of the excitement was gone, we field dressed him, then started for the jeep. We found it to be quite a job getting him out of the woods. Was it worth the hard work? You bet your antlers."

Ragged game

When the referree finally put his whistle to rest Thursday night in Calera, the Eagles had beaten the SCHS Wildcats by a score of 58-53. Being early in the season, both teams still had a little football on their minds and numerous fouls were committed during the game. (Photo by Moore)

Vincent gets off on right foot

by David Moore

There's nothing like starting off on the right foot. And that's just what the Vincent Yellowjackets did Thursday night against the 3-0 St. Clair County roundball squad by beating them 66-50.

It was Vincent's first game of the season, and came after only two weeks of practice.

Vincent foward Dexter McCrimon, demonstrating to the large home crowd what a pair of hot hands can do, fired off a total of 31 points and pulled in a dozen rebounds. McCrimon was the county's leading scorer last season with a 25-point game average.

St. Clair beat Vincent twice last year, and Thursday night's turnaround no doubt took a little of that bad tasting memory from the mouths of coach Richard Crumpton and his eight-man team, five of whom are returning from last season.

After the first quarter, which saw the visitors take an 11-6 lead, the jackets bounced back with 9 unanswered points and led for the remainder of the game.

Vincent guard David Norwood scored 14 points and the "big kid," Victor Datcher (center), who played with a temperature and the flu, scored nine points, pulled in 14 rebounds and blocked three shots.

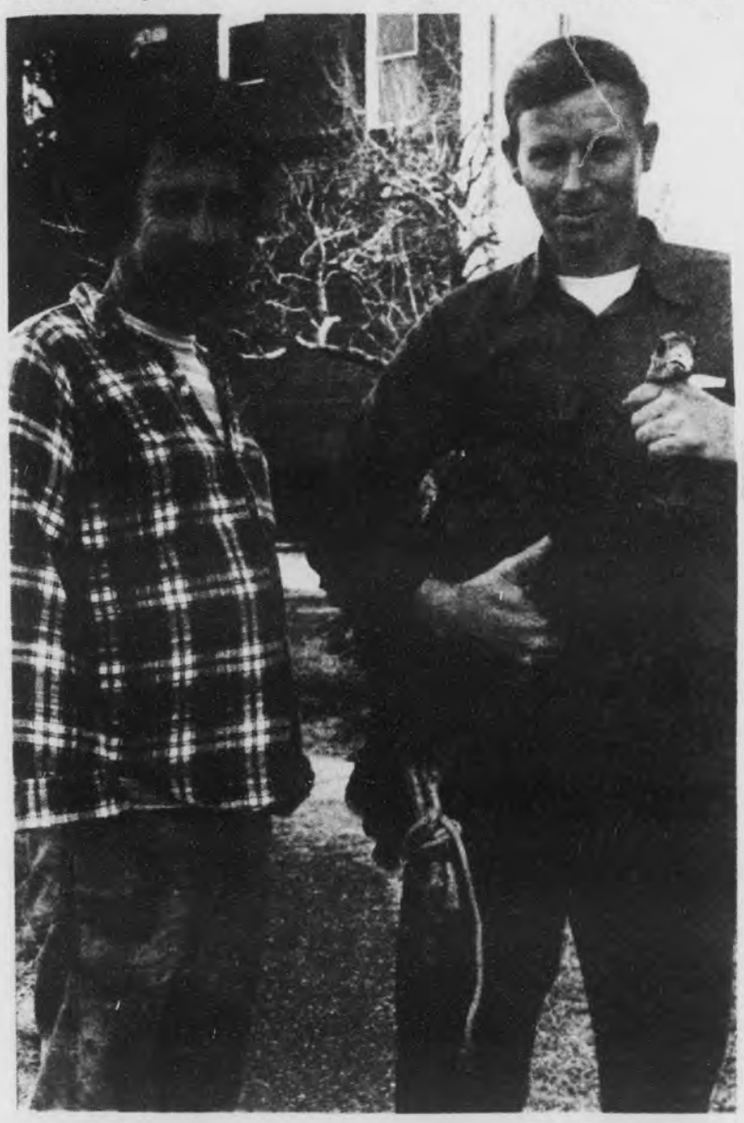
"I was real pleased," commented Crumpton, noting that his team only turned over the ball five times in their first outing.

"Anytime you win you're happy," Crumpton said, "but we're not near the team we can be, yet."

Before the start of the game the basketball team presented a plaque to retiring Vincent athletic director and head football coach Gary Garrett for the seven years he dedicated to Yellowjackets sports. Garrett posted a 42-26-2 record including an 8-2 '79 season.

Tuesday night Vincent travelled to Sylacauga to play that team in the opening round of the Mid State Tournament. The outcome of that game had not been posted at press time.

"There's nothing like jumping into the fire early," Crumpton commented to the Reporter before the game, noting that Sylacauga probably had the best 3-A team in the state. Vincent is a 2-A team.



Fleet footed

Harvey Jones (holding turkey), and Jimmy Blankenship, proved you don't necessarily need a gun in order to get a wild gobbler. The two Shelby men caught their gobbler by chasing him on foot for about 75 feet.

Turkey loses foot race

Turkey hunters take note! According to two Shelby men, you don't have to use a gun to get a gobbler.

And the two can prove what they say. They chased a bird they saw alongside the highway and caught him.

Jimmy Blankenship and Harvey Jones were driving along a dirt road in the Prospect community between Calera and Columbiana last Tuesday when they spied three birds.

After pursing the wild fowl about 75 feet, they said that two of them took off but they managed to grab the third one.

The impromptu hunters weren't sure of what they were going to do with their catch, but they indicated they would probably be razzing some of their friends who had been unsuccessful in going after the birds with guns.

Roundballers age 6-14 sign up now

Young roundball players (of both sexes) are invited to register for Youth Basketball at the Shelby County YMCA.

Four teams are currently in the making, divided by ages into 6-8 year olds, 10 and under, 12 and under and 14 and under.

The season starts January 5 and games will be played at Riverchase Middle School.

Registration will run through December 15.

Anyone interested in coaching one of the teams is invited to call the Y for more information.

More information on registration can be obtained by calling the Y at 663-6504.

Montevallo's Bulldogs record 55-49 win over W. Blocton

The Montevallo Bulldogs evened out their record at 2-2 Friday night with a 55-49 win over West Blocton.

The game was not as close as the score might indicate. Montevallo increased its 30-21 half time lead to 45-25 by the end of the third quarter.

At that point Coach Kurt Pnazek began substituting freely, and everybody on the bench saw action on the home court.

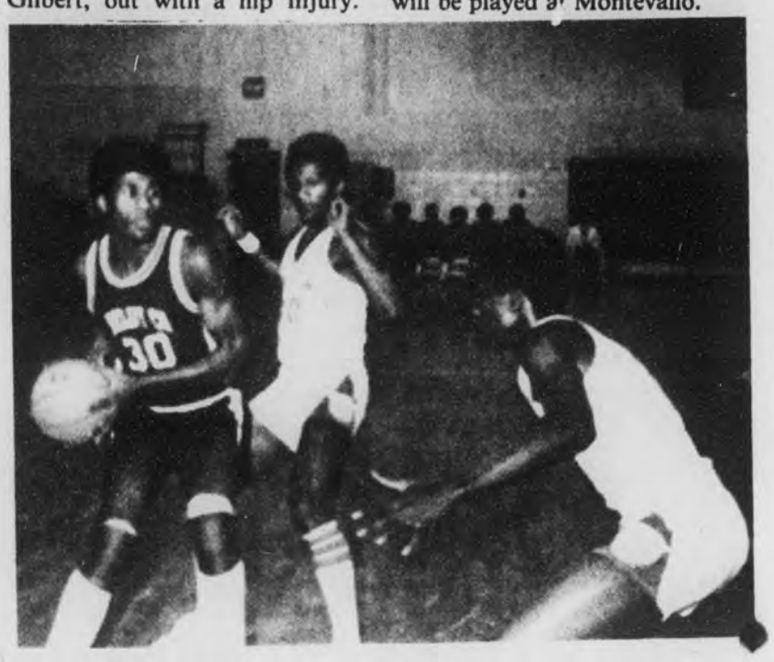
"We did a real good job on them defensively," Pnazek said, noting with pride that West Blocton put only three points on the board during the third quarter. He said the Bulldogs pulled in 41 rebounds to their opponents' 33.

"We've improved quite a bit over the last week," Pnazek added.

Top players for Montevallo were guard Brad Jones, who racked up 166 points and a dozen rebounds, and center Jerome Jones who was ten and ten in points and rebounds. Guard Derrick Stewart scored 10 points.

Pnazek said he was very pleased with the performance of tenth grader Tim Jones, who filled the starting shoes of guard Yuell Gilbert, out with a hip injury. Tim Jones scored six points.

Montevallo faced Holy Family Tuesday night, but that score was unknown at press time. The Bulldogs face off with Bibb County Friday night. Both games will be played at Montevallo.



Tough going

Arthur Johnson (30) and the rest of the Shelby County Wildcats found the going tough all Friday night long as the Childersburg home team tromped them 106-50. SCHS is now 0-4 on the season. (Photo by Fred Guarino.)

Lightning bolt cancels game

Lightning speed has been known to win basketball games many times. But it was a lightning bolt that canceled Thompson's Friday night game against Bibb County.

A zap from the sky sizzled the transistors in the Thompson scoreboard last week and the game had to be rescheduled for Tuesday, December 11, at 7:45 in the Warrior gym.

Coach Eddie Williams' roundball squad was 3-0 on the season going into the first round of the Mid-State Conference Tournament Tuesday night in Sylacauga.

First deer at age 78

Floyd Lynn fulfilled a longtime ambition during the second week of deer season last month.

He brought down the first deer of his life - and it was a big one. His friends estimated it weighed nearly 200 pounds. The buck had seven points. Lynn was hunting in the Chelsea Game Preserve a the time.

A lifelong resident of Shelby County, Lynn's home is on County Highway 41, the Dunnavant Road.

Calera man kills deer

James Cecil White of Calera bagged a 237 pound, 10 point buck while hunting in Barbour County on November 23.

He was hunting with Rickey Posey and Roy Poe. All three men are natives of Shelby County.

Hornets on lookout for win number one

After three outings the Chelsea Hornets are still looking for win number one.

After losing their opener to Altamont 64-40, the Hornets dropped two straight games in the Winterboro Invitational on Thursday and Friday.

The Alabama School for the Deaf (ASD) defeated Chelsea 59-45 in the first game, and Fayetteville beat them Friday night 72-55.

"We're not playing good enough defense, yet," commented coach Mike Sims, pointing out that the team would be working on that problem in the near future.

And if they get the kinks out, they have not one, but two chances at revenge, because they play ASD at home Thursday and Fayetteville there Friday.

Coach Sims said he is expecting a lot of good action from his center Terry Kelley and guard Russell Roberts.

Shelby locale prominent in new book 'A Christmas Gift'

Shelby County is featured in a new book, A Christmas Gift, written by Shelby native Jesse Howard Merrell, now a professional writer in Washington, D.C.

Set in Shelby County in the late 1940's the story of a young boy's search for the true meaning of Christmas specifically mentions Columbiana, Calera and Mostellers. there are also Sylacauga and Birmingham scenes.

Merrell, a 1957 graduate of Shelby High School, believes every reader will quickly identify with something about Jimmy Martin's frantic search (for the meaning of Christmas) and what it reveals: the harshness felt by Jimmy's daddy and his friend Vernon's daddy, the pain felt by both boys' mothers. For them, Christmas had degenerated into bitter quarreling, drunkenness, rejection and poverty. Jimmy feels there must be more, something closer to what Christ, the Son of God, represents to mankind.

But finding it takes more than a good grandmother, more than a kind black man named Seeb, more than a soul-stirring sermon. It takes profound events, propelling the cast over a stormy chasm of unforgettable events.

Merrell uses what he calls emotional, rather than physical, descriptions of his characters.

The 447-page hardcover novel is called "powerful, continually tense, exciting, relevant. A story gripping in its human value, electrifying in its spectacular finale, poignant in its concluding message. A touching package, whose gushing warmth will melt the heart of the coldest Scrooge--and offers a towering gift that may reshape the American mold of Christmas."

Merrell said he has been most encouraged by people who have told him they can identify with so many scenes in the book--often things they had almost forgotten. "Curiously enough" Merrell told the Reporter, "I considered leaving out some of those things people have now found so pleasing. I'm glad I didn't."

The author grew up in Shelby and was a star baseball pitcher at Shelby High School. After an arm injury cut short his professional career with the Cincinnati Redlegs, Merrell entered journalism.

In five years as a Virginia newspaper editor, he won five awards in the annual Virginia Press Association writing contest, including first place for news writing and first place for editorial writing. He also won a Freedoms Foundation award and his articles have been entered in the Congressional Record.

Merrell's mother, Emma Merrell, lives in Shelby, as does a brother, Lynn, math teacher at Columbiana Middle School, and a sister, Pattie Brasher, wife of Howard Brasher, pastor of Antioch Baptist Church. Another brother, Mathis, is manager of the Libyan operations for Page Communications Engineers in Tripoli.

Merrell, also a Dale Carnegie instructor in Washington, sponsors an annual writing contest at Shelby High School, awarding $300 for the best essay defending and promoting religious liberty. He sponsors another contest at Shelby Elementary School, awarding $25 to the student who best demonstrates honesty, integrity and character.

CVA Rebels open season with trip to Montgomery

The Rebels of Coosa VAlley Academy were slated to open their regular season basketball play with a road game against Central of Montgomery Tuesday night.

Coach Mark Green expressed his concern over the loss of four of his starters, Scott Lee, Troy Beavers, Eric Davis and Randy Waldrop. The Central game will test the Rebels' bench talent.

It remains to be seen if any of the injured CVA players will be in shape for the big district game to be played Friday night against the defending championship team from Bessemer.

Saturday night the Rebels face Scott Prep.

IRS wants volunteers

Dwight T. Baptist, District Director of Internal Revenue Service, announced that volunteers are needed to assist low-income and elderly taxpayers who have difficulty completing basic Federal income tax forms.

IRS sponsors the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program, according to Baptist, to help those who cannot afford private assistance and who are unable or unwilling to use Taxpayer service offices staffed by IRS employees.

Volunteers do not have to meet any education or experience requirements to train as VITA assistors. However, each volunteer must complete a two- or three-day IRS instruction session in basic income tax procedure. IRS will provide training materials, instructors and publications to clubs and organizations willing to sponsor programs.

Individuals or groups interested in participating should call the IRS toll-free telephone number for details.

100th win eludes UM's Coach Elder

A hot Birmingham-Southern team denied Falcon coach Bill Elder his 100th victory at Montevallo Saturday night as UM went down by a score of 68-55.

The Falcon's jumped out to an early lead and held it until some 13 minutes from the end of the game when the Panthers went up by one.

The visiting Panthers then used a spread offense to connect on a couple of easy layups. This forced the Falsons to foul, but 'Southern was hot on the free throws and dug the whole deeper.

The 13 point deficit at the end of the game was "Southern's largest lead."

Coach Elder remarked that Birmingham-Southern probably played their worst defense that night, but the Falcons didn't take advantage of the situation.

"And you won't beat anybody shooting as badly as we did in the second half," Elder added.

The Falcons hit only 7 of 25 shots the second half.

But last week was not all bleak for the UM cagers as they staged a 14 point comback to defeat Stillman College 87-81 in double overtime.

Guard Dennis Crutcher, averaging 7.1 points pergame, played a key role in that game by making several clutch steals and turning them into points. He also hit four straight free throws to ice the victory.

Notice of Publication of Bill Filed and Proceeding in Rem To Quiet Title of Real Estate

Ozella Watson Grayer Plaintiff vs.
The within described property, in rem and Queen Esther Quinn, et al
Defendants

In The Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
In Equity
Case No. CV-79-367(E)

TO; The following described land:

A lot situated in the SE¼ of SW¼, Section 14, Township 20, Range 3 West, Shelby County, Alabama, described as follows: Commencing at the Northwest corner of the SE¼ of SW¼ of Section 14, Township 20, Range 3 West and run thence East along the North line of said forty 430 feet to point of beginning; run thence East along the North line of said forty 420 feet; run thence South and parallel to the West line of said forty 430 feet; run thence West and parallel with the North line of said forty 420 feet, run thence North and parallel with the West line of said forty 430 feet to point of beginning, less and except any portion of subject property lawfully conveyed by the previous owner, Al Sykes, deceased, from the 4th day of September, 1943 through this conveyance of said property to the Plaintiff on June 24, 1957, said conveyance being recorded in Deed Book 187, Page 450 in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama;

and the following named person, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees:

Queen Esther Quinn; Paul Mallett; Susie Mallett; Samuel Lewis Bryant; Eloise Bryant; Annie B. Collins, the trustees of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Pelham, Alabama, to-wit: Tom Sanders and Oscar Sykes, and their successors; Benjamin Alexander; Bonnie Lee Alexander; Prince Bryant; Adell Bryant; Rev. Homer Jackson, as pastor and Don Coplen and Willie Jones as deacons of the Pelham Immanuel Spiritual Church, and their successors; Plantation Pipe Line Company, a Corporation; and any and all unknown parties, including any persons claiming any present interests therein and including any persons claiming any future, contingent, reversionary, remainder or other interest(s) thereon, who may claim any interest in the above described property.

Take notice that Ozella Watson Grayer has this day filed her verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest thereon, and against all other persons and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Ozella Watson Grayer and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiff alleges in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the Plaintiff on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that Plaintiff claims title to said lands through and by virtue of that certain warranty deed from Al Sykes dated June 24, 1957, and recorded in Deed Book 187, page 450 in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of Plaintiff's ownership, she has been in actual, peaceable, notorious adverse possession of the above, described property, and has paid taxes thereon for a period of more than ten(10) years next preceding the filing of this bill. That certain instruments have been subsequently filed of record purporting to convey title to portions of subject property to certain defendants, which said deeds create a cloud on the title of the Plaintiff's property.

Plaintiff further alleges in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, Plaintiff's only information of the above defendant's is:

That Plaintiff after most reasonable and diligent search and inquiry was unable to locate the following named persons to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to Plaintiff, said persons being as follows: Paul Mallett; Susie Mallett; Annie B. Collins, the trustees of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Pelham, Alabama, to-wit: Tom Sanders and Oscar Sykes and their successors; Prince Bryant; Adell Bryant; Rev. Homer Jackson, as pastor and Don Coplen and Willie Jones as deacons of the Pelham Immanuel Spiritual Church and their successors; and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to Plaintiff, may claim an interest in or to the above described property are unknown.

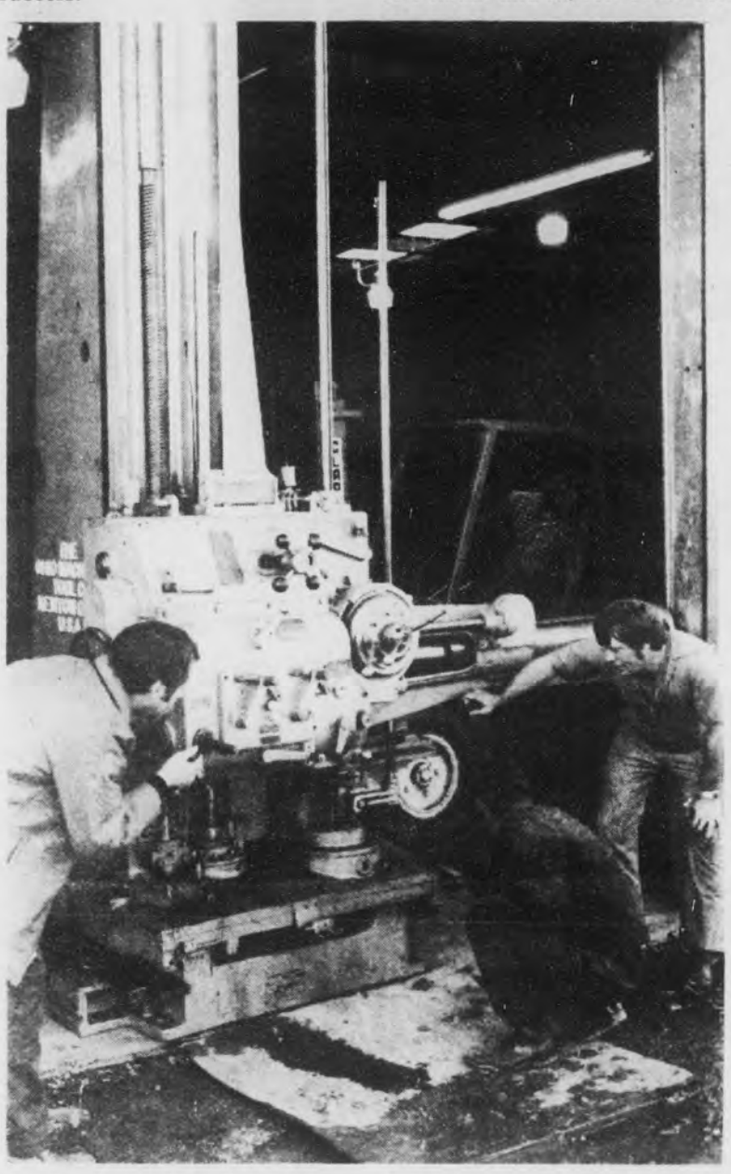
Pelham businessman parlays $650 into ½ million dollar firm rebuilding chipper discs for paper & plywood mills

by David Moore

What does reputation mean to a businessman?

For Lynn Braddock it means success.

With $650 in his pocket, Braddock started a small machine shop business less than two years ago in Jefferson County. Since then he has moved the operation to Pelham and expects to do better than a half-million dollars worth of business this year.



More equipment

George Blake (left) and BFP owner Lynn Braddock (right) inspect a $60,000 vertical bar machine used in the rebuilding of chipper discs. The piece of machinery was delivered to the Pelham business last week. (Photo by Moore)

"We've built our business on our reputation of good service and a good knowledge of what we're working on, and a good price. They (customers) know they can depend on us," Braddock says.

Located since July in Pelham Industrial Park, Braddock's business is called Birmingham Forest Products (BFP). The company rebuilds heavy log shaving and chipping equipment used by paper and plywood mills.

BFP currently serves some 63 accounts spread over a 12-state area. When the company moved to Shelby County it had 42 accounts.

"Everything I do is repeat business," says Braddock. When I get a new (account) they're going to call me back. I tell the man I'm going to do a good job--the right job. And I back up my word."

The majority of Braddock's business is rebuilding chipper discs which are used to cut veneered logs into chips for the pressing mills.

When a chipper is down and out of action, a company stands to lose $80,000 at $120,000 per day. And even if your name is Georgia Pacific or Weyerhouser, it stands to reason you are going to want to be back in operation as soon as possible.

When a plant in Virginia calls BFP and says their chipper is down, Braddock and)or George Blake (the only employee who moved to Pelham with the company) drive up there, install a spare chipper, bring the broken one back with them and turn it over to the shop machinists for rebuilding.

Braddock says that including shipping time, his company can have the rebuilt chipper back in action within two weeks--considered to be a good time for such an operation.

Braddock was previously employed by one of his competitors (there are only two in the area). As a factory representative, he once installed many of the chippers he now services.

The BFP owners explains that the recession has helped his business boom because with tight money companies prefer rebuilding, to replacing, expensive equipment.

In the last quarter, Braddock says orders have jumped from about $30,000 a month to nearly $60,000. And, he proudly points out, that growth is beneficial not only to BFP, but to the county as well.

From two employees and $25,000 worth of equipment last July, BFP has expanded to 14 employees and over $260,000 worth of equipment.

"When I moved here I made it a point to hire people from this area," says Braddock. "There's good people working here--good machinists."

By next summer Braddock hopes to expand into the adjacent to him, building, doubling his 7500 square feet of space, and employing up to 15 more local people.

He says that in the not too distant future he might add a parts distribution to the business and open a branch operation in Louisiana where some 20 of his accounts are located. The main office will remain in Pelham.

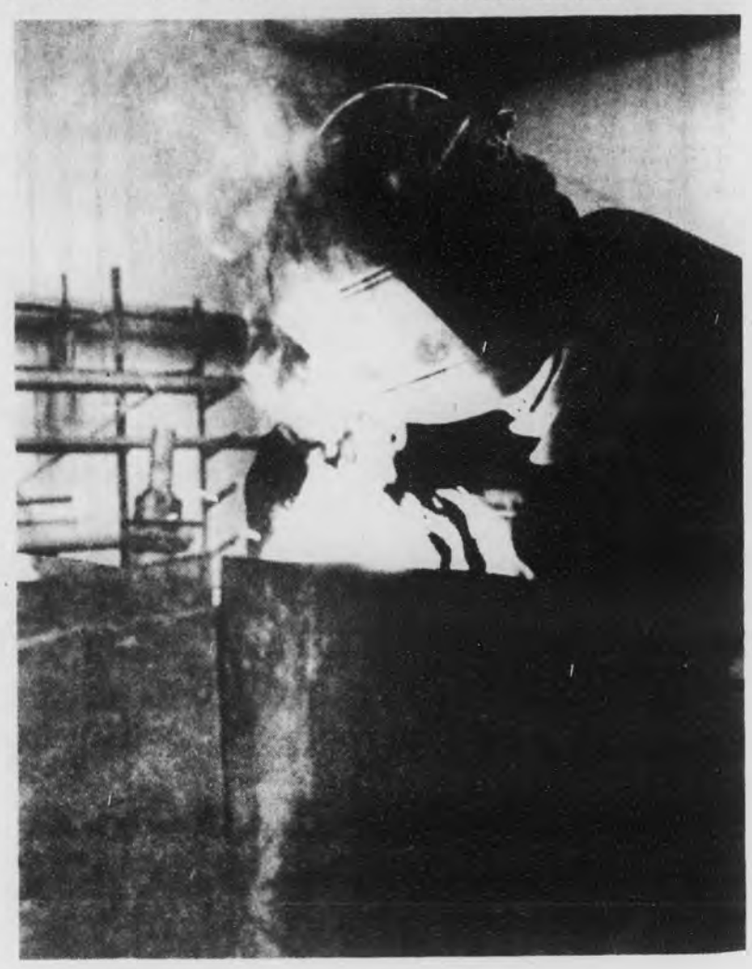
Before moving the business to Shelby County, Braddock looked for a new location in Forestdale, Bessemer and other areas, but says he couldn't find what he wanted.

He noted that First Shelby National Bank was very helpful in getting him going in Pelham.

He adds that he and his wife, Glenda, who works with him in the office, once lived in Pelham and they are both excited about living again in the area. They now live in Southwind district of Alabaster with their three sons.

"We're really in a good spot. We like it where we are," beams Braddock. "We're glad to call Shelby County our home."

And that's something Lynn Braddock will stake his reputation on. Just ask him.



Building success

Kenneth Pickett, hidden behind his protective gear from the searing glow of his arc-welder, pieces together a casing for a chipper disc. Pickett is one of 14 employees at Birmingham Forest Products, whose success owner Lynn Braddock attributes in part to the local labor force. (Photo by Moore)

$13 million voted to expand hospital

by Marcia M. Sears

The board of Shelby Memorial Hospital borrowed $8.75 million last week to expand the hospital again.

At the same time it authorized the E. C. Coston Company to construct the addition at a cost of $7,757,165.

Board member Herchiel Meadows asked the obvious question, "Why are we borrowing $8.75 million when the cost is $7,757,000?

The answer turned out to be that the cost is really $13,038,221 when everything is considered. Actual improvements to the hospital will be valued at over $10 million. This includes the above sum to the contractor plus 'major equipment' of $981,000; land improvements of $213,000; architect and engineering fees of $783,810; and 'contingency' of $204,266.

Financing and interest costs will add another amount of almost $3 million.

The Shelby Memorial Board has on hand, from funds set aside for this building project, the sum of $3,800,000, and the Board expects to earn about a half million dollars in interest on the bond funds while construction is in progress.

James Earl Gauntt of the bonding firm Thornton, Farish and Gauntt complimented the board on its advance planning. He said that because the board had regularly set aside funds for the project, it would save $7.8 million on the total project.

All Board members except Calvin Smith of Vincent who was ill, were on hand to sign the papers for the new bond issue.

The meeting was scheduled to begin at 6:30 and most members were present on time to talk informally with three representatives of the investment firm, a representative of Arthur Young Associates, the accounting firm hired to conduct the feasibility study and architect Al Dampier.

Board member Russell Seay came in about 15 minutes late with Dr. Harry Phillips the hospital's medical chief of staff. Action was further delayed until Board member C. E. "Bull" Carter arrived around 7.

The decisions to approve the sale of bonds and to let the contract to the Coston Company were unanimous.

Board chairman Ben Grubbs said construction should begin in the very near future.

Expanding again

On hand for approving the $13,000,000 expansion at Shelby Memorial Hospital were seated from left, board members C. E. Carter, Howard Gates, Chief of Staff Harry Phillips; and board member Russell Seay. Standing are board members Earl Cunningham, Herman Moore, Ben Grubbs, Ken Terry, Administrator Roland Bradford and board member Herchiel Meadows.

Pipe firm announces plan to relocate in county

A national pipe distributorship has announced plans to build a pipe yard and relocate its corporate headquarters in Shelby County.

Concol Pipe, Inc., currently based in Birmingham, has purchased 26 acres of land near the Shelby County Airport, between U.S. 31 and I-65. Plans for the development of the property call for construction of an open pipe storage yard, facilities to customize pipe orders, a railroad siding for transportation, and a corporate office complex, according to Marvin Dobnikar, Concol vice president in charge of sales.

President and chairman of the board of the company is E.E. "Pete" Raughley. Raughley, a resident of North Shelby County for about five years, was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Land clearing on the 26 acre site is expected to begin in December, and stocking of the pipe yard should be in progress during the first quarter of 1980, Dobnikar told the Reporter.

Plans for the offices are still on the drawing board and their construction is set for sometime next year, he said.

The new Concol Pipe facility will cost in the neighborhood of $500,000. and will stockpile pipe worth about that same amount.

Dobnikar said that in the first year the facility will employ 20-25 people, some of which will move from the Birmingham office.

Cranes and other equipment have already been ordered, and the plant is expected to be operational by next summer.

After the railroad siding is built and connected with the nearby L & N line, the Concol company will have the versatility of transportation by rail, road and air, Dobnikar pointed out.

E. E. RAUGHLEY

A computer system for inventory and billing will be based at the Shelby County office, tying in Concol branch offices in Denver, St. Louis, New Orleans, Atlanta, and New Castle, Pennsylvania.

Concol Pipe, Inc., with annual sales in excess of $55 million, is a wholesale distributor of pipes, valve and fittings to an international market.

Raughley has been quoted as saying the addition of the Shelby County operation will allow his company to give immediate delivery to all its customers around the world.

As a co-founder and former president, Raughley was with Consolidated Pipe & Supply Company for 17 years before forming the Colonial Pipe & Supply Company in Birmingham in 1977. Last spring he divested himself of his interest in Colonial and began operation of Concol.

President asserts UM keeps above-board records

by Marcia M. Sears

University of Montevallo President James Vickrey angrily denies there is any irregularity in the way the University handles its finances.

Vickrey contends that remarks made in the state capitol last Friday alluding to 'fraud' among some of the state's universities do not apply to the University of Montevallo.

UM was included, however, in a list of seven state institutions that were said not to follow nationally accredited systems of bookkeeping.

Vickrey denounced that report, also, in a press conference called Tuesday morning.

Vickrey produced the last State audit which covered the two-year period ending September 30, 1977, in which the state examiner said the records were "in comformity with generally accepted accounting principles."

The university president maintains that he has kept financial records open to all since he took office and there has never been any attempt to hide funds or "squirrel away" funds in order to get better funding from the state legislature.

He said that Governor Fob James' finance advisor, Dr. David Bronner, has never asked UM to change its accounting procedures, and there is just now an attempt being made to have all universities use a form styled by the National Business Officers Association.

This reporter asked about the accounting procedures for land owned by the University, for federally funded programs, and for private gifts made to the University over the years for special projects.

Vickrey said he has been trying to get land titles and deeds straight ever since he became president. The University owns considerable land, but finding the legal titles has run into a very time consuming process, he said. He also noted that even if the University sold some of that land in the past, all proceeds would go to the state, rather than the University. Apparently none of it is providing a rental or timber sale income.

On the matter of federally funded programs, he said separate accounting is maintained on each program, as required by law and the funds are shown in the general university budget.

The funds from private gifts, are in the University Foundation, the president said and are not reflected in the general budget figures. But the books of the Foundation are also open, he added. The Foundation has assets of about a quarter of a million dollars that are restricted to certain uses as specified by the individuals who made the donations. Most of the funds are used for scholarships to students, he said.

Calera's annual parade scheduled for Saturday

Shelby County's biggest Christmas parade will be staged Saturday night in Calera.

This year's parade that starts at 6 p.m. on Calera's Main Street is being sponsored jointly by the Calera Chamber of Commerce nd the Calera Civitan Club.

Some 20 floats will be featured and will be competing for $225 in prizes. The first place float will receive a $100 prize; second place carries a $75 prize; third place award is worth $50.

Miss Alabama, Kathy Pickett, will be a participant. She will be in Calera earlier in the day making appearances beginning at 4 p.m.

Five high school bands will march and play for parade spectators. Accepting invitations to appear in the parade are bands from the following schools: Calera High, Shelby Academy, Pelham High, Chelsea High and Vincent High School.

Also featured in Saturday night's parade will be the Shriner's motorcycle brigade and a display of antique cars.

Leading the parade and making his official entry into Calera will be Santa Claus. He will be riding one of the city's fire trucks.

As a day long prelude to the parade, members of the Calera Chamber of Commerce will be offering special pre-Christmas sales in their respective stores. Miss Alabama and Santa Claus will visit the downtown merchants and will be available for pictures and interviews.

Christmas music will be performed by choral groups from Calera churches and Calera High School. The Christmas music performances will begin at 1 p.m. and continue through 5 p.m.

Grand marshals

Rev. George Kelley and his wife Crecy were the grand marshalls in the Helena Christmas parade Saturday. Kelley will be 100 years old on New Year's Day and his wife is 93.

Hoover goes ahead to annex Riverchase

by Marcia M. Sears

The City of Hoover is beginning legal steps this week to call an election with the hope of annexing Riverchase.

In a legal advertisement on page B-8 of this issue the legal description of the land Hoover hopes to annex is detailed.

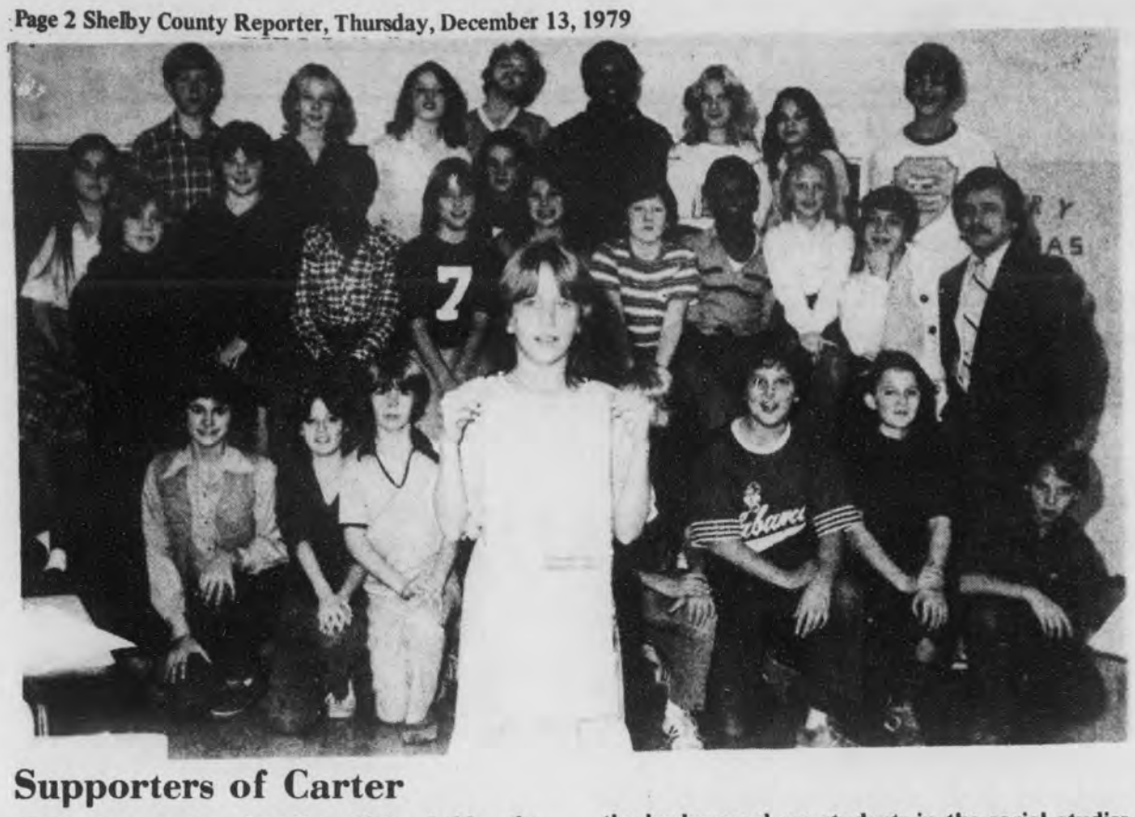
It will require that the State Legislature pass a bill allowing residents of Riverchase to vote on the question of joining the City of Hoover.

A large part of Riverchase is in Shelby County and County Commissioners are not in favor of the annexation. However, only residents of the proposed area will be allowed to vote, and most of them are expected to favor it, because of sewage, fire, and police services that Hoover offers.

The annexation excludes the property occupied by the Riverchase Middle School and the Riverchase Country Club in Shelby County and the property occupied by Chace Lake Country Club in Jefferson.

It is widely assumed by Shelby County officials that Representative J. T. "Jabo" Waggoner favors the annexation and will introduce the bill in the Legislature. They also assume Senator Doug Cook will favor it in the Senate.

However, in the Shelby County Commission meeting Monday, Commissioners discussed plans to try to swing other legislators to their side and block the legislation.



Supporters of Carter

TMS 6th grader Jennifer Hale holds the mailgrams that contain the signatures of students and teachers who wrote President Carter saying they supported him and the hostages in Iran. In the background are students in the social studies class that sponsored the project and their teacher J. B. Denham.

TMS students send mailgrams supporting Carter on Iran

It took two mailgrams to record the signatures of students and teachers at Thompson Middle School who wanted to let President Carter know they supported his stand on Iran.

The idea to send the President a mailgram came from 6th grader Jennifer Hale.

All the members of her social studies class, which is taught by J. B. Denham, wanted their names on the message and other teachers and members of the student body also wanted to show their support.

Coming up with a unique way to express concern about the Iranian situation, Jennifer wrote, "American ends in I can, not Iran. We support you and the hostages."

Each person who signed the message paid a dime to cover the cost of the mailgram.

Republican candidate talks here

Presidential candidate George Bush will visit the University of Montevallo Friday during his one-day visit to North Alabama.

The Texas Republican will attend the annual Christmas reception for Montevallo's faculty and staff at Flowerhill, the residence of UM President James F. Vickrey, Jr.

Bush is a former Congressman as well as former ambassador to the U.N., U.S. Envoy to China and CIA director.

Wilsonville increases traffic fines

by Bert Seaman

There was unanimous agreement at Monday night's Council meeting to raising fines in Wilsonville but the panel decided they needed time to consider granting a pay raise to Municipal Judge Joel Watson.

The fine schedule and court costs hadn't been adjusted in a number of years.

After suggesting how much the amounts be increased, Watson asked for a $75 raise in his monthly salary.

He pointed out that the additional revenue should be sufficient to take care of the raise he asked for.

However, some of the Council expressed doubt that it would. Councilwoman Dot Scruggs asked to see a record of the cases the judge heard saying she wanted to get an idea of how much was taken in in fines.

Giving his reasons for needing an increase in pay, Watson explained that his duties were increasing and he said that he also based the request on his experience.

He noted that although the town hadn't taken advantage of it, his secretary and office equipment were always available and that he was also on call 24 hours a day.

The town has been paying the judge $100 a month. He pointed out that he wouldn't need any further increases for at least two years.

A $7 increase in court costs for non-moving violations will bring that amount to $14 and the fee for traffic violations will be $17, a boost of $8.

In other financial matters concerning the town, the panel voted to discontinue paying for long distance calls made from the home of Police Chief Sherman Humphries.

Some members of the Council remarked that they hadn't been aware the town was paying for such calls. It was noted that Humphries could either use the phone at city hall or use his police radio.

A vote was also taken on updating the business license fee schedule which will go into effect in January.

The Council agreed to accept the new rates with the addition of one to be set for the classification of convalescence homes.

Telling the panel that a radio repeater would be useful in times of emergency, amateur radio operator Bill Bradley appeared at the meeting to ask permission to put one at the community park.

Bradley said that because of the park's elevation, it would be the best location and the panel went along with the request.

Another discussion at the meeting involved the use of the town hall for yard sales.

No one had any objections to the events held in other locations, but it was agreed to discontinue the practice which allowed anyone attending the sales to wander through the city owned building.

Speeding is top offense

Speeding remains one of the most frequent offenses for which Montevallo police make arrests.

In his monthly report to the Montevallo City Council Monday night, Police Chief Troy Kirkland pointed out that officers made 36 arrests for speeding in November.

The next most frequent cause for writing arrest tickets is issuing worthless checks. There were twelve arrests for this violation. Driving while intoxicated resulted in nine arrests. There were six arrests for driving on the wrong side of the road, three for reckless driving and three for public drunkeness. Five tickets were issued for driving without a valid drivers license.

Single arrests were made for a variety of violations, producing a total of 90 arrests during the month of November.

Kirkland's written report also stated that $5,372.50 was collected through the municipal court system during the two court sessions held in November.

Police records indicate officers patrolled a total of 7,992 miles during the month. Records also show that 22 prisoners were incarcerated for a total of 36 days last month.

Steve Sedgewick, a representative of the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission, appeared before the council to explain Montevallo's eligibility for federal grants under a federal waste water program. The city must upgrade its sewage disposal plant in accord with federal Environmental Protection Agency rules and regulations.

Preliminary studies and cost estimates have been made. Present cost estimates come to $1,551,000. Work on the project is expected to begin sometime next year.

Councilman Grady Parker distributed a proposed ordinance regarding fire inspection throughout the city. Council members will study the proposal and adopt a fire inspection ordinance early next year.

City Council received a written complaint from one of the departments on the University of Montevallo campus regarding slow service being provided by the subsidized ambulance service that serves the Montevallo-Calera area. The complaint stated that on October 1, an ambulance took an hour in arriving at the scene; on November 19, it was thirty minutes before an ambulance arrived, and in late August it was 20 minutes before an ambulance arrived. The complaint noted that Shelco Rescue responded to all three calls in less than one minute.

Council members, in receiving the complaint, noted that there is only one ambulance service serving the Montevallo area. City Clerk Don Hughes was asked to pass the complaint on to the proper authorities.

In other action council members elected Phillip Lacey to a seat on Montevallo's Water and Sewer Board. Lacey will replace James Seaman who resigned. Seaman resigned because he no longer lives within the Montevallo city limits.

Governor applauds raise

Gov. Fob James says he is pleased that state employees and teachers will be able to enjoy a seven percent pay raise this year and says he is also pleased with the great strides in efficiency in state government that made the raises possible.

"State employees have done a tremendous job in the past 11 months in cutting waste in government, and it was with great pleasure that I announced a firm 7 percent pay raise for them," said James. "For teachers, who are the front line troops in the War on Illiteracy, I am glad that we have been able to make arrangements to fund a 7 percent raise for them, regardless of a possible shortfall in revenue coming in to the Special Education Trust Fund."

Due to efficiencies in government instituted by James since coming into office, some $20 million has been saved in operations costs according to the governor's spokesmen. In addition, an aggressive campaign to collect out-of-state taxes has resulted in a $15 million bulge in the Special Education Trust Fund and has made the teacher raises possible.

"About seven months ago, we hired about 40 additional auditors for the Revenue Department to go all over the country and collect these taxes that belonged to the people of Alabama," James said. "I am pleased that this effort was so successful. I am told that for every dollar we have spent on the additional auditors, we have brought back more than $100 to the state of Alabama."

The state employee raises are firm for the entire fiscal year, but the teacher raises are firm only for the first quarter. Revenue into the Special Education Trust Fund must come in at a rate 14.9 percent higher than last year in order for the raise to be made firm for the entire year if it is to be paid from the SETF.

However, James said last week that even if the revenue does not allow payment solely from the trust fund, he will ask the Legislature in February to allow the use of an expected $10 million surplus in the General Fund and an $11.5 million surplus in the SETF, or any portion needed to make up the difference, for teacher pay raises.

Under The Courthouse Dome

Civil Defense Director Bill Tucker told the Commission that plans are proceeding for installing new field lines for the septic tank at the county airport. He reported the county will have to get legal rights from landowner Minnie Crim to extend the lines. Since the lines will also go under power lines, Engineer James Ray advised that the Alabama Power Company would have to give permission. Tucker had obtained cost estimates from private contractors for doing the work, but the Commissioners felt the county could handle the job more inexpensively.

A case against Phillip Hope for Violation of the Alabama Uniform Controlled Substances Act will be tried in the Circuit Court of Shelby County on Jan. 28.

The trial date for the Shelby man, who is already serving a life sentence for murder, was originally set for Dec. 14.

However, Hope's attorney, who was appointed during arraignment proceedings Monday, requested the case be continued so he could familarize himself with the evidence.

Alabaster attorney Jim Pino was named by Judge James Sharbutt to defend Hope.

Now an inmate in the state penitentiary, Hope is accused of possessing valium while he was in the Shelby County jail.

Not guilty, not guilty by reason of insanity were the pleas entered for accused murderer Steve Smith at his arraignment Monday.

The Shelby County man was charged with first degree murder last month in the death of Mountain Brook grocer Larry Osborne.

Birmingham lawyer Fred Pickard was reappointed by Judge James Sharbutt to defend Smith and the Circuit Court judge also appointed attorney Cecil Matthews to assist with the defense.

Pickard had said after being appointed to the case by District Judge Robert Armstrong, that he would file a motion for his client to undergo psychiatric testing.

Since there is a waiting list at Bryce Hospital in Tuscaloosa where the testing is usually done, Pickard said that he would request Smith be taken to Jefferson County for the examination.

The body of the 20 year old assistant manager of the Western Supermarket in Mountain Brook was found by police from that city on Nov. 19.

Osborne's battered body was found in the Shelby Springs area where the suspect had lived when he was a boy.

Smith is believed to have been with the dead man the night he and $8,000 disappeared from the Mountain Brook store.

The county's Solid Waste Enforcement Division did not reach its income goal for November, but its supervisor, Carlton Franks, thinks it is because the month had two holidays.

Franks reported to the County Commission Monday an income of $7,185 for the month with a little over three tons of garbage and trash collected.

The Helena landfill served 1980 people, the Calera landfill served 1227 people and at Westover, 1118 were served, he said.

Commission Chairman Tommy Snowden read the Commissioners a letter from the University of Alabama-Birmingham Hospital which stated that after January 1 UAB will start billing the county for indigent patients.

This prompted a discussion of indigent care at Shelby Memorial Hospital and the question was raised, "Who's monitoring who is eligible for indigent care?"

Snowden said he had read that SMH is giving $900,000 worth of indigent care each year, and he said "There's no way they can be doing that."

Many of the county's indigents have been eligible under various programs to get care at UAB, especially maternity cases.

Snowden expressed dissatisfaction with Shelby Memorial's policies on obstetrics. "We have that OB department over there, and I haven't heard of more than three people having babies there - and we spent something like a half-million on it."

Salaries for county workers were discussed in light of the state's recent decision to give 7 percent increases to state employees. Ned Bearden commented, "If the money's there the decision is already made (to give all county workers a raise). I hope there's a lot more there than we budgeted."

Commissioner Jake Morris said if the deputies get a raise, he favors giving the same raise to all other employees, and "When the money runs out, just shut the county down."

They briefly discussed the fact that there is still no firm figure on how much money this year's taxes will bring in.

Action urged on flag burning

Saying that the "American people are tired of being abused," Alabama Congressman Richard Shelby today filed bills in the U.S. House of Representatives that would make burning the American flag a felony and that would require the deportation of nonimmigrant aliens who participate in political demonstrations.

"Time and time again we have seen foreigners visiting this country and enjoying its benefits malign our system of government and burn our flag," said Shelby.

"Americans have always and will continue to welcome foreign visitors and students to this country, but not if they abuse their privileges by advocating the downfall of our government."

Under current law destroying the flag is only a misdemeanor, while under the legislation proposed by Shelby, such action could be a felony. In addition, current law does not prohibit political demonstrations by nonimmigrant aliens.

The present status of the law allows nonimmigrant aliens to participate in a wide range of anti-American activity and still not be subject to deportation.

Shelby said that recent incidents "outrage and frustrate Americans everywhere and it's time for Congress to take action."

Drive safely

Keep holiday season happy

Letter to Editor

At this time of the year we all find ourselves stuffing more things into a day than we can possibly do. In our hurry-scurry we do not take time to drive as safely as we should, as we hurry from place to place getting last minute things done. Don't spoil your holidays by spending time in the hospital or funeral home.

Now, I would like to say a word or two about the officers who make it their life's work to make the roads and highways a safe place to drive. Do you ever stop to think that these officers, state, county and local are everyday-people just like you and me? After their day's work they go home to a family just like you and I do. They worry about bills, childrens fever, and Auburn football just like we do. Would you believe it, they put up Christmas trees and have neighbors over just like we do. Yet these officers are a little different than we are in one way; they have a heart-felt dedicated compassion for our well-being on the road.

When you and I get in a hurry or are just careless on the roads, the officers have a beautiful blue reminder and yellow invitation for us. Don't think they are simply heartless. It's not so!! I believe they do a great job. Would you want their job?

Think about it and don't kill someone's Santa Claus on the road.

Health department sponsors supplemental food program

A special food program called WIC is available to residents of Shelby County. The Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children is a program designed to provide supplemental food to certain infants (up to one year old), children up to five years old, pregnant women up to six weeks after delivery and breast-feeding women.

Participants must be at "nutritional risk" because of both inadequate income and nutritional need.

The purpose of WIC is to provide good health care and teach how to eat the right foods to be healthy.

The foods provided by WIC include milk, eggs, cheese, cereal high in iron and juice high in Vitamin C. Vouchers issued to the participants are redeemable for these foods at local grocery stores.

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana a member of the FDIC.

Would you believe it: They start off, early in September, all over the country, bunches of young men dedicated to being the very best. And by the end of November we turn up with a crowd of willie-nillies who, in their early years were surely the tiddly-wink champions in their respective neighborhoods, whose job now is to pick out the best football team in the country. And they do it. Would you believe it.

We went to three different towns and up a dozen country roads, trying to find out if there was anybody around who didn't really care who won the big game between Alabama and Auburn. We found a hundred who didn't care either way and four who had a preference. That's what they said. Would you believe it.

I dreamed Granny sent me to town with a whole dollar. She told me to go to the meat counter and she told me what to ask for. I asked for it and the guy gave it to me, and I took it back to Granny. But I didn't know she was planning on having steak for dinner. When I handed it to her she unwrapped it and made a little whistling sound in her throat. There was, in the package, one-third of one t-bone steak. That's all there was. Would you believe it.

The bobwhite got up wild and settled in a plum thicket. Peckerwood Pearson started in after him, following his dog, and Oce Vanderslice waited on a little hill fifty feet away. They had jumped a deer a mile back and Oce had put buck-shot in his gun instead of number nines. In a minute the bobwhite bubbled out, whistling over Oce's head and heading for Walksie Creek. That's when Oce fired. When Peckerwood and the dog got there Oce had already picked 'im up. The buck-shot had ripped his head off, leaving his body untouched. That's the way it happened. Would you belive it.

Along about this time of year they start coming back home to spend the Christmas holidays. I guess that's the best way, having them come for the holidays. It beats meeting at the funeral home because some fool, full of drink wanted two sides of the road. And invariably I run into them, either at the drug store or the pool room or along the avenue. And if they've been gone for more than thirty days, the chances or five to two that I'll have to ask them their names. Maybe I'm getting old. But would you believe it.

Scrambled Eggs

by bert seaman

One of my dreams is to one day get a schedule worked out that I can stick to.

Take the other day for example. I thought I had the day pretty well laid out. However, things started to go wrong with my first phone call.

Now, it's nice I'll admit, to have more than one phone in your home. But a multiplicity of those little instruments can create problems. And in this case, it did!

I made a call to find out the location of the farm where I was to take a photograph. And when I learned the spot was near my home, I asked my informant to call me when the group who were to be in the picutre left his office.

It sounded like a good idea. I thought it would make my schedule work out even better. I was wrong.

Fearing that I'd miss his phone call if I took the little one at my house to nursery school, I stayed where I was.

When the phone finally rang, however, the caller told me about another assignment I was supposed to cover. And needing a pencil and paper to record the information, I went to another room and picked up the phone in there.

Can you guess what's coming? That's right. I forgot about the first phone being off the hook.

So I went on waiting for my call. And I waited and waited.

Thinking the folks were enjoying some extra cups of coffee, I decided to make a quick call to get some additional facts about my second story of the day, and there was no dial tone.

Then the light dawned. I had a feeling that someone had been trying to reach me so I called him and found out I was right.

But I learned he'd been wrong about the farm's location. It was 20 miles from where I was he informed me and he noted I should have been there 30 minutes ago.

Needless to say, I flew out the door, dropped my granddaughter at school, and arrived with apologies at my destination.

Since I was late arriving at that assignment, I almost missed the next one as well. And then I was nearly an hour late for a meeting that afternoon.

Ah yes, one of these days I'm really going to get it all together and everything will go like clockwork.

Well, I can dream can't I?

Agency funds cut for transportation

Sue Tedford, director of the county Program on Aging reported that federal funds are being cut for transportation. She will now have only $80 per month for gasoline for buses. She is asking cities to contribute, she said.

She reported also that she has started a discount program, asking businesses to give discounts to senior citizens. She said she is having a good response.

Taxpayers win tussle with appraisal figures

by Marcia M. Sears

County officials are keeping a wary eye on the tax collections that are now coming in to the courthouse.

To date they are disappointed that the total sum is not higher, but many taxpayers are postponing payment until the final due date of December 31.

Because of the property reappraisal program, and the monumental confusion which resulted, county officials were unable to get a good estimate in advance of this year's tax season as to how much money to expect.

It now appears that the estimates the County Commission and the Board of Education used to set up their budgets may have been too optimistic.

One of the major reasons is that many homes were automatically classified with businesses if the owners had not requested a homestead exemption. Many persons have come forward proving that they have lived in the home, and this reduces their tax by about half.

Many other errors have been resolved and most of them appear to be in the taxpayers' favor rather than the county's.

However, county officials still hope that the increase in taxes on farm and timberland and the increased number of new homes in Shelby County will bring in sufficient taxes to maintain county services at their present level.

According to Delyn Cost of the Tax Collector's office, the taxes collected from autos and real estate by November 30 were distributed in the following manner:

County Commission; $255,632.77: Schools, $296,300.38: Hospital, $65,120.43: Cities, $117,042.83: State of Alabama, $174,553.10.

Discussing energy

The steering committee to plan energy forums in the county met last week at UM. Looking over literature on the subject are (l-r seated) Doug Rogers, Erin Kellen, Lolly Argo, Lauren Orth. Standing are Marian Cotney, Tommy Lawrence, Rick Lewis, Jonnie Malone, Marty Everse, David Stone, Ward Tishler and Steve Sears.

Energy forums planned

Ostriches can bury their heads in the sand, but people need to take a good hard look at how energy will affect the way they live in the future.

A steering committee composed of 20 representatives from county organizations met last week on the UM campus. Plans were made to discuss energy issues at community forums during the month of February.

According to Lolly Argo from UM's Environmental Studies Department which is spearheading the project, the national program is being adapted to make it more meaningful to local participants.

During the meeting last Thursday, it was announced that the first gathering in the county would be held Feb. 14 at the Alabaster Depot. The topic of that meeting will be the cause of the energy crisis.

On Feb. 21, alternate technologies will be explored at a meeting scheduled for the Alabama Power Company's Solar Energy building in Montevallo.

The final session will feature an Energy Fair in the Columbiana Library Feb. 28. Contributions from children will be included among the displays.

Plans made by the group included workshops for children during the hours of the forums, all of which will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Calera attorney heads bar

Eason Mitchell of Calera was unanimously acclaimed president of the Shelby County Bar Association at the group's annual meeting in the Courthouse on Monday.

Other officers selected for the coming year were Wade Morton, vice-president; Tommy Harrison, secretary; and James Pino, treasurer, all also by acclamatioin.

Welcomed as new members of the association were Robert M. Echols, Mike Atchison, and Cecil Mathews. Echols is associated with Richard Bell of Pelham, Atchison with the Shelby County Abstract Company in Columbiana, and Mathews plans to move his Birmingham law office to Shelby County in the near future.

In other business, the 26 assembled lawyers selected Roy Martin, 36, to a vacancy on the Shelby County Planning Commission.

Martines term will expire in February, 1981, and he is expected to represent the builders' point of view on the Commission.

Republicans set dinner meeting

An open meeting of the Shelby County Republican Executive Committee will convene on Thursday, December 13, at 6:30 p.m., at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House in Alabaster, for a dutch treat dinner. Those who wish to attend only the business session can come at 7:00 p.m. All Shelby County Republicans and those interested in the Shelby County Republican Party are invited to attend.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE

The Bible contains its own proof of Divine origin. Among these many evidences is its meaning to human hearts.

Someone has said, "This book contains...the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true and its decisions immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveller's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, the Christian's charter. Here paradise is restored, Heaven opened and the gates of Hell disclosed. Christ is its grand object, our good its design and the glory of God its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently and prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be open at the judgment and will be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, rewards the greatest labor, and condemns all who trifle with its holy contents." -- Anonymous.

B'ham library displays local art

Twenty Shelby County students have their art work on display at the Birmingham Public Library this month.

The paintings, pottery and sculpture done by students in Shelby and Jefferson Counties are part of the 6th annual youth art exhibit.

According to Mrs. Grace Hays Davis, who arranges for the show every year with the help of her husband Harold, this year's presentation is dedicated to all children and to the library.

Mrs. Davis called attention to 1979 being "The International Year of the Child."

The work of kindergarten age students through high school will be on display through Dec. 17 and the public is encouraged to view it.

Exhibits on the third floor are arranged by subject. They are: art, home and family, animals and land appreciation. The senior high work is on the 4th floor.

Mrs. Elsie Cooper from the Birmingham Public Library points out that the facility has been catering to the work of young people ever since it was founded.

She mentioned that other individuals and groups also arranged art shows there, the last one being held in the spring.

Shelby County students who now have their work on display at the library are: Thompson - Stacia Patrick, Ronnie Mino, Kim Sides, Holly Pryor and Donny Pierce.

From Pelham High are: Julie Wyatt, Lisa Clark, Lori Griffin, Ann Bailey, Jimmy Mintz, Glynnis Harris, Melissa Brown, Sheri Smith and Scott Thaggard.

Also from Pelham are: Wendy Conover, David Sullivan, Teresa Bledsoe, Mike Severs, Jackie Watley. The work of another Pelham resident is also on display. He is Jeff Todhunter, a student at the Alabama School of Fine Arts.

Senator honored at UM ceremony

U.S. Sen. Howell Heflin will receive the third annual President's Award for Distinguished Public Service during fall commencement exercises Saturday, Dec. 15, in Myrick Hall.

Sen. Heflin, who was chief justice of the Alabama Supreme Court before his election to the Senate, will be the third judge or former judge to receive the award.

The award recognizes Heflin for his commitment to public service generally and for his leadership as chief justice in modernizing Alabama's court system and his leadership as a U.S. Senator in federal judicial affairs.

Previous recipients of the award were U.S. Circuit Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., and U.S. Circuit Judge Robert Vance.

Heflin will also be the guest speaker during the fall commencement exercises, which begin at 3 p.m. Approximately 130 students will receive degrees during UM's fall commencement, one of three each year at the 83-year-old state institution.

Degree recipients will also be honored by the UM Alumni Association at a luncheon in their honor at 12:30 in UM's Anna Irvin Dining Hall. Guest speaker during the luncheon will be Mark Brandon of Montgomery, a 1975 UM alumnus who is an assistant Alabama attorney general in the evironmental protection division.

Five generations on one side

Christopher Chad Christian, who was born on December 2, came into the world blessed as the fifth living generation on two sides of his family. He is held by his mother, Lisa Vick Christian (Mrs. Paul David Christian, Jr.). Next to them is his grandmother, Floyce Brasher Boyd, his great grandmother, Leona Bailey Brasher, and his great-great grandparents, Tom and Lee Bailey. The photo was taken at the Bailey home in the Smokey Road Community.

Five generations on the other side

The great-great grandparents of Christopher Christian on the other side of his family are, at left, May and Lon Brasher of Fungo Hollow. Next to them is the baby's great grandfather, J. L. Brasher, his grandmother Floyce Brasher Boyd and he is held by his mother, Lisa Vick Christian. All members of both families have been lifelong residents of Shelby County. (Reporter phots by Marcia Sears)

Students in the third and fourth grades at Vincent Elementary School put on an annual Christmas program Monday evening and again Tuesday morning in the school gym. The production involved many hours of work by students, teachers and parents. Over 100 students participated in the play.

Vincent Elementary puts on Christmas story drama

Mary and Joseph, wisemen, shepherds, and angels. All the characters needed to recreate the age old Christmas story were part of the drama presented in the Vincent Elementary School gym Monday night.

The program was enacted again Tuesday morning for the student body with 150 third and fourth grade students taking part in the annual PTA production.

Three scenes were set up in the center of the gym. There was manger scene, a living room setting and an area where the twelve days of Christmas spoke their parts.

The cast included Kim Garrett as Mary, Jared Watson as Joseph; shepherds, Jeff Cooper, Andre Wallace, Michael Champion, Glenn Isbell.

Wise men, Eric Brasher, Jerre Brisky, Kelvin Datcher; angles, Sonja Kidd, Adrian McCrimmon, Laurie Davis, Tonya Salter, Clarissa Dates, Donna Taylor.

Taking part in the family scene were: Cory Watson, Frank Carter, Wanda Brasher, Tanya Gossett, Alan Callan, Reed Campbell.

Scott Wood, Melinda Andrews, Vanessa Wallace, Samantha Posey and Angie Brown.

Teachers who helped with the program were: Elizabeth Darby, Linda Duncan, Sherry Elliott, Sue Garrett, Elizabeth Poole, Etheldria Pope and Geraldine Waldrop.

Gardner rites held last week

Funeral services for Joseph H. Gardner of Rt. 1 Columbiana were held Dec. 7 at Bolton-Brown Chapel.

Rev. Daniel Kitches officiated and burial was in the Columbiana Cemetery.

Gardner died Dec. 4 at Shelby Memorial Hospital. He was 75.

Survivors are his wife, Bertha L. Gardner; a son, Edward H. Gardner, Huntsville; one daughter, Mrs. Norma Jo Walton, Middletown, Del. and two grandchildren.

He is also survived by three brothers, P. B. Gardner, Gadsden, Lorene Gardner, Birmingham, C. M. Gardner, Montgomery; one sister, Mrs. Brown McBrier, Leeds.

Auctioned land valued low

In a public auction last Saturday 300 acres of land west of Columbiana were sold for prices ranging from $310 to $900 per acre.

Many observers of the local real estate scene were surprised that the prices were not higher. The land was sold in individual tracts. Some was hilly and some was cleared. A private road, not a public road, serves the property except for three tracts which face Highway 70.

Christmas jazz

In the concluding scene of Christmas Jazz, the production put on at the Montevallo United Methodist Church Sunday night, the cast gathers around the manger. The musical drama centered around the animals that were present in the stable at the time of Jesus' birth. In addition to the organ, which was played by Rev. Henry Golson, several young people from the church provided instrumental accompaniment.

Devouring books

Kelly Lane and John Whaley were two of the avid readers in Thompson Middle School's Read-O-Lympics. John was the top reader with 77 books to his credit and Kelly turned in the most money ($39.05).

Thompson readers raise dollars for retarded children

Students at Thompson Middle School read up a storm during the month of November.

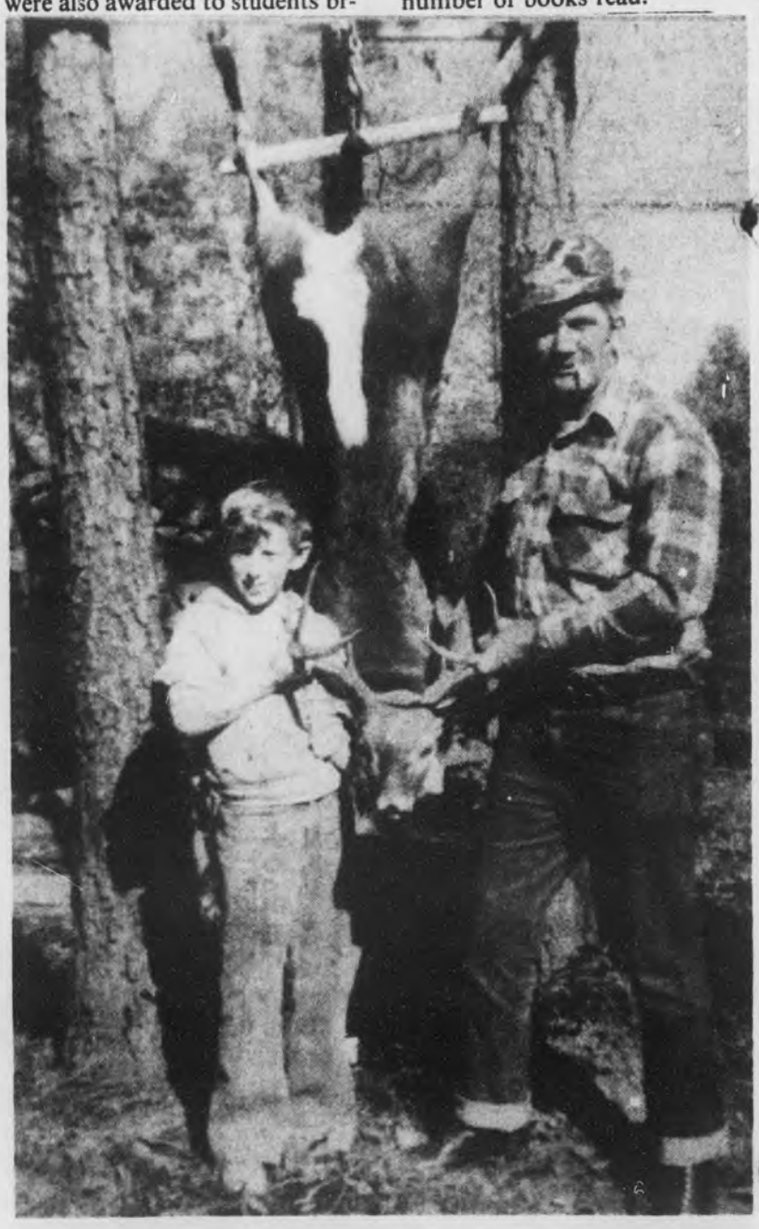
The reason for checking out extra books was to raise money for the Alabama Association for Retarded Children.

When the Read-O-Lympics concluded, over $500 had been raised for the cause and Kelly Lane led the school with the most money collected. The sixth grade student turned in $39.05.

The award for turning the most pages went to seventh grader John Whaley who read a total of 77 books.

In addition to a calculator and radio, the two top prizes, satchels were also awarded to students bringing in more than $10 and T-shirts were given to participants getting over $25.

According to Debbie Patterson, sixth grade language teacher, the event is held twice yearly. She explained that students obtained monetary pledges from sponsors for the number of books read.



Double shot

An 8 foot deer, that dressed out to about 160 pounds, was killed on November 17 by Ronnie Benton and his son, Brian. They both shot at the same time, and both of them hit the deer. They live on Phillips Circle in Columbiana.

Observances of the Season

K-Springs

A rocking chair before an open fire on the hearth, and your favorite records on the stereo. Who could ask for more on a cold wintry day?

Before last Saturday was over, around a dozen K-Springs youth were asking for 6 O'Clock to hurry and come so they could give it all up for a nice, soft bed. The 24 hour Rock-a-thon was held in the K-Springs Church of God fellowship hall by young people of the church to raise money for the church youth program.

K-Springs youth are also busy with rehearsal for a Christmas play, entitled "Christmas Stranger," to be staged in the old K-Springs church building on Saturday and Sunday, December 22 and 23 at 7:00 p.m. They cordially invite the public to attend.

The Children's Church department is planning a special Christmas program in the fellowship hall of the new building for Wednesday evening, December 19 at 7:00.

Epsilon Rho

Members of Epsilon Rho chapter of Beta Sigma Phi discussed an upcoming event to raise money for the Alabaster Rescue squad at their December meeting.

As one of their projects during the Christmas season, the group gave a hand mixer to the Attention Home and also provided decorations for the facility.

Santa Claus visited children of sorority members at a recent Christmas party held at the home of Robin Horan. Approximately 40 people attended the gala event.

A program on Morals and Mores was given by hostess Brenda Ray at the meeting last Tuesday.

One transferee, Linda Williams of Houston, Texas, was welcomed to the group. Paula Carnes attended the meeting as a visitor.

Mt Signal

The Christmas musical "NOEL, Jesus Is Born" will be presented by the Mount Signal Baptist Church Choir on the evening of December 16 at seven o'clock.

The musical is under the direction of Minister of Music Tony Blackerby. Soloists will include Niva Dorough, Edwina Chappell, Johnye Horton, and Jim Jackson.

Dramatic portions of the program will be enacted by the youth department. Mount Signal is located near Chelsea on Old Highway 280. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

St Thomas

Sunday School classes will participate in the 5th annual vesper services directed by Dr. Laura Wright at St. Thomas Catholic Church in Montevallo.

The program will consist of a choral presentation of the Christmas story taken from the Gospel of Luke.

There is also congregational singing of Christmas music. The program will be at 4 p.m. on Sunday, December 16, with a reception in the parish hall immediately following.

The public is invited to attend.

Montevallo trounces Bibb County 54-43

by David Moore

Coach Kurt Pnazek was elated Friday night. He had good reason, too. His Montevallo Bulldogs had just jumped all over Bibb County.

The scoreboard read 54-43, but the game wasn't as close as that might indicate.

"Boy, I love it! These guys are getting better and better. They just continue to improve," Pnazek said in praise of his now 3-3 squad.

Montevallo beat Bibb County by three points for their season opener, but lost more recently to them by a 15 points at the Thompson Invitational.

Bibb County perhaps entered Friday's game a little over confident, made a number of mistakes and found themselves behind the Bulldogs 31-20 at half time.

With a 45-25 lead in the third quarter, Pnazek started substituting freely, and although Bibb County then found the going a little easier, they were never able to get back in the ball game.

While the 'Dogs popped in 21 of 44 shots from their home court floor, Bibb County rang the bucket only 16 times out 67 attempts.

For the bulldogs, Bret Jones was again top scorer with 18 points. Jerome Jones was good for 13 points and seven rebounds, and Derek Stewart scored 10.

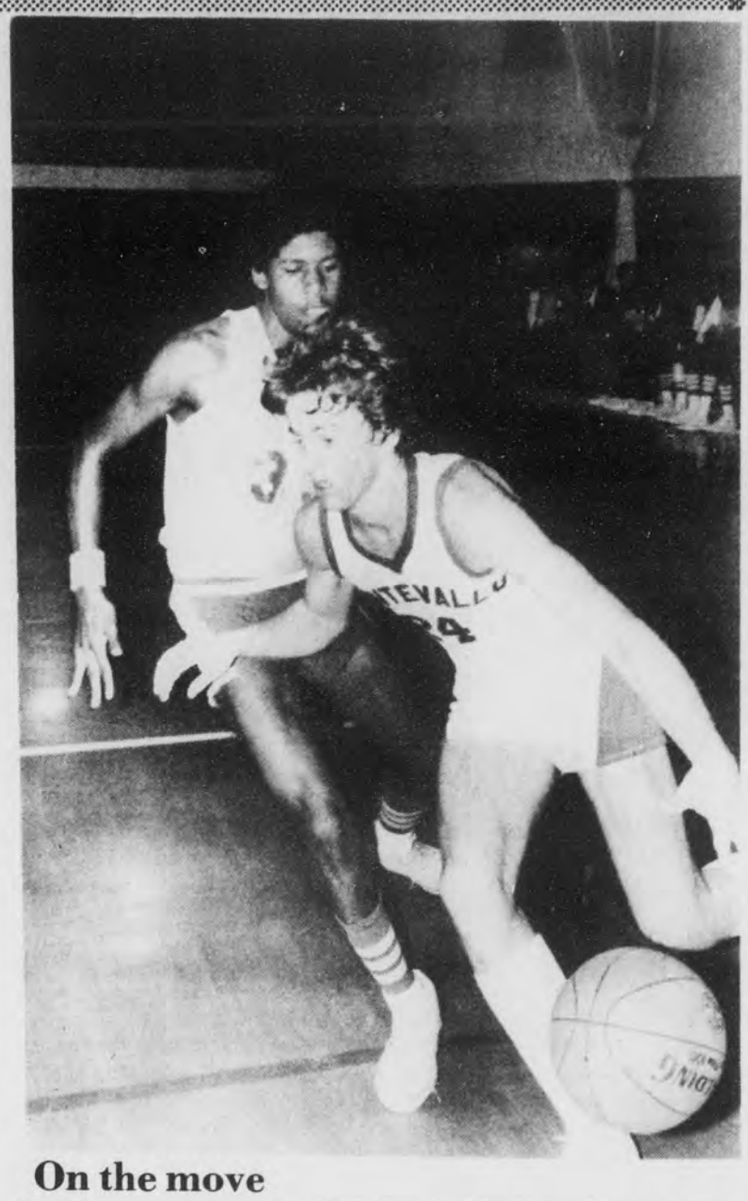
Noting that Montevallo scored on 11 assists, Pnazek pointed out that the offensive and defensive team play this year is quite possibly the best he's ever had the pleasure to coach.

"I've really been amazed at how hard they work and how well they execute," the coach said of the young squad.

"They've done everything I've asked, and some have done more," he added.

The Bibb County game was fast paced and physically demanding, and the Montevallo coach attributed the victory to strategy execution, team play, overall hustle and his players being in good shape.

The Bulldogs were also effective from the freebe line, pumping in 12 of 18, not counting three shots that hit true but were nullified by anxious feet jumping too soon into the lane.



On the move

Coaches name All-County Football Team

They were the best blocking, hardest hitting, fastest running and surest handed players to take to Shelby County football fields in 1979. And they were chosen by the men best qualified to know--the Shelby County football coaches.

Montevallo coach Richard Gilliam described them as a "dream team." They were made to order for a winning football season.

Wednesday night the Shelby County Football Coaches Association met and voted on the players they thought best represented the area on the gridiron.

The following twenty players were selected for the Shelby County Coaches Association 1979 All-County Football Team:

BRIARWOOD: Peter Wright, RB, 5-10, 140 pounds Senior. Paul Barber, LB, 6-0, 171 pound Senior.

CALERA: Dale Smith, LB-G, 6-0, 190 pound Senior. Bill Seay, RB-S, 5-10, 150 pound Senior. Fran Blanchard, RB, 5-11, 165 pound Senior.

CHELSEA: Tony Isbell, LB, 6-0, 175 pound Senior.

MONTEVALLO: Steve Melsoni, DE-C, 5-11, 165 pound Senior. Clay Cardone, LB-FB, 5-9, 145 pound Senior.

PELHAM: Dale Busby, RB, 5-10, 160 pound Senior. Robert Steele, C, 6-1, 210 pound Senior.

SHELBY COUNTY: Dan Head, DB, 5-11, 160 pound Senior. Arthur Johnson, RB, 6-2, 180 pound Freshman.

THOMPSON: David Cofer, QB, 6-2, 220 pound Senior. Bret Davenport, LB-E, 6-0, 190 Senior. Mark Gamble, TE-S, 6-0, 170 pound Senior. Steve Smitherman, DE-NG-T, 6-2, 230 pound Senior.

VINCENT: Herman Quinn, OT, 5-6, 190 pound Senior. Steve Riggins, FL, 5-9, 150 pound Senior. Everette Abrams, CB, 6-1, 165 pound Senior. Cecil Ford, SS, 6-2, 180 pound Senior.

High Honorable Mention went to Montevallo tackle Jeff Hall, Calera linebacker Jeff Stewart, Chelsea, end John Bearden, Pelham defensive, and Jeff Mathis, and Vincent linebacker Dexter McCrimmon.

Honorable Mention went to Kevin Lawley, Montevallo, Jim Nelson and Scott Moorer, Briarwood, Curtis Barefield and Lloyd King, Calera, Keith Garrett, Chelsea, Mark Gamble and Randy Hawkins, Thompson, and Ray Watson, Mark Brasher and David Brasher of Vincent.

Pelham ups record to 5 and 2

The Pelham Panthers upped their record to 5-2 last week.

Though they started the week off with a Monday night loss to West Blocton by two points (47-49), the end of the week saw them win two games on their home court.

Thursday night the Panthers downed Indian Springs 60-41 and Friday night they put a leash on the Calera Eagles in a 50-34 victory.

Jeff Adams, Mike Enoch, Mike Edwards, Buddy Champion and Keith Forstman were the key shooters for Pelham. Pelham averaged 35 percent from the floor on the last two games.

Though the defensive had been causing Coach Tony Taylor some problems, he felt better after the Friday night game.

"When you hold a team like Calera to 34 points, you're playing pretty good defensive," he said.

The two large margin victories gave Taylor a chance to test all his bench talent and give them some battle experience. And chances are they needed that talent Tuesday night when they faced off against Vincent in enemy territory.

In double overtime

Stubborn ASD downs Chelsea

by David Moore

It was a grudge match for the Chelsea Hornets, and they came so close to getting revenge. But...

The Alabama School for the Deaf had their hands more than full for four quarters and one overtime period before finally downing a stubborn Chelsea varsity squad 69-63 in double overtime.

The week before ASD beat Chelsea 59-45, and the Hornets had been looking forward to avenging that loss last Thursday on their home court.

At the end of the first quarter, ASD was out fron 13-12, but during a hot second stanza, Chelsea pulled out to a comfortable 36-25 lead behind the shooting of Randy Kennedy and Mark Howard.

Though they still held a five point lead at the end of the third quarter, fouls started taking their toll on the Chelsea effort. With one minute left on the clock, the Hornets went into a stall trying to hold onto their 55-54 lead.

Chelsea scored but ASD came back fast and hit for two themselves, only to give up one point to the Hornets on a foul, making the score 58-56.

With nine seconds left in regulation time, Chelsea fouled and ASD tied the game with two free throws.

A Chelsea shot from the key with 00:02 left missed, and the game went into overtime number one.

The Hornets picked up three quick points in O.T., but with 1:01 on the clock, ASD tied the game at 61 all with free throws.

After picking off a Hornet pass, ASD went into a stall that lasted exactly one second too long. They fired off a shot that hit true, but the whistle had already blown the first O.T. dead and the points did not count.

ASD scored two quick goals in the first 25 seconds of the second overtime and added a freethrow with less than a minute gone to take the deciding lead.

Chelsea scored again, but ASD struck back with three more points to cap the game at 69-63.

"I think we just ran out of gas," said Chelsea coack Mike Sims of the game. "And our big guys fouled out," he added.

Center Terry Kelley fouled out late in the fourth period, and Russell Roberts, Keith Garrett and Victor Smith fouled out in the first O.T.

"I'm disappointed that we didn't win, but I'm not disappointed with our effort," the coach said.

Hot stinger for the Hornets was Randy Kennedy with 23 points. Mark Howard picked up 16 points and Keith Garrett scored eight points and played a strong defensive game with 10 rebounds.

Coosa Valley picks up win number one

The Coosa Valley Academy Rebels, after dropping their first two games, put one in the win column Saturday night against Scott.

The Rebels squeaked out a 43-42 home court victory.

Rebel Coach Mark Green says his team is still striving to put it together, but they played considerably better against Scoitt than they played against their first two opponents.

Central beat CVA December 4 in Montgomery by a score of 67-52. In a district game, visiting Bessemer beat CVA Friday night by a disheartening 48-47. The Rebels led Bessemer up until the last minute of the game.

Green attributes the losses to floor mistakes and a weak showing, especially against Bessemer, from the free throw line.

"Our objective is to play as a team," Green said. "We're still looking to put it together."

Guard James Lynn scored 42 points in the three outings for CVA, and Curtis Smith scored 32. Smith, Green said, looked good ondefense.

The Rebels played Talladega at home Tuesday night after press time.

County falls early at tourney

by David Moore

All three roundball teams representing Shelby County last week in the Mid-State Tournament were picked off in first round games.

The Thompson Warriors, defending tournament champions, were beaten in a tight seesaw battle by Pell City, 70-68.

The SCHS and Vincent games were not nearly as close.

Childersburg delivered their second thrashing of the year to the Wildcats, who fell this time by a score of 92-41.

The Yellow Jackets, down by two at the half, suffered a sound whipping in the fourth quarter to lose to Sylacauga 75-52.

"I don't think we played well, though Pell City is one of the best teams we've played this year," conceded Warrior coach Eddie Williams.

Though the Warriors showed a balanced defense and five of their players scored in double figures, it was not enough to overcome Pell City, who hit seven of the eight shots in the fourth quarter to take the victory.

Shelby County High coach Don Pouncey, reflecting on his team's last two outings against Childersburg, in which the Wildcats were outscored 198 to 93, said, "It's nothing you can fault the kids for. Ninety-five percent of them are really trying."

The Wildcats showed a little spunk during the first half of the tournament game, but, as Pouncey pointed out, it's impossible to win a game when you turn over the ball 38 times.

"Winning is important, but right now I'm just looking for improvements," Pouncey said. "We're just going to have to keep plugging on. It's hard to get your confidence up when playing Childersburg."

The Wildcats will have to tangle with Childersburg at least one more time this year when they meet them at home, February 19. After five outings, SCHS is still looking for that illusive first win.

A promising Vincent team, playing better ball than most expected, stayed with Sylacauga for most of the first three quarters, before the home team caught fire and took off for the final score of 75-52.

"I'm proud of the kids. I don't think anyone thought we'd stay with them that long," said Jacket coach Richard Crumpton. "They're (Sylacauga) tough. They're the best around."

Once again, foward Dexter McCrimon proved to be the highlight of the Vincent effort, as he pumped 29 points onto the scoreboard.

Friday night the powerful Childersburg team faced off against the awesome Sylacauga roundballers in the final round of the Mid-State Tournament. The Sylacauga Aggies won by a score of 64 to 62.

Bulldogs hold football banquet, name outstanding players

Hard work pays off

Some team members were unsung heroes; some dug in hard when the going got rough. Recognized for their effort along these lines were (1-r): Dereck Stewart, David Melsoni, Wade Bice, Ronnie Holsombeck and Rance Gaddis.

Their effort counted

Most valuable players

Named as outstanding players on the 1979 Bulldogs football squad were (1-r): Paul Russell, Clay Cardone, Steve Melsoni and Kevin Lawley.

The 3-7 record posted by the Montevallo High School Bulldogs wasn't a true reflection of the calibre of this year's football team, head coach Richard Gilliam stressed Saturday night.

"I've never had a more pleasurable season," Gilliam told the approximately 150 people assembled in the University of Montevallo's UM Room for the annual Football Banquet.

Even though the season was described by the coach as the second worse in his 27 year career, Gilliam said he thought his players were "fantastic."

Fans didn't quit coming to games despite the losses, Gilliam noted. He said that was due to the character the team showed.

There were only two games, the MHS football mentor pointed out, in which the Bulldogs went into the fourth quarter without a chance of winning.

Echoing the coach's words concerning the quality of the team, Montevallo Councilman Grady Parker read a resolution from the city's governing body expressing appreciation to the players for "accomplishments and determination."

The document, which was signed by Mayor Ralph Sears, also commended the coaching staff.

Gilliam praised the Athletic Booster Association for their support and he attributed the quality program to the support and cooperation given by high school principal Cratie Corbett.

Expressing gratitude for the additions to the coaching staff, the head coach noted that a number of schools MHS played had between seven and nine coaches on their staff.

In addition to Kurt Pnazek and Bobby Sherrer, Gilliam now has the assistance of David Bailey and Tony Berry. He presented all of them with plaques of appreciation.

In the awards department for players, team tri-captain Clay Cardone captured three trophies. They were for Most Valuable Player, and both Best Offensive and Defensive Back.

Team captain Steve Melsoni was selected Best Defensive Lineman and David Melsoni was named the Most Improved Player.

The Best Offensive Lineman award went to Kevin Lawley who also racked up the best academic marks to merit the Principal's Scholastic trophy.

In making the latter award, Corbett pointed out that almost half the team were honor students.

Rex Wallace and Steve Melsoni tied for the Most Valuable Defensive Lineman award. The Coaches' Gut award went to Rance Gaddis and Wade Bice was voted the Unsung Hero on the team.

Based on game statistics, outstanding Headhunters were Jerome Jones for individual tackles and Jeff Hall for pursuit.

Dereck Stewart received the Bulldog Spirit award and the Bulldog Memorial trophy went to Ronnie Holsombeck. Paul Russell was the recipient of the Theron Fisher award for athletic excellence.

Junior High football awards were also made during the affair and recognition was given to both B team and the varsity cheerleading squad.

Thompson vs. Montevallo:

Arch rivals gear up for Friday shootout

by David Moore

There are basketball games and then there are basketball games.

Friday night, at 6:30 in the University of Montevallo gym, the Montevallo High Bulldogs will face off against the Thompson Warriors. This will be a basketball game. Count on it.

Last year's action between these two arch rivals saw the Warriors bump off Montevallo twice, once by two points in the last 15 seconds, once by three points in overtime. But the Bulldogs bit back in the County Tournament and beat Thompson by seven.

Montevallo, posting a 3-3 record this year, will be coming off a strong 54-43 win against Bibb County last Friday at home.

Thompson, with a 3-1 record, played a rescheduled game Tuesday night against Bibb County on their home court, but that score was unavailable at press time. Thompson's only defeat thus far came at the hands of Pell City last week in the Mid-State Conference Tournament. That game was lost by two points.

Bulldog coach Kurt Pnazek holds Thompson's speed and shooting in high regard, not to mention the depth of their bench, which he says is as good as their starting five. He wants to be sure his young 'Dogs' set the pace and don't get caught in Thompson's warpath running game.

Pnazek says his team will be boning up this week on their man-to-man.

Though the Montevallo coach claims his team is at a disadvantage, he did point out after beating Bibb County that the Bulldogs are improving at every outing.

At Thompson, coach Eddie Williams and his squad have had to concentrate first on Bibb County, but you can bet the Montevallo game will be hard to keep off their minds.

"Anybody that plays Montevallo had better make it a big game," Williams told the Reporter. "Pnazek does such a fine job with those kids."

Williams says it will be a spirit packed game, and "whenever the ball is tossed up between Montevallo and Thompson, people come out to see it."

Pnazek is expecting a close game and says it may well boil down to performance at the foul line.

Anyone planning on attending the game had better come early to the B-team match at 5 if they want good seats.

As Pnazek put it, "Both communities take a lot of pride in who wins that ball game. It's going to be a tough game. The fans will get their money's worth."

The 6:30 varsity shoot-out will be followed by a roundball duel between the University of Montevallo Falcons and the Belhaven Clansmen from Jackson, Mississippi.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY CARRIES THIS MUCH COAL 149 MILES ON A GALLON OF FUEL.

"Guess how far a truck could carry it."

L. Stanley Crane, Chairman, Southern Railway System, Washington, D.C. 20013

The railroad is the most efficient user of fuel in the transportation industry. Bar none. And the Southern Railway is one of the most efficient railroads in the country.

For instance, on the Southern, this 3,000-lb. load of coal can travel 149 miles on one gallon of fuel. How far could a truck carry it on the same amount of fuel? Well, the railroad is, on average, about four times more fuel-efficient than trucks, 60 times more efficient than planes, and even more efficient than waterways. So it's easy to see that trucks can't carry freight anywhere near as far as railroads can per gallon of fuel.

What does this mean for the future? Well, it means that trucks will be used less and less for long hauls.

More and more products will ride on the Southern, and trucks will be used for distribution at the other end of the line. Because, in the coming years, only the railroad will have the energy-efficiency for long hauls.

We have the energy for the long haul.

UM basketball coach picks up 100th win

UM basketball coach Bill Elder picked up his 100th win Dec. 4. Not only that, but his team scored exactly 100 points in the history-making game, routing Talladega College 100-66.

"If we can keep scoring like that - a point for each win I'm going after - then we shouldn't lose too many more ballgames, should we?" the sixth-year mentor chuckled as he was presented a plaque marking the milestone by UM President Dr. James Victrey immediately after the contest.

The Falcons didn't get 101 points the next time, but did get enough to win, pulling out a 70-68 squeeker at Athens State College on Dec. 6. Two nights later, the team ran up against a very talented University of Alabama in Huntsville team and dropped an 85-67 decision to the homestanding Chargers.

The 2-1 week left Montevallo at 7-3 overall, 1-2 and in 6th place in the Southern States Conference, and 6-2 and 4th in the NAIA District 27 race.

The decisions also put Elder's coaching record at 101-59 at Montevallo, and at a fine 219-118 lifetime mark. He was 118-59 in seven seasons at Northeast Alabama State Junior College.

Elder, a native of Birmingham, was the first basketball coach at Northeast after receiving his B.S. from Samford in 1964, and his M.S. from Tennessee in 1965. He earned four basketball letters in college, two at Cedarville (Ohio) and two more at Samford.

Defense has always been the trademark of Elder's teams, and he has never had a losing season by relying on it. His Northeast teams led the state and the region in defense all seven years his was there, and twice led the nation. His Montevallo teams have ranked 3rd, 10th, and 14th in seasons past, and the "Elder era" has been the most successful in Montevallo to the NAIA District 27 Playoffs, and it is no secret that's the team's goal for this year. So far, it certainly looks possible.

The Falcons had an easy time of it against Talladega for one of the few times ever, even though Montevallo is 11-0 series-wise against the Tornadoes. Reggie Harris paced a quintet of Falcons in double figures with 23 in that game, followed by Mike Daniel's 19, Tyrone Bumbry's 14 off the bench and with his folks from Quincy, Ill., down to watch, Dennis Crutcher's 12, and James Berry's 11.

Montevallo rallied from a 13-point first-half deficit to defeat Athens State. Crutcher led the way with 19 points, 17 in the second half, and kept Athens State at bay by sinking 11 of 12 free throws, including 8 in a row and scoring Montevallo's last 9 points. Harris and Daniel chipped in with 18 and 13, respectively.

Montevallo, after taking an early 18-17 lead, couldn't contain the much-bigger Alabama-Huntsville team on the boards and suffered its first road loss of the season. Harris scored 20, Ronald Fantroy came in to score 14, Crutcher added 12, and Berry had 10.

The Falcons close out pre-Christmas play with a pair of SSC games this week, hosting William Carey College on Thursday, Dec. 13, and Belhaven College on Friday, Dec. 14. Both games are set for 7:30 p.m. tipoffs.

Alabaster club hears estate talk

Alabaster Rotarians learned how to get their money into the pockets of their children without passing the Internal Revenue Service. The advice came from a trust officer for a Birmingham bank at the Rotary Club's weekly meeting last Thursday.

Reid Wills told the group that he originally got into the trust and estate planning field just after graduating from the University of Georgia when his banking boss noticed that his name matched the job description. "And I've read quite a few wills since then," Wills joked.

Among the problems generally faced by estate planners are finding a suitable guardian for minor children, avoiding taxes, and leaving spouses well cared for, he noted.

Naturally, Wills declared that hiring a bank as trustee would go a long way toward solving all these, as well as other post mortem problems.

Some 40 Rotarians, and guests from as far away as California, attended.

Roughnecks man rigs seven days a week in search of gas

by David Moore

They call themselves roughnecks. Outsiders would probably agree.

Their work is hard, grueling. And dirty. And it goes on seemingly forever. Weekends and holidays do not exist for the roughneck. The job of deep drilling the earth in search of gas and oil demands that a rig be manned seven days a week.

Jutting 150 feet above the barren, strip mined hills in the southwest corner of Shelby County stands Warrior rig # 9 operated by Warrior Drilling and Engineering Company of Tuscaloosa. For 69 straight days roughnecks on that rig have been going at it three shifts a day, every single day.

"It's a hard job. You turn into a hard person," says head driller and foreman Marty Sumners.

When he and his four man day shift crew clock out in the afternoon, they are not exactly ready for teacakes and milk around the kitchen table.

"Miller time," is a much better description of their frame of mind after a day of tripping pipe, pulling blown sections and making connections.

(Of the five man crew, only Sumners does not drink that particular brand of beer. He goes for Michelob.)

Twenty-seven year old roughneck Steve Thomason claims that he once knew a rigworker who did not drink. "He lasted a week and went back to religion," snickers Thomason.

The rowdiness of the roughnecks, which is not limited to their off hours, has led to numerous encounters with local police.

"Roughnecks just find trouble," Sumners comments stoically above the constant rumble of the rigs' diesels. The 23 year old foreman pauses for a moment and changes his comment: "Trouble just finds them, I believe."

Thirty year old motorman Stanley Lee walks into the shack up on the rig platform. His ample, beer-fed belly is covered by a black Harley-Davidson t-shirt. He wears a golden earring in his left ear which you can see behind his thick, black beard and under the long black hair which hangs from under his hard hat. Lee grins.

"None of us are badassess--everybody else just thinks we are," he says.

Living the pressures of a seven-day work week all year long, Lee says, "You gotta' let out some steam."

A few weeks ago, while manhandling the kelley bushing back into place around the rotating casement pipe on the platform floor, Lee's heavy, steel prize bar flipped back and cold-cocked him in the head.

Though Lee was helped to his feet, none of his co-workers thought too much about the incident other than that it was funny. The work can be dangerous and they all know it.

"You can't hurt a roughneck," states Sumners. "You might scare him, but you don't hurt him."

One does not become a roughneck, the crew explains, simply by landing a job on a rig. The novice rig worker is called a "worm" and as the name implies, he is held in low esteem among his fellow workers.

The first day on the rig for a worm is more than likely a well-remembered occasion--if not a traumatic experience. The worm is initiated into the "brotherhood" by an informal, and somewhat crude ceremony, referred to as "doping".

The worm is held by the roughnecks in an unflattering position while the doping is administered with a large glob of bearing grease on a wooden swab.

Though his co-workers now consider him a fellow roughneck, Mike Sexton, 30, of Gordo, gets teased about being the worm on the rig. (Sexton generously offered this reporter the privilege of becoming an honorary roughneck and the opportunity of experiencing a doping first hand, but the reporter rather quickly changed the subject.)

Thomason said he was fortunate and missed out on his doping because the crew on the rig he was working at the time had recently doped their boss and the initiation ritual had been abrubtly canceled.

Besides the long, hard hours and the various dangers involved, roughnecking is also hard on marital life. Three of the men have wives at home in Gordo and Fayettville, while they have taken up temporary quarters in a Columbiana apartment. The drilling operation may continue for up to three more months.

It's no wonder, says Sumners, that divorces are not unusual among roughnecks and their wives. One man on the day crew has already been divorced, he says.

Twenty-three year old Frank Massey, who has three roughneck brothers in his family, lives with his parents in nearby Marvel. The worst part of the job to Massey is the weather, he says. And the best part is payday.

Sumners says that a roughneck with a year of experience can take home about $450 a week including expense money. That, no doubt, is the main drawing card for those who enter the drilling fields.

At any rate, it is safe to say that those who work the rigs are a special breed of men.

Though their vocabularies, mannerisms and post-work activities may be offensive to many segments of society, everybody still needs the gas and oil produced by domestic rigs.

And, as the stickers on their hardhats proclaim, "Every rig needs a roughneck."

"It's a hard job. You turn into a hard person."

Head driller Marty Sumners lowers the casement pipe back into place after his crew finishes making a connection, the term used when another section of the pipe is added to drill deeper into the earth. Like the rest of his crew, Sumners sports a well stickered hard hat. (Photo by Moore)

Columbiana school presents 'Celebration'

The Elvin Hill Elementary School in Columbiana is presenting its Christmas Festival entitled "A Christmas Celebration" today.

The fourth and fifth grade choir will present the song "The Twelve Days of Christmas"as first graders add their special interpretation.

The third grade boys and girls have written a letter of special thanks to Santa which they will present along with the Christmas Play "Tweedledee Plays a Bad Joke".

Second grade students will sing many favorite secular songs including "Jingle Bells", "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer", and "I Say Mommy Kissing Santa Claus".

First graders will become real live dolls and ask the musical question, "Are My Ears on Straight?" To end the evening the Kindergarten will recreate the Nativity as the choir sings a selection of sacred songs.

The festival will be made possible by the work of school volunteers. Mrs. Emily Kitchens acted as chairperson for the musical portion of the program and was aided by Sheila Dobbins, Jane Windham, and Diane Pitts. Diane Ellis and Diane Isbell were in charge of sets, and Peg Hill acted as teacher coordinator.

The rest: 15 cents for interest expenses; 10 cents for depreciation on equipment; 8 cents for taxes; 4 cents for common stock dividends; and 3 cents for preferred stock dividends.

IN MEMORY

In Memory

In loving memories of Shawn Jennings Brasher who passed away two years ago today, December 13, 1977.

Loving Memories
Your gentle face and patient smile
With sadness we recall
You had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.

The voice is mute and stilled the heart
That loved us well and true,
Ah, bitter was the trial to part
From one so good as you.

You are not forgotten loved one
Nor will you ever be,
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.

We miss you now, our hearts are sore,
As time goes by we miss you more,
Your loving smile, your gentle face,
No one can fill your vacant place.

We love and miss you
Mother, daddy, family

Case No. CV-79-367(E)

TO; The following described land:

A lot situated in the SE¼ of SW¼, Section 14, Township 20, Range 3 West, Shelby County, Alabama, described as follows: Commencing at the Northwest corner of the SE¼ of SW¼ of Section 14, Township 20, Range 3 West and run thence East along the North line of said forty 430 feet to point of beginning; run thence East along the North line of said forty 420 feet; run thence South and parallel to the West line of said forty 430 feet; run thence West and parallel with the North line of said forty 420 feet, run thence North and parallel with the West line of said forty 430 feet to point of beginning, less and except any portion of subject property lawfully conveyed by the previous owner, Al Sykes, deceased, from the 4th day of September, 1943 through this conveyance of said property to the Plaintiff on June 24, 1957, said conveyance being recorded in Deed Book 187, Page 450 in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama;
and the following named person, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees:

Queen Esther Quinn; Paul Mallett; Susie Mallett; Samuel Lewis Bryant; Eloise Bryant; Annie B. Collins, the trustees of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Pelham, Alabama, to-wit: Tom Sanders and Oscar Sykes, and their successors; Benjamin Alexander; Bonnie Lee Alexander; Prince Bryant; Adell Bryant; Rev. Homer Jackson, as pastor and Don Coplen and Willie Jones as deacons of the Pelham Immanuel Spiritual Church, and their successors; Plantation Pipe Line Company, a Corporation; and any and all unknown parties, including any persons claiming any present interests therein and including any persons claiming any future, contingent, reversionary, remainder or other interest(s) thereon, who may claim any interest in the above described property.

Take notice that Ozella Watson Grayer has this day filed her verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest thereon, and against all other persons and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Ozella Watson Grayer and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is now pending in said Court.

Plaintiff alleges in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the Plaintiff on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that Plaintiff claims title to said lands through and by virtue of that certain warranty deed from Al Sykes dated June 24, 1957, and recorded in Deed Book 187, page 450 in the Probate Office of Shelby County, Alabama; that during the time of Plaintiff's ownership, she has been in actual, peaceable, notorious adverse possession of the above, described property, and has paid taxes thereon for a period of more than ten(10) years next preceding the filing of this bill. That certain instruments have been subsequently filed of record purporting to convey title to portions of subject property to certain defendants, which said deeds create a cloud on the title of the Plaintiff's property.

Plaintiff further alleges in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, Plaintiff's only information of the above defendant's is:

That Plaintiff after most reasonable and diligent search and inquiry was unable to locate the following named persons to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to Plaintiff, said persons being as follows: Paul Mallett; Susie Mallett; Annie B. Collins, the trustees of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Pelham, Alabama, to-wit: Tom Sanders and Oscar Sykes and their successors; Prince Bryant; Adell Bryant; Rev. Homer Jackson, as pastor and Don Coplen and Willie Jones as deacons of the Pelham Immanuel Spiritual Church and their successors; and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to Plaintiff, may claim an interest in or to the above described property are unknown.

It is, therefore, ordered by the undersigned Clerk that publication of this notice by made in the Shelby County Reporter, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in Shelby County, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, and that all those to whom this notice is addressed and any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon, the above described real estate, or any part thereof, or any interest thereon, be and they are hereby required to plead, answer or demur to the complaint in this cause within the time required by law, and not later than the 10th day of January 1980.

It is further ordered that a copy of this notice, certified by the undersigned clerk as being correct, shall also be recorded as a lis pendens in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama.

Done this 14th day of November, 1979.

Sparkling parade

Crowds lined the streets in Calera Saturday evening to watch the city's annual Christmas parade. Santa Claus and Miss Alabama, Kathy Pickett, were two attention getters in the festive event. Five county bands provided music and 20 floats competed for prizes. The Chamber of Commerece and Civitan Club were joint sponsors of the event.

New judges appointed in courthouse shuffle

by Reporter Staff

Governor Fob James announced Tuesday the appointment of Robert R. Armstrong, Jr., to the position of Circuit Judge, Place No. 2 of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit.

He will take the place being vacated the first week in January by the resignation of Judge James Sharbutt.

At the same time, Governor James announced that Mrs. Patricia Mungenast Smith will become the new Shelby County District Judge, the position Judge Armstrong holds at present. Mrs. Smith is now an Assistant District Attorney for the Eighteenth Circuit.

Judge Armstrong is a 1974 garduate of Cumberland Law School, and is 31 years of age. He was named District Judge last January by Governor James to complete the term of District Judge Harold Walden who was elected Circuit Judge, Place No. 3.

Armstrong told the Shelby County Reporter he was very glad to get the new judgeship. "I enjoy this work more than anything I've ever done in my life," he said.

He explained that he likes the intellectual challenge of analyzing problems and coming up with correct conclusions, to see that justice is done.

Speaking about Judge Sharbutt, Armstrong said he was a scholar of the law and his decisions were rarely appealed. "I hope I can do as good a job as he has."

The chief qualities a judge must have, Armstrong said, are to be fair and honest with all people.

"That's what I call 'blind justice' treating everyone the same."

Judge Armstrong lives in Alabaster with his wife and their five month old son. Earlier in his career he was associated with the legal firm of Ferree and Armstrong.

Mrs. Smith, the new District Judge, is a 1976 graduate of Jones Law School in Montgomery. Before her appointment as Assistant District Attorney she was associated with the firm of Bell and Johnson in Pelham.

She is 27 years of age and is married to Jerry C. Smith.

She was in Birmingham on official business Tuesday when her new appointment was announced and was unavailable for comment.

Abex pioneers new furnace

Abex Corporation is taking steps to build an experimental furnace in Calera. "There's nothing else like it in the world," is the way it's described by L.E. Belluchie, plant manager.

He told the Reporter the furnace will be a forerunner of an even larger one to be built at the company's installations in Pennsylvania, if it proves successful in Calera.

"It will be very energy efficient" Belluchie said "because we can see that in the future less and less gas will be available."

Called a 'fluid bed heat treat furnace' it is designed to provide a new process for heat treatment of caststeel railroad car wheels.

The process utilizes a heat exchanger and natural gas burners to "fluidize" a bed of Olivine sand, through which wheels will be passed for treatment at a rate of 20 wheels per hour.

The major pollutant from the furnace will be particulates from the "fluidized" sand bed, the combustion of natural gas, and "sandblasting" of the wheels as they pass through the bed. Additional small amounts of gaseous pollutants will be emitted from the combustion of natural gas.

A cyclone and a baghouse will be used to control the particulate emissions to a level significantly lower than required by applicable air pollution control regulations.

The AAPCC technical staff has determined that the proposed construction project will satisfy requirements. However, a public comment period, which began December 13 and ends January 14, has been established to give interested individuals an opportunity to submit additional facts which concern the effect of this proposed facility on air quality in the area and might alter the preliminary decision that this construction project would meet all applicable state and federal air pollution control requirements.

Comments should be submitted to James W. Cooper, Director, Alabama Air Pollution Control Commission, 645 South McDonough Street, Montgomery, Alabama 36130.

Copies of information submitted by Abex, along with the preliminary PSD determination by the AAPCC technical staff, are available for pulic inspection at the Porbate Judge's office, Shelby County Courthouse, Columbiana, Monday through Friday, during regular office hours. After completion of the comment period, the final AAPCC determination will also be available for public inspection at this location.

Alabaster officials to receive pay raise

by Bert Seaman

Alabaster's mayor in 1980 will earn a monthly salary of $500 and members of the council will get $100 paychecks.

The action to raise the salaries was taken at Monday night's council meeting to be in compliance with the law which requires any increase in pay for city officials be taken care of six months in advance.

At the present time the mayor's salary is $200 and other members of the panel get $50 per month.

It was agreed that the new council would decide on the amount to be allotted for expenses.

The salary increase will not go into effect until October of 1980 when the next council takes office.

Due to accidents in recent weeks which involved police cars, the panel agreed to declare an emergency situation and forego taking bids on another car for the department.

A police package LTD now being driven by Investigator Larry Rollan will be used as a patrol car and a used car will be purchased for Sgt. Rollan.

"That will save us about $3,000," remarked Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek."

In other action, the panel agreed to go ahead with railroad crossing work at 12th Ave and Railroad Street near Siluria Mills.

Because so much time had elapsed since the original resolution had been approved, the council was required to adopt another resolution.

According to the mayor, the city's share of the expense for the project will amount to between $3,000 and $5,000. The remainder of the funds for erecting a pair of blinking signals facing Railroad Street will come from the Railway Safety Act.

The project will also include placing warning signs and pavement marking.

Mayor Zuiderhoek told the panel that he was also going to see if any funding was available for putting lights at the crossing at Ball Park Road where a fatality had occurred.

Reminding the council that the city's first check of the $90,000 the city receives in revenue sharing money would probably arrive in April, the mayor suggested the funds be used for a new library.

Giving her approval to that suggestion, Councilwoman Burke remarked that a larger library is needed to keep pace with the city's growth.

Another way the funds could be used, Zuiderhoek said, would be to acquire another backhoe which is badly needed since the city is "in the sewer business."

Going along with the County Commission's request to approve three at-large representatives to a county industrial board, the Council agreed to the appointment of Bill Schroeder, Buddy Argo and Ray Hamilton.

It was related that the four businessmen the Commission will appoint are Jim Seaman, Jimmy Rowe, Sherman Holland and Pete Raughley.

Georgia man killed

The Kawasaki 1000 lying on County Road 55 where it intersects Hwy. 280 belonged to 46 year old Mervin J. Crawford. The retired serviceman was killed Thursday when he was struck by the station wagon driven by Rev. Dan Thrower. The minister had been waiting in the median for a truck to pass and he pulled out without seeing the motorcycle.

Pelham worried about school if Hoover annexes Riverchase

by Reporter Staff

The Pelham Council went on record Monday night in unanimous opposition to Hoover's annexation of Riverchase.

The official statement, introduced by Councilman John Tanner echoed the prevailing opinion of the council that annexation of Riverchase would offer no benefits to Shelby County.

"I'm concerned about the possibility of problems with the school," Mayor Burk Dunaway told the Reporter after the meeting.

Dunaway said he was bothered by unanswered questions such as what would happen to Riverchase Middle School if Hoover formed its own school system, as Vestavia did. Dunaway also indicated concern over Riverchase becoming a part of Jefferson County.

The council also approved a $386,000 bond sale to FHA to cover costs incurred last spring when Pelham expanded its water system.

In other action, the council passed an ordinance making it illegal for Pelham residents to misrepresent themselves when filing county ad valorem and auto tag forms.

The ordinance is designed to reduce the problem of residents denying on the forms that they live within Pelham city limits. The ordinance carries a sentence of up to 60 days in jail, and/or a fine of between $1 and $100.

An ordinance was also passed by the council accepting the new Alabama Criminal Code.

It was reported that two other ordinances expected to come before the council were still under consideration by city attorney Frank Ellis. These ordinances, if passed, would make it illegal for

Suspicious fire leads to car theft inquiry

A mobile home fire in Sweet Alice Industrial Park in north Shelby County tipped Sheriff's Department investigators off to the possibility of an auto theft ring operating in the area.

When the North Shelby Fire Department answered the call last Tuesday evening, firemen noticed car parts and other types of equipment in the area.

Donald "Pat" Moore, who lived in the home with his wife and two children, is being sought for questioning.

According to Charles Matthews, owner of Guardian IPCO and the mobile home in which Moore lived, the construction worker was supposed to keep an eye on the premises when the business was closed.

Sweet Alice Industrial Park is located on Cahaba Valley Road (Hwy. 119).

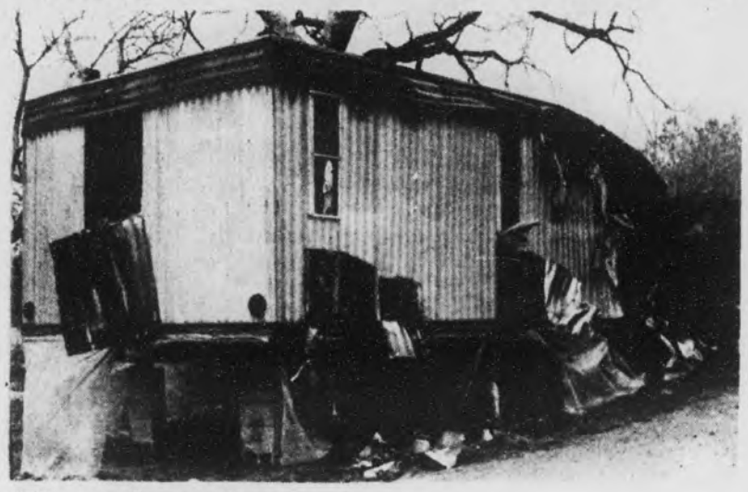
Truck and car frames, tool boxes, tires, acetylene torches, air tanks and assorted car and truck parts were found scattered throughout a wooded area near the mobile home.

Sheriff's investigators loaded up as much as they could and transported it to the Sheriff's Department.

According to firemen who investigated the cause of the blaze, it did not seem to be accidental.

Thefts discovered

This truck frame and other automotive equipment found in the woods at Sweet Alice Industrial Park has led law enforcement authorities to believe an auto theft ring may have been operating in the area.



Fire alerts law

When the mobile home occupied by Donald "Pat" Moore caught on fire last Tuesday evening, firemen from the North Shelby Fire Department noticed assorted items of automotive equipment in the area. The home was unable to be saved as it was well involved when the two NSFD units arrived.

Cycle mishap claims life

A 46 year old Georgia man who had recently retired from the service was killed as he rode his motorcycle on Hwy. 280 Thursday.

Mervin J. Crawford Jr. was struck by a car shortly before 11 a.m. as he was returning to his home in Columbus.

According to State Trooper Robert Matthews, who investigated the accident which occurred at the intersection of County Road 55, the retired serviceman died shortly after he arrived at Brookwood Hospital.

Rain was falling as Rev. Dan Thrower pulled out of the Hwy. 280 median and struck the cyclist. The Mt. Tabor Methodist minister told him he hadn't seen the cyclist until he hit him, the trooper reported.

The impact caved in the right front fender of Thrower's car and spun it around. Crawford, who had reportedly been visiting his father in Athens, was hurled approximately 90 feet.

Here are some facts about Christmas you may be interested in.

* * * *

The tradition of sending Christmas cards is only about 100 years old. The first Christmas cards were not printed until the 1870's.

Did you know the Christmas carol "Silent Night" was written by a 26-year old priest, Father Joseph Mohr, and an equally young schoolteacher, Xavier Gruber, in 1818 in the little town of Oberndorf, Austria.

In the last century, oddly enough, most people used the expression "Happy Christmas" instead of "Merry Christmas". But whichever way it's said, we extend joyous holiday greetings to you.

Fee shirking checked

by Bert Seaman

"It won't make us or break us," Alabaster Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek said Monday night as the Council discussed merchants fudging on business license fees.

But since the panel felt some members of the business community were not giving a true picture of their inventory, on which the license fee is based, measures are being taken to ensure a more accurate estimate.

Next year, it was decided that business owners will be required to come to city hall to pay the fee rather than send a check in the mail as some do now, and to take an oath before the city clerk as to the true value of the inventory.

It was pointed out by Councilman Dan Gillis that the city has the authority to inspect the inventory if it's felt necessary.

With the intent of cracking down on merchants who haven't been paying enough for a business license, Gillis recommended raising the fine for a false inventory statement from $200 to $500.

The law also reads, Gillis reminded the Council, that a person giving a false affidavit can be sentenced to not more than six months at hard labor for the city.

A number of merchants buy licenses for $15, Mayor Jack Zuiderhoek reported and that amounts to an inventory of not over $1,000, he said.

For the businesses he was referring to, the Mayor said "That just doesn't cut it."

If a business has an inventory worth over$1,000 but less than $5,000, their fee is $25; if it's less than $10,000, it's $35, and if it's $10,000 and over, the fee is $45.

The Mayor and Councilman Gillis agreed that the matter should be discussed with the Chamber of Commerce.

Putting some teeth into another ordinance, the panel agreed that the city would conform to the provisions of the new state criminal code.

It was pointed out by Councilman Wayne Lucas that when the new code goes into effect in January, habitual offenders would face from 15 years to life after three convictions.

A resolution that the Council was asked to support was tabled for further study.

The recommended legislation came from the Joint Highway Committee of the state legislature that a 5% privilege tax be levied on the wholesale price of gasoline and motor fuels.

Because of the present funding system, it was pointed out that a crisis situation had been created in maintaining highways.

The money from the tax would be divided between the state, counties and municipalities.

Cancer Society ups goal, aims at raising $16,800

by David Moore

The Shelby County Chapter of the American Cancer Society last week announced a record Cancer Crusade goal and a chairman to lead that drive.

Up $4300 from 1979, the goal of the 1980 Cancer Crusade stands at $16,800 for the county. Spearheading that drive will be F. Reid Long, an Alabaster real estate broker.

Shelby County Chapter president Ken Williams explained at the group's quarterly board meeting last Thursday night that the crusade's goal is based on a standard 5 cents per $1000 of spendable personal income, and the increase over last year's goal is due to the county's growing population and economy.

"Last year we grunted and groaned, sweated and moaned to raise $12,500," said Williams, last year's crusade chairman. This year, he added, "we're up in the big leagues."

Williams said, "We're very fortunate to have someone of Reid's talents and energies to head this drive." He promised Long 130 percent backing from the board.

"I'll need a lot of help," Long acknowledged, saying his plan at this time was to start the format Williams set up last year and take it from there.

Long said that the crusade's various committees and chairpeople would be appointed by the next meeting of the board, set for Thursday, March 13.

Williams told the board that the 1980 crusade was already off to a good start with late funds from the 1979 crusade, corporation donations, fund raising projects.

Noting that 1979 was the county's first year to reach its goal, Williams said he was confident that under Long's leadership this year's drive would also be successful.

The 1980 fund drive will place special emphasis on educating the community to the early warning signs of cancer.

Memorial Committee chairperson Mary Kroell requested that anyone wishing to make memorial donations to the cancer drive should contact her P. O. Box 476, Alabaster, Alabama, 35007, or 663-3704.

The crusade will kick off February 28 with a statewide rally to be held at 10:00 a.m. at Birmingham's Hyatt House.

Statewide the Cancer Society aims to raise $1.2 million in 1980 under the leadership of former Alabama football player and Tennessee coach Bill Battle and his wife.

Attending the board meeting, besides Williams, Long and Kroell, were vice president John Ferree, secretary Mrs. Grady King, treasurer Mrs. Billie Lacey, directors Tommy Snowden, Elizabeth Stowe, Ed Blackwell and East-Central Alabama area director Susan Swindle.

Lime plants defend antitrust suit

Three major lime producing plants in Shelby County are being charged with price fixing.

It was learned last week that the Dade County, Florida, Water and Sewer Authority is planning to bring suit against Allied Products Co., Longshore Lime and Martin Marietta Cement, charging them with violating antitrust laws.

A purchasing agent for the Florida utility said that bids on quicklime submitted by the three firms and by three other firms in Miami that serve as their distributors, were the same with only one exception.

That exception was a bid slightly lower on freight rates.

The contract for 18,500 tons of quicklime was divided among the three Miami distributors.

Robert Carr of the lime division of Martin Marietta told the Reporter Tuesday, "Our attorneys have advised us not to have any comment." He said he had not seen a copy of the reported lawsuit.

The three lime producing plants are major Shelby County employers and Shelby County leads the Southeast in the quarrying and production of lime in all its forms.

Allied has plants in Alabaster and Highway 25 between Montevallo and Calera.

Longview is located at Saginaw, and Martin Marietta is north of Highway 25 between Montevallo and Calera.

Spirit of season

Christmas faith, hope

All of a sudden, it's the Christmas season. Perhaps it is the overwhelming rush of current events in the last few weeks that has prevented our having time to prepare for the joyous celebration.

If everyone seems subdued this year with the terrible events in Iran, the spectre of recession, the ever continuing inflation, and the threat to our lifestyle by the advancing costs of oil products, it is small wonder.

But we must take the opportunity during Christmas to renew our hope and strengthen our conviction that right must and will prevail.

The Spirit of Christmas is all around us. As Americans and as residents of Shelby County, we are blessed with an abundance of riches - the moral and spiritual kind - as well as the monetary kind, especially when compared with peoples in other parts of the world.

The message of Christmas - Faith and Hope - is there for everyone to hear and take to heart. ...MMS

Take extra precautions in holiday traffic

"Last year 20 people died in Christmas holiday traffic accidents," said Colonel Jerry Shoemaker, Alabama Department of Public Safety Director. "The holiday was a 78-hour period. This year the holiday period is 102-hours. With our traffic death experience during the year, we are expecting 20 deaths in traffic accidents."

The Christmas holiday death toll will be counted from 6 p.m. Friday (December 21) until Midnight Tuesday (December 25). The New Year holiday period this year will be counted from 6 p.m. December 28 until midnight January 1, another 102-hour holiday. Ten traffic deaths were experienced during last year's holiday and 12 are expected during the New Year holiday this year.

"There is something expecially tragic about Christmas holiday traffic deaths," Colonel Shoemaker said. "During this time for family closeness, the season of joy, traffic deaths are destroyers of the happiness of the season."

Holiday traffic is expected to be equal to last year's that is heavier than the normal traffic encountered. Last minute shopping and traditional home-for-Christmas travel will put more vehicles on the roadways and increase chances for accidents.

"Last year 15 of the 20 deaths during the Christmas holiday occurred on the Saturday before Christmas," Colonel Shoemaker said. "With the help of all persons using the streets and highways, your Alabama State Troopers hope this holiday and the New Year holiday will be far less tragic."

Decision made

Fat, tall, big and small, picking the perfect Christmas tree for the living room is not always a simple task. This is why Debbie Whitaker of Alabaster brought her son, Tim, apparently the family expert, with her last Wednesday to pick a tree for decorating their home. (Photo by Moore.)

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, member of the FDIC.

An old photo in the mail, torn in two places, and faded, wih not a line saying why it was sent and not a word saying where it came from-- just an old picture with the date 1924 on the back.

You could see the front steps on the old high school and the front door and the two columns, one on each side of the steps. On the first step was James Longshore. On the second step was Cecil Falkner and Skillet Bird. And on the back step Ehney Camp and Leon Archer.

And, looking at it, I decided all over again that Time is surely a gypsy.

For the first time in years the old pecan tree in John Lewis Cates' pasture just stood like a sweetgum sprout and took up space and didn't leave a nut to pay for its keep.

But I suppose there's a first time for everything. At least, that's what the old lady said who kissed the cow.

I went out early, about August, and looked. I didn't see a pecan but I supposed it was because there were so many leaves. I went back again. But the leaves were still there. The third time I went the leaves were all gone and the nuts too. Except there hadn't been any nuts.

But things have a way of evening out. I found that out the next night when I was reading the paper and came across this ad about pecans. Some guy in Georgia had plenty of 'em. And since, he had so many, he was selling 'em so cheap you'd think you were stealing 'em

All he was asking for a two pound box was eleven dollars and ninety-five cents.

When John Willis came along, down an old road that snaked up the side of a mountain and crawled down the other side and ran off out of sight down a little hollow, there were deer in the middle of the road, close to a bridge with a creek running under it.

John, unlike most folks, had no desire to kill a deer. I guess that's why he slowed down and blew his horn, and blew it two more times before the last deer, a big buck, got out of the road.

Two miles further on, still on the same road, he came to a little hill. It was a crazy sort of hill, that came up from every direction and peaked on a bare knowl. A hill a guy could stand on and see every which way, especially if he was hoping to spy a deer.

Maybe that's why a dozen guys were there this morning.

"Have you seen any deer," John asked, stopping his car.

"Not a one", a hunter answered. "We haven't seen a buck all week".

Road crews get praise

Letter to Editor,

In reply to the letter in last weeks edition, "Keep the holiday season happy, drive safely," from Mr. Don Blackerby of Calera.

I would like to compliment him on his letter and also the law enforcement officers from the state, county, and city police. I think they are doing a good job. And I know though the Christmas holiday season is a trying time for them, the public would be lost without them.

I would like to add a little more to that subject if I may, of making and keeping the roads and highways safe for the traveling motorist. I could not keep from thinking of how much there is involved, just in Shelby County alone, on road and highway maintenance.

From Interstate, U.S., State and County highways, also city streets, and what it takes to keep up so many miles of paved road and highways safe for the traveling motorist. There's only several hundred miles of Shelby County paved roads and highways.

Starting from the Shelby County Commission, through the Engineer and his office staff, Superintendent, supervisory personnel, county crews as shop mechanics, who repair the vehicles and equipment to help get the job done; other county crews as asphalt repair, the safety center barrier and edge lines, all traffic warning signs for safe traffic control; ditch cleaning and shoulder work, also right of way cutting crews and the bridge and culvert work.

It's not all labor. It takes a lot of skill to get too often overlooked and underestimated on the expense of both labor and material.

Also, the public tax payer is a contributor to this continued safe operation.

I would like to say happy holiday season and safe traveling through out the coming new year.

Sincerely,
Joseph C. Glass

AG wants tougher crime laws

by Reporter Staff

In a tough law and order speech to the Fraternal Order of Police last Thursday night, Attorney General Charlie Graddick highlighted some of his goals for the future of law enforcement in Alabama.

Of principal importance was the new Criminal Code, to go into effect statewide January 1, 1980. Copies were handed out after the talk.

Graddick complained that former Mobile legislator Doug Johnstone proposed 101 amendments to the original code, which would have gutted it.

The legislature rejected some of the amendments, notably those that would deny police officers the right to use deadly force "when appropriate," and that would make 2d degree burglary a misdemeanor. However, Graddick said that further work on the code would be appropriate.

On the state judiciary, "we need judges that'll give stiff sentences. We've got some, but we don't have enough," Graddick stated, to the applause of the thirty or so policemen in attendance.

Noting the discrepancy in the Alabama Uniform Controlled Substance Act, which prescribes a 2-15 year penalty for possession of a bag of marijuana, and the same for selling heroin, Graddick opinioned that possession penalties should be left as they are, but selling penalties greatly increased.

"Take that Juvenile law, and move it back to 16 years of age," Graddick said, receiving enthusiastic applause for the second time. Everyone present seemed to agree that too many 17 and 18 year olds are hardened criminals.

Saying that it was unusual for him to like federal courts, Graddick urged state adoption of a number of trial procedures used there: joinder of multiple defendants into one trial, which increases the likelihood of conviction of the junior members of a group of criminals; a one-to-one jury strike, instead of the present system that gives the defense two strikes for every one of the prosecution (except in Jefferson County, where local legislation provides for one-to-one already); and the federal rules on pre-trial bail which were recommended as being tougher than Alabama's.

Although he sympathized with the people of St. Clair county, Graddick said that we do need a new penitentiary in the state.

"People don't like landfills or pens in their back yard. But it's better to have them (convicts) locked up in your back yard than roaming around loose in your living room," he said.

Graddick hoped he could work with Lt. Governor George McMillan, author of the present incentive good time law, to tighten it up. Now it runs so automatically that it de facto repeals the discretion of the pardons and paroles board.

A new feature Graddick endorsed would be a provision that prisoners who "messed up" would lose some of their accumulated good time.

On prison administration, Graddick told an anecdote about a three time-convicted murderer who always decapitated his victims with a lawn mower blade, being assigned to cut grass along the highway in Montgomery.

Graddick said the controversial new prison commissioner from Arkansas had tightened up on slips like that, and also succeeded in getting his prisoners to really work on the prison farms.

Meeting in their new place off County 26 near Saginaw, Shelby County Lodge #41 of the FOP closed the session to outsiders so that past president Sonny Davenport could install the new officers for 1980.

They were: Lyle D. Mitchell, president; James L. Jones, vice-president; Mark Austin, secretary-treasurer; Tom Barnes, guard; Virgil Rice, conductor; and Douglas Jackson, chaplain.

State trustee for 1980 was D. O. Watson.

Lodge trustees are James R. Keister, Howard D. Brodgen, John C. Palmer, Jr., Pat Swinney, Robert W. O'Connor, and Dr. C. Allen Graves.

Legal counsel is John F. Tanner, and financial advisor is William B. Watson of the Shelby State Bank.

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

Did someone say "Merry Christmas?"

How in the world can anyone be merry when there's a constant battle to be fought at this time of the year to resist all those irresistible goodies that seem to be everywhere you look?

Even before folks started trotting out their yuletide treats, I had started to get panicky about my sweet tooth.

My son really brought me up short one evening as I was settling down in an easy chair with my third bowl of ice cream.

"Mother, you're going to OD on that stuff," he exclaimed.

So I began to make a determined effort to get steely eyed whenever I spied any sweets and I even managed to say "No" a few times when some were offered.

But now that Christmas is almost here and everyone is baking like mad, how is it possible to look steely eyed and say "No" all the time?

Tables laden with goodies have been at almost every event I've covered lately plus there seems to be a banquet on my agenda almost every week.

Thinking that I'll miss the food and just take in the program, I sometimes purposely plan to arive late. It doesn't always work though.

Last Friday evening I sauntered into an affair about the time I thought awards would be presented, but instead I was ushered into the food line.

Even my valiant effort to leave just a little bit on my plate as a symbolic gesture that I possessed a little bit of willpower failed.

And at an event the following night I went completely to pieces. I had three desserts.

Even at the office I'm not safe. A fellow worker bounced in today with a huge box of chocolates wishing everyone a "Merry Christmas!"

How can it be merry, I want to know, when I have to forbid myself to stay away from that box when she put it down right near my desk?

Did I hear someone say "Why don't you move it?" I just don't have the willpower.

UM budget passed

A $2.1 million budget increase for the University of Montevallo's 1980-81 budget was approved Friday by the Alabama Commission on Higher Education (ACHE), and UM President Jim Vickrey was pleased.

The recommended funding for the 1980-81 UM budget includes: $6,576,000, organization and maintenance budget (general operating expenses); $50,000, vocational education; $164,000, Alabama Traffic Safety Center; $208,000, Communications Center; $296,000 Speech and Hearing Center; and $218,472 in "quality enhancement" funds for program accreditation and library purchases.

"It's taken us more than two years to secure a reasonably adequate recommendation from ACHE," Dr. Vickrey said, "and its gratifying to see that things like quality and stewardship now mean something in Montgomery."

His comments were apparently among the few complimentary remarks made to ACHE in connection with the controversial plan that Gov. Fob James requested -- recommendations of which have been described in recent news stories.

The UM president also commended the Commission for what he called its "total commitment to the enhancement of the quality of postsecondary education in Alabama."

Unemployment tax remains in effect

An unemployment tax imposed on workers four and one half years ago will remain in effect during 1980. William J. Davis, director of the Alabama Department of Industrial Relations, said private industry employees are required to pay one-half of 1 percent on the first $6,600 earned, or a maximum of $33 during the year.

The Alabama Unemployment Compensation Law requires employers to deduct this tax from their workers' pay during any calendar year when the State Unemployment Trust fund, at the end of any fiscal year, is below the amount required for the next calendar year.

HOE students give party

Smiles of joy were the reward.

A Christmas party for the children from the day care centers in Calera and Vincent warmly rewarded the students in the Health Occupations Education classes at the county vocational school.

Last Friday the students, under the direction of teacher Phyllis Armstrong, organized entertainment, including the reading of the Christmas story, a skit, and a dance contest. Santa Claus then arrived with gifts for all the children, and refreshments followed.

The students decorated the room with a pretty Christmas tree.

The Question of Transubstantiation

Approximately one thousand years after Christ established His church, the false doctrine of "transubstantiation" was begun. The doctrine affirms that the bread and the fruit of the vine of the Lord's Supper become the literal body and blood of Christ, when they are blessed.

This false doctrine presumes to teach that a weak and unworthy man can turn a wafer of bread and some wine into the human body of Christ, the identical body and person of Christ being in heaven at the same time. Presumably, Christ is again killed as a sacrifice, is eaten, and is offered for the people's sins.

Christ used symbolic language when he stated, "This is my body" and "This is my blood." (Matthew 26:26-29) In John 10:9, He stated, "I am the door," but He is certainly not a literal door. He was no more speaking of His literal blood and body than He was referring to Himself as a literal "shepherd" or His followers as literal "sheep" in John 10:1-10. One uses such language when he states, "This is my mother," when he shows a picture of his mother. One enters into the real of absurdity and utilizes faulty hermeneutics when he attempts to make literal that which is symbolic language.

The Lord's Supper is composed of partaking of the bread and the fruit of the vine, which are emblematic of the body and blood of Jesus Christ who died for all men. The New Testament church partook of the Lord's Supper weekly on the first day of the week. (Acts 20:6,7; I Cor. 11) Transubstantiation is not the Lord's Supper.

Curtis A. Cates, Evangelist

Newcomer wins crown

Her hobbies are modeling, roller skating and swimming. And she wants to be a veterinarian when she grows up.

Her name is Kimberly Wheeler and last Friday night she was crowned Miss Riverchase at the school's pageant and annual Christmas dance.

The eighth grader is the daughter of Mrs. Marilyn Wheeler, who moved to Riverchase just last summer from Kentucky.

First runner up in the pagent was Renee Busby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Busby.

Second runner up was Cathy Anthony, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anthony, and third runner up was Johanna Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ward.

Johanna Ward was also chosen as Miss Congeniality by the 25 girls competing for the Miss Riverchase title.

Rounding out the top ten contestants were Debbie Markley, Michelle Donahoo, Krissy Byars, Kim Alexander, Venessa Usher and Rhonda Mooney.

On December 6, 111 girls were presented to a school assembly and 25 were chosen from those to compete in the pageant based on appearance and poise.

Miss Riverchase and the runners-up were selected by judges based on appearance and poise and also an interview.

Making Christmas cards

Youngsters in the Title 1 reading classes at Thompson Elementary School got into the holiday spirit by making Christmas cards for residents of Briarcliff Nursing Home. Using scissors, glue, and glitter, the 50 youngsters participating in the project created the cards and then penned verses on them. Here 19 4th and 5th graders work on their creations which were delivered to the nursing home this week.

Hospital adds to staff

Tnree new persons recently filled staff vacancies at Shelby Memorial Hospital.

Eugene Taylor has been hired as the new assistant administrator and chief financial officer. Berry Gilbert is a new controller and business office manager and Barbara Ashby has taken the post of director in the Social Service Department.

Taylor, who has previous experience at Brookwood Medical Center and Cherokee County Hospital, will be responsible for planning and coordinating all financial activities of the hospital.

According to the new assistant administrator, his primary objective "is to ensure the continued financial stability that Shelby Memorial has enjoyed in the past."

He is a Birmingham native and a graduate of Samford University, is affiliated with the Hospital Financial Management Association, the American Hospital Association, the American Finance Association and Rotary International.

He replaces Ralph Underwood who is now employed with Selma Medical Center.

Berry Gilbert, who replaces former controller and business manager Terry Grizzard, will supervise several departments, including admitting, accounts receivable, accounts payable and hospital investments.

Gilbert came to SMH from Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

He has recommended that detailed policies and procedures be written concerning the operation of the business office.

SMH administrator R. Roland Bradford expressed his pleasure by appointing a locally educated person to the position of controller. Gilbert, a Birmingham native, is a graduate of the University of Montevallo.

Barbara Ashby, a former worker for the Birmingham Family and Child Services and the Tuscaloosa Family Agency, said her background will prove beneficial in dealing with situations she will face as director of social services.

Currently the department is involved in developing discharge planning programs and working with other community resources in developing services for child abuse, rape and spouse abuse counseling, and cancer screening.

Students learn by writing

Making Christmas cards served a twofold purpose for Title 1 reading classes at Thompson Elementary School.

Not only did the 50 youngsters who took part in the project profit from writing the verses on the cards, but they also had the satisfaction of doing something for others.

The 100 cards were taken to residents of Briarcliff Nursing Home this week by Sharon Hamilton, one of the teachers of the class.

Others assisting with the three day project were Title 1 reading teacher Snadra Persons and aides Dorothy Prestridge and Jeanette Butler.

State won't pay for drugs

Medicaid recipients in Alabama no longer have some of their prescription drugs paid for by the state program.

On Saturday, December 1, the Medicaid program deleted about 400 drugs from its approved list.

Governor Fob James and Medicaid Administrator Hoke Kerns approved the exclusion of many drugs for blood circulation difficulty, coughs and colds, ulcers and gastrointestinal problems, general pain, and urinary tract infections.

Health Law specialist Micki Stiller of the Legal Services Corporation of Alabama said.

"Alabama's poor, diabled, and elderly people will be drastically affected by this cutback," she said.

"The Medicaid recipient should first talk to his or her druggist to see if prescribed medicines are still covered under Medicaid," Ms. Stiller said.

"If not, then the recipient should discuss with his or her pharmacist and doctor whether another approved drug can be substituted for the one now used," she said.

"The doctor can also ask Medicaid for special permission to continue paying for the present medicine, even if it has been removed from the list," Ms. Stiller said.

If further questions are necessary, recipients may contact Micki Stiller, Health Law Specialist, Legal Services Corporation of Alabama, Montgomery, (205) 264-1471.

'Twas the night ...

Santa Claus had little trouble landing on top of the barren hill behind Walker Reach's house on Simmsville Road, as this time-exposed photo by David Moore shows. But Thompson fifth grader Russell Neilson pictures Santa having a little more trouble on the night before Christmas, as put forth in his poem:

'Poor Ol' Santa'

Up in the dark
And lonely sky,
Poor ol' Santa's flying by.

When he landed on a rooftop
Nice and slow
He said to himself, "Might as well go."

He took a deep breath
And then let it out,
Jumped in the chimney
And couldn't get out.

Poor ol' Santa--what a sight!
Stuck in the chimney
On Christmas night.

He called his reindeer
To come about.
So they pulled and pulled
And got him out.

He jumped on his sleigh
And went below,
To deliver his presents
Through the window.

Baptists give for hospitals

Gifts of over $165,000 have been pledged to the Baptist Medical Centers Development Fund by area Baptist churches, according to campaign chairman Dan L. Hendley.

Over $3.5 million of the BMC $5.5 million campaign goal has been raised from individuals, businesses, foundations and church support. Baptist churches in the metro Birmingham area are working toward a goal of $330,000 of this total. BMC is an affiliate of the Birmingham Baptist Association, a local organization of Baptist churches who provide leadership through BMC's Board of Trustees.

BMC-Princeton and BMC-Montclair hospitals are engaged in a capital building and expansion program of $61.4 million for facilities at both locations.

Mr. and Mrs. Claus

There was both a Santa Claus and a Mrs. Santa Claus to hand out presents when the Shelby County Foster Parents' Association held their annual Christmas party Friday evening. A puppet show and singing Christmas carols were also part of the evening's entertainment.

Solemn cast

The shepherds and wisemen, portrayed by youngsters in the Kindergarten class at Montevallo's University Baptist Church, took their parts seriously.

Santa helper provides happiness for children

Santa had a helper when he handed out presents at the Christmas party for foster children Saturday evening.

Mary McAnally of Siluria donned a Mrs. Santa outfit and added some extra merriment to the annual affair.

A convincing Santa was played by Dennis Cobb of Pelham. And gifts were provided by Alabaster's VFW Auxiliary of which McAnally is a member.

Children who attended the event were also entertained by a puppet show put on by the Hand family. Ricky, his wife and brother Joey also led the group in singing Christmas carols.

Members of the Foster Parents Association and staff personnel from the Department of Pensions and Security provided food for a buffet meal and the children present each received a bag of fruit.

Guests who joined the group at the Community Services Building in Columbiana included Shelby County Commissioner Jake Morris and Willie Akridge from the Area Vocational Center.

Columbiana students hear musician perform

His name was hard to pronounce, but students seemed to have no difficulty with the musical program performed by Witold Anthony Turkiewicz when he appeared at Columbiana Middle School last Wednesday.

The student body and guests were loud in their applause even though the selections included compositions by Delulli-Liszt, Chopin and Beethoven.

Vito, as the young pianist is called by his friends, recently turned 18. He attends Samford University where he studies piano under his father, Witold W. Turkiewicz.

At the conclusion of his son's program in Columbiana, the elder Turkiewicz told the crowd in the CMS auditorium, "You have been the best and most enthusiastic audience we have ever seen."

Numbers performed by the young piano virtuoso ranged from the classics to tunes such as Bumble Boogie and Malaguona. He also played a medley of Christmas music.

Then responding to the ovation given him, Turkiewicz played three encores which included the theme song from the Sting.

A veteran performer, the Birmingham musician was soloist with the Birmingham Symphony at 13 and he has performed with the Samford University Orchestra, and the Jackson, TN, and Shreveport Symphony Orchestras.

He and his father will be performing their eighth concert at Samford Feb. 26 and the audience at CMS was urged to make a special effort to attend.

The winner of several prestigious musical awards, the young musician told students who spoke to him after the program that he practiced between five and six hours a day.

During the reception for him in the school library, he also signed autographs for students.

According to CMS principal Ouida Bentley, the school was able to get the talented performer because of a generous donation from a Birmingham friend who preferred to remain anonymous.

Dr. Lawrence A. Farris, Jr., announces the closing of his practice at 1240 First Street North, Jessup Building, Alabaster, on Dec. 30, 1979. Any patients desiring referrals, charts or billing should contact Dr. Farris' office before Dec. 30, 1979. 663-7551.

Winter wonderland

Keith and Brian Russell, grandsons of Santa Hank Russell, are fascinated by all the displays in grandpa's yard in Alabaster. Amanda Pilgreen and her sister Melaine stopped by Sunday afternoon to have a look at Snoopy in his plane, a merry-go-round and other handmade items.

Pelham man goes with FAA

Chester Gault, Jr., completed four years service in the U.S. Air Force and was discharged at Laughlin Air Force Base, Texas, on December 7.

He was in Radar and Air Traffic Control during his period of military service. He has accepted a position with Federal Aviation Administration and will report to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma on January 15, where he will attend the F.A.A. Academy for five months schooling.

Upon completion, he will report to Fremont, California, where he will be employed at a local airport.

A graduate of Thompson High School, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Gault of Pelham.

Santa decorates yard

by Bert Seaman

The outdoor trappings of the Christmas season have added a festive appearance to city sidewalks around the county as well as to the outdoor areas of many homes.

And one yard that's drawing an unusual amount of attention is located at 13th St. SW in Alabaster.

While other homes in the area have the traditional manger scenes and Santas out in front, the eyecatching displays at the Hank Russell residence include a revolving merry-go-round and ferris wheel.

Then, in addition to an airborne Santa in his sleigh, there's Snoopy in his Sopwith Camel with the propeller whirling.

A woodworking hobby that Russell has enjoyed all his life now gives him and all who view his yard additional pleasure during the Christams season.

Even though everyone in the area doesn't know Russell by name, a mention of the yard filled with handmade displays with moving parts identifies him immediately.

Last year was the first that the Alabaster resident made his yard into a winter wonderland and entertained neighborhood children and those going by in cars with his Santa impersonation.

This year, the inventive woodcarver has some new displays and his wife has joined him outside as Mrs. Santa Claus.

"I did this for people to enjoy," Russell explains. "But," he adds with a grin, "I get more enjoyment out of it than anybody."

The Alabaster resident related that he sketched the designs for the mobiles himself and then cut them out in his basement workshop. They're powered, he explained, with a rotisserie motor.

A see-saw is also part of the moving display and Mrs. Russell was responsible for the dolls on either end. She also got together all the little figures on the ferris wheel and merry-go-round.

Non moving displays that Russell has built include a church and the stable for the nativity figures.

Thompson wins cliffhanger from Montevallo

by David Moore

"It was enough to give the coaches grey hair and ulcers," commented Thompson coach Eddie Williams. "It was another typical Montevallo-Thompson ball game."

It was toss-up close, but after four quarters and an overtime session, the Warriors emerged on top 45-42.

Both teams played solid and consistent defense Friday night, but the offensive spigots ran both hot and cold for the two clubs.

Thompson, down by 11-12 at the end of the first quarter, jumped out early in the second period with eight unanswered points for the widest lead in the game.

After a four minute segment of tough defense during which neither team was able to hit the hoop for points, the Warriors went to the locker room with a halftime lead of 21-17 and the satisfaction of having held Montevallo to five points for the quarter.

In the third quarter the Bulldog defense forced Thompson to shoot more from the outside and managed to block several of those shots. But the Warriors held on to their lead, 29-27.

Montevallo scored on a turnover in the first of the fourth period to tie the score and the game remained neck and neck from there on out.

With 15 seconds left in regulation time, the score 40 all and the pressure cooker turned on high, Thompson missed a chance to put the game away.

Montevallo brought the ball in with six seconds left, worked it under the board and missed their chance to put the game away. The buzzer sounded and they went into overtime, still 40 up.

Three jumpballs and 45 seconds into overtime, Dereck Stewart picked up a foul and hit the top end of a one-and-one to put Thompson out in front.

Thompson got the ball back and tried to put it up for a shot but 6-4 Jerome Jones blocked the attempt. Montevallo couldn't cash in on the turnover, however, and Thompson took it back down court where Red McDade hit for two.

With 22 seconds left on the clock, Yuell Gilbert laid it up for Montevallo, making the score 43-42.

Harry Harris drew a foul for Thompson with 00:12 on the clock, and despite a pressure building time-out call by Montevallo, he hit both attempts in a clutch one-and-one situation to hammer the final nails into Montevallo's coffin.

"I was right about the free throws. We missed an ungodly amount," said Montevallo coach Kurt Pnazek ten seconds after the game. Pnazek had predicted to the Reporter last week winning the game could boil down to performance at the free throw line.

Though the Bulldogs connected on 19 of 49 shots from the field, they made good only four of 14 attemps from the freebie line.

"You're not going to win a close game and shoot like that from the line," Pnazek said after the hollering was over.

"It's always good to beat Montevallo," Williams said. "Kurt and his team did a good job controlling the tempo.

"Each ballgame I see us getting better at something," he said, noting that the defense had improved over its last two performances.

The Thompson offense, which Williams said was not consistent, hit less than 30% from the field, but sank 9 of 17 free throws.

Harry Harris was the strong arm for Thompson, drilling in 15 points and grabbing 20 rebounds. Rod McDade scored seven points and pulled in 10 rebounds, and Haver Carter scored nine points.

Coach Williams noted that Eric Marcus, who scored six points, "ran the game real well."

Dereck Stewart, whom Pnazek said played his best game yet, hit 16 points for Montevallo.

Bret Jones was held to six points, but pulled in 10 rebounds for the 'Dogs. Jerome Jones was good for six points and eight rebounds.

Commenting on Thompson's strong, defensive pressure, Pnazek said, "I can't fault the kids at all. I'll give their defense a lot of credit.

"It's a disappointment. I'd like to have won. But I think it showed the kids that we can play with anyone."

"We've got the kind of kids who have a lot of character and bounce back. We're looking forward to playing them again," Pnazek said.

Williams said, "It was a great game and it's great to win it. I felt like it was going to be close and I feel like the next one will be close, too.

Williams noted that it was the sort of game he liked to see because of the strong fan support. He expressed his graditude to UM basketball coach Bill Elder and UM athletic director Dr. Leon Davis for their help in scheduling the game at the neutral court.

Thompson and Montevallo square off again at the UM court on February 9, 1980.

Other statistics on the Friday night game are: turnovers, Thompson 17, Montevallo 20; steals, Thompson 8, Montevallo 2; rebounds, Thompson 28, Montevallo 33; fouls, Thompson 18, Montevallo 15.

Working inside

Rod McDade works the ball inside against Montevallo's David Melsoni (14) on a drive to the basket. McDade was good for seven points, including the only field goal to hit in overtime. (Photos by Moore)

Snatched rebound

Thompson's Rod McDade snatches a rebound despite the effort by Bret Jones (24). McDade pulled in 19 similar caroms in the Warrior's 45-42 defeat of the Bulldogs.

Chelsea wins from ISS, loses to TCTS, Briarwood

It was the end of the week before the Chelsea Hornets saw the light at the end of the tunnel. They lost Tuesday night to Briarwood Christian and Thursday night to Talladega County Trade School, before picking up a win Friday against Indian Springs.

Briarwood beat the Hornets 63-43. It was an away game for Chelsea, and an off game as well.

"We just had a bad night," said Chelsea coach Mike Sims. "I don't think (the Hornets) were ready to play."

Saying that "off" was not the way to describe his team's shooting, Sims added that his team was out hustled and out coached by Briarwood's Steve Franklin.

Russell Roberts was good for 13 points and eight rebounds in that game.

Of their 81-72 loss against TCTS Thursday night at home, Sims said, "We played well. We just didn't score as many points as they did."

Mark Howard that night was good for 22 points, while Randy Kennedy and Russell Roberts scored 19 and 11, respectively.

But Friday night at home against Indian Springs, the Hornets put it all together for a 71-54 victory.

At the end of the third quarter the score was 45-35. Four quick baskets in the fourth quarter

Pressure

Montevallo's Dereck Stewart (30) applies the pressure as Thompson tries to throw in the ball. Stewart, who scored 16 points, put in his best effort of the season against the Warriors.

But loses to Lincoln

Vincent dunks Pelham 72-58

by David Moore

It doesn't happen too often. Usually when a team wins the coach is delighted. Richard Crumpton felt differently after Vincent beat Pelham 72-58 last Monday night on the east side of the county.

"I'm disgusted with our free throws," said Crumpton, noting that the 'Jackets hit on only four of 17 attempts from the line. The problem, he said, was a lack of concentration.

Shooting like that can lose close games, Crumpton added. (Montevallo coach Kurt Pnazek would undoubtedly agree.)

"It could have been a lot worse," Crumpton conceded. "I guess I shouldn't complain, after all we beat a pretty good basketball team."

His team was anxious and intense, and he blamed their lack of control on his own coaching.

On the brighter side, Vincent worked quite well against Pelham's zone, splitting their defense open and scoring 52 points from the inside.

Though the Panthers had the lead for a short time in the second quarter, Vincent went to the locker room with 31-30 edge. By this point everybody on the visitor's bench had seen action.

In the third quarter the 'Jackets sharpened their stingers and stunned the Panthers by outscoring them 23-11, making the score 54-41.

Pelham's 17 points in the fourth quarter were not enough to overcome their deficit and they fell 72-58.

The Panthers hit 22 field goals and scored on 14 of 22 free throw attempts. Mike Edwards and Jeff Adams both put in some good plays for Pelham.

For Vincent, Dexter McCrimson poped in 23 points and pulled down eleven rebounds. Cecil Ford, "who finally broke loose," as Crumpton put it, scored 16 points and was good for 11 rebounds.

Victor Datcher scored 13 points and picked up 10 rebounds.

Crumpton said Rodney Driggers and Steve Riggins did "super job on defense," and showed "good basketball sense."

The more Crumpton thought about it, the more good comments he had to make for his roundball club.

Then the subject of the Lincoln game came up. Vincent lost that road game 72-58 the following night.

"They just whipped us. And if it's anybody's fault, it's mine. We were not prepared," Crumpton said.

Vincent tightened up their defense coming into the second half down by 35-33. The plan was to make Lincoln shoot from the outside--only the plan did not call for Lincoln to hit two shots. But hit them they did.

"They're a good ball club.," said Crumpton. "You have nothing to be ashamed of when Lincoln beats you. Coach (Ricky) Rutledge just out coached me."

McCrimon was good for 25 points in that game.

Now 2-2 on the season, the Yellowjackets will be off until January 4 when they play Moody at home.

"We're taking it kinda slow, but we're progressing," said the Vincent coach. "We're going to have a good basketball team, but we're going to have to work on it.

Wildcats still looking for win, record now stands at 0-7

Victory remains elusive for the young Shelby County Wildcats who dropped to 0-7 after a trip to Clanton last week.

The final score of 73-65 was the widest margin in a game that might have gone the other way had it been played at home.

The victims of more than 30 turnovers in past games, the Wildcats gave the ball up only 19 times in last Tuesday's game. In the fourth quarter they turned it over only twice, but one of those turnovers proved fatal.

After several one point leads in the fourth quarter, SCHS found itself down by 60-58 with two minutes left. Then Clanton intercepted a pass and converted it into three points to put the game out of reach.

"We played probably the best ballgame we've played all year," Wildcat coach Don Pouncey told the Reporter. "We should have won. The turnover killed us."

Pouncey, who did not rule out the chance of SCHS upsetting Montevallo Friday at home, said that his team's attitude remains good, and that a victory would go a long way towards building confidence.

"If we play the caliber of ball we played against Clanton we're going to beat some folks," Pouncey said.

Noting that he is starting only two seniors, and one ninth, one tenth and one eleventh grader, Pouncey added, "If this group will stay together (until they're juniors and seniors) they'll be a good as anybody we play."

Terry Carter rifled in 29 points and Arthur Johnson was good for 11 in the Wildcat's effort against the strong, one loss Clanton team.

UM wins two big ones

Aggressive pressure defense has always been a trademark of Bill Elder-coached teams. And last week was no exception, as the U.M.team gave a rude reception to two Southern States Conference's Mississippi teams on their swing through central Alabama.

On Dec. 13, Montevallo stymied William Carey on 20 second-half points to break open a close game and win going away 73-52. The next night against conference coleader Belhaven College, the Falcons forced 13 second-half turnovers and pulled away for a 73-60 triumph.

Montevallo won the Carey game handily despite shooting only 40.5 percent from the field. Credit the defense and some excellent free throw shooting (17 of

Calera runs over Altamont

Fast break

The fast break killed Altamont last week as visiting Calera played its own game on the Birmingham court. Bill Seay (10) was good for 25 points, most of them on lay-ups like this. (Photos by Moore)

by David Moore

Observation: Two dozen dedicated Calera fans can sound mighty strong in a nearly empty Birmingham gym.

Observation number two: The lights of the city in the valley below Altamont School on Red Mountain weren't the only things shining in Birmingham last week on Tuesday night.

The Calera Eagles shone brightly too, handily defeating Altamont 69-49 in a fast, running game that could almost have been mistaken for a track meet had it not been for that round thing they dribbled and passed up and down the court.

Seldom setting up offensive plays, the Eagles' pulled in 59 rebounds, most of which they passed long down court for lay-ups or drove into the clear for outside shots.

"I can't remember a team playing as agressively on defense," Calera basketball boss Mark Lovette commented after the game. "And a good defense makes a running game.

"We like to run-- that's the best thing we do. I preach about it sometimes," he said.

The win upped the Eagles' record to 3-4.

The previous night they defeated Verbena 73-56 in another road game.

"I tell you, to win two on the road feels good," Lovette said.

He noted tht the Eagles' three wins came on the three occasions on which all their players were healthy and on the court.

Healthy, on the court and very hot for Calera against Altamont was Bill Seay, "who finally came around," said Lovette, with 25 points and 11 rebounds.

Andrew Dowell was good for 14 points and 11 rebonds and Johnny Ryan pulled in a dozen rebounds.

Against Verbena Dowell had 25 points, Raymond King had 14 and Seay had ten.

Calera stood a good chance of evening out their record at 4-4 Tuesday night when they were scheduled to play Altamont again, this time at home.

Sermon pays off

"A good defense makes a running game," Calera coach Mark Lovett preaches. And the sermon paid off against Altamont as the Eagles out-rebounded them 59-38.

changed the complexion of the game, however, and Chelsea put it out of reach.

"But Indian Springs came to play," said Sims.

In that game Mark Howard hit for 23 points, Randy Kennedy hit for 19 and Russell Roberts connected for 10.

Terry Kelley and Keith Garrett both pulled in eight rebounds.

The Calera Quarterback Club presented trophies to Bill Seay, Most Valuable Back, Dale Smith, Most Valuable Defensive Player, Jeff Stewart, Most Valuable Lineman, and Loyd King, Most Valuable on Defense.

Trophies were presented to the three captains of the Calera Eagle team who led the squad to eight victories during season play. They are: Bill Seay, Dale Smith and Fran Blanchard. Jeff Stewart (r) won the Eagle Spirit award.

19, 89.4 percent) for that.

"I've always prided my teams on their ability to shoot free throws," said Elder, "but we haven't been very good this year (66 percent). Mabe we're starting to come around."

Harold Fincher of Birmingham sparked the Falcons in that game, scoring 16, including 8-or-8 on free throws. Ronald Fantroy added 14 points, Dennis Crutcher and Mike Daniel 12 apiece, and Reggie Harris 11. Fantroy and James Berry led the way on the boards with 9 caroms, and Crutcher picked up 6 steals.

Montevallo had its best shooting night of the season against Belhaven, hitting 57.6 percent, including a sizzling 72.4 percent in the second half. It was a good thing, too, as Belhaven hit 64 percent int the second half and 58.7 percent for the game.

Turnovers were the real difference, Belhaven committing 22 errors to just 12 by the Falcons.

"That's what you've got to do against them, force them to make mistakes," Elder noted. "They're a patient team and won't take bad shots, so you've got to try to make them give it up."

Fincher was high agian with 19 points and 9 rebounds, while Fantroy added 18 points, Daniel 14, and Harris 12.

The twin wins left the Falcons with a 9-3 overall mark heading into the holidays, and a 3-2 mark in the SSC.

Valdosta State College will be the first-round opposition for the University of Montevallo in the upcoming UAH Invitational Tournament Dec. 28-29 in Huntsville.

It obviously will be a tough assignment for the Falcons because Valdosta was a finalist in the NCAA Division II last year, and has four starters back this season.

110% and improving

Eddie Posey was named for the 110% award and Larry Johnson and Johnny Ryan were singled out as the Most Improved members of the team during the annual football banquet for the Calera Eagles.

Calera honors gridders at annual banquet

Although the Calera Eagles continued to swoop down on gridiron opponents with all the skill associated with past squads, their dream of returning to the state playoffs for the third straight year wasn't realized.

But when he handed out awards to players at the annual football banquet Friday night, first year head coach Danny Alverson had nothing but praise for the team.

"They're a fine group of young men," Alverson remarked, "and they succeeded in molding themselves together as a team."

Pointing out that players were always optimistic, the head coach said "They never thought they were out of a game no matter what the figures on the scoreboard were."

Statistics showed that the Eagles racked up a total of 275 points during the season and 19 of the TD's were made by Bill Seay.

The outstanding back won the Most Valuable Back award which was presented by the Calera Quarterback Club.

Seay also received a trophy for his leadership on the field along with the two other team captains Fran Blanchard and Dale Smith.

Another award won by Smith was the Quarterback Club's Most Valuable Defensive Player. Loyd King was also designated for that honor and Jeff Stewart was tapped for the club's Most Valuable Lineman award.

Before the banquet was over, Stewart made several other trips to the podium to receive the E. Marvin Smith Scholastic award, the Eagle Spirit award and the Christian Leadership award.

Other awards were presented to: Curtis Barefield, Sportsmanship; Larry Johnson, Most Improved; Johnny Ryan, Most Improved Back; and Edie Posey, 110%.

Coach Alverson had high praise for the Quarterback Club for their practice of filming every game and for sponsoring the welterweight football program.

He also thanked the faculty for their acceptance of him in his new role and of the administration he said, "No one could have treated me any better."

The head coach pointed out that because of the increasing enrollment, this is the last year for Calera to play in the single A category.

During the annual affair, trophies were also presented to the Junior High football team and recognition was given to the the Varsity and Junior cheerleaders.

Outdoor gifts should fit receiver

BY EARL FRANKLIN KENNAMER

Have you selected that Christmas gift for your outdoors enthusiastic spouse, son, daughter, husband, etc.? If you haven't, better stir yourself. The countdown is hours away.

Naturally, the outdoors leaning of the gift receiver has a lot to do with the type of gift you might buy. You don't give a minnow bucket to an angler who fishes with artificial lures exclusively!

I've mulled over the suggestion problem and as a woods-and stream Santa Claus, I would suggest the puzzled gift-giver select first those items, relatively low priced, that would satisfy the GENERAL outdoorsman or outdoorswoman.

COMPASS. Prices range from three dollars to more than a hundred. However, I'm partial to the liquid-filled type with azimuth only markings from zero to 360 degrees. The Silva Forester or the Prospector are good buys because they have declination adjustment devices. Fortunately, declination of magnetic north from true north is not too much of a problem in Alabama. In western and northeastern states there is a considerable angle to correct, especially if you are working with accurate maps. Prices range from $20 to $25 for a reliable compass. The compass with free swinging needle is not as desirable as the liquid filled type because you have to wait until the needle stops swinging to and fro.

BINOCULARS. The binocular is an excellent present for the outdoors enthusiast. It is useful in hunting, especially when scanning the landscape for deer or turkeys, identifying ducks, etc. Field glasses are an absolute necessity for the bird watcher. Two reliable brands in most large department and sporting goods and camera stores are Bushnell and Tasco. For general use, choose a binocular of six or seven power, with wide angle lens and with a large field of view. The binoc that fits in a spacious jacket pocket is a good choice but be sure to get lens covers, else you will scar the glassware on grit that finds its way into your pocket.

FOOD CONTAINERS. The portable ice chest is a practical gift for almost anyone, even if he doesn't fish, hunt or camp. For first choice I personally prefer the thick walled metal covered ice chest, which costs the most and is often difficult to find.

KNIVES. In the past decade interest in good knives has been honed to a sharp edge. But I'm really not kidding. There were possibly four or five popular standard brands of knives 30 to 40 years ago. Today, there are at least 35 commercial brands and at least 50 well known makers of homemade knives.

The styles have blossomed. There's the rigid-bladed sheath knife some persons carry on their belts in leather scabbards. The regular pocketknife with two or more cutting blades is a good choice for a gift. Recently I've become attached to the medium-sized lock-blade knife.

MISCELLANY. Bedrolls, outdoor clothing, blankets, boots, small outdoor tool kits, such as a combination of hatchet, folding spade, pick mattock.

Finally, as my wife suggested: a gift certificate for a specified amount at the sporting goods store will never be turned down!

BILL WILL

ONE SOLITARY LIFE

Nearly two thousand years ago in an obscure village, a child was born of a peasant woman. He grew up in another village where He worked as a carpenter until He was thirty. Then for three years He became an itinerant preacher.

This Man never went to college or seminary. He never wrote a book. He never held a public office. He never had a family nor owned a home. He never put His foot inside a big city nor traveled even 200 miles from His birthplace. And though He never did any of the things that usually accompany greatness, throngs of people follwed Him. He had no credentials but Himself.

While He was still young, the tide of public opinion turned against Him. His followers ran away. He was turned over to His enemies and went through the mockery of a trial. He was sentenced to death on a cross between two thieves. While He was dying, His executioners gambled for the only piece of property He had on earth — the simple coat He had worn. His body was laid in a borrowed grave provided by a compassionate friend.

But three days later THIS MAN AROSE FROM THE DEAD — living proof that He was, as He had claimed, the Savior whom God had sent, the Incarnate Son of God.

Nineteen centuries have come and gone and today the risen Lord Jesus Christ is the central figure of the human race. On our calendars His birth divides history into two eras. One day of every week is set aside in remembrance of Him. And our two most important holidays celebrate His birth and resurrection. On church steeples around the world His cross has become the symbol of victory over sin and death.

This one Man's life has furnished the theme for more songs, books, poems and paintings than any other person or event in history. Thousands of colleges hospitals, orphanages and other institutions have been founded in honor of this One who gave His life for us.

All the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the governments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned have not changed the course of history as much as this ONE SOLITARY LIFE.

ADO group travels to capital

Ben C. Collier, Alabama Development Office director, recently took three of his assistants to Washington, D.C. to brief Alabama's Congressional delegation on the enlarged scope of activity in which ADO is now engaged in an effort to elicit their support for programs affecting the State's economic growth.

Collier pointed out to the state's senators and representatives that ADO now includes, in addition to Industrial Development, the Bureau of Publicity and Information (tourism); the Alabama Film Commission; and the Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE).

This consolidation of agencies, Collier explained, was brought about to concentrate all economic development activities under one umbrella. The combined economic impact of ADO's industrial development program and the Bureau of Publicity and Information (BPI) now runs between $3 ½ and $4 billion he said.

BPI Director Caroline Cavanaugh expressed concern for Alabama's tourism industry if gasoline supplies become difficult to obtain. She told the congressmen that the travel industry has no alternative energy source while other industries can turn to coal, natural gas or nuclear sources. She described the tourist industry as one depending entirely on gasoline, and said the state's economy would be severely damaged if anything occurs to diminish supplies.

Reuben Finney, assistant ADO director, told congressmen that the state agency needs and appreciates the support provided on the national level in order that maximum economic growth can be achieved.

Fred Denton, state industrial development director, explained the ADO's Preferred Cities Program which is designed to make communities all over the state more attractive to industry. The greater number of towns that qualify for the PCP program, the greater will be the economic growth in the respective congressional districts he said.

Each congressman was presented gifts symbolic of the State of Alabama.

Read-O-Lympics

Calera Elementary School students recently completed a Read-O-Lympics, a project designed to create interest in reading while raising money for essential programs for mentally retarded children and adults. Stacy Cairns, left, read the most books - 43 books; and Jane Euler, right, collected the most money - $63.00.

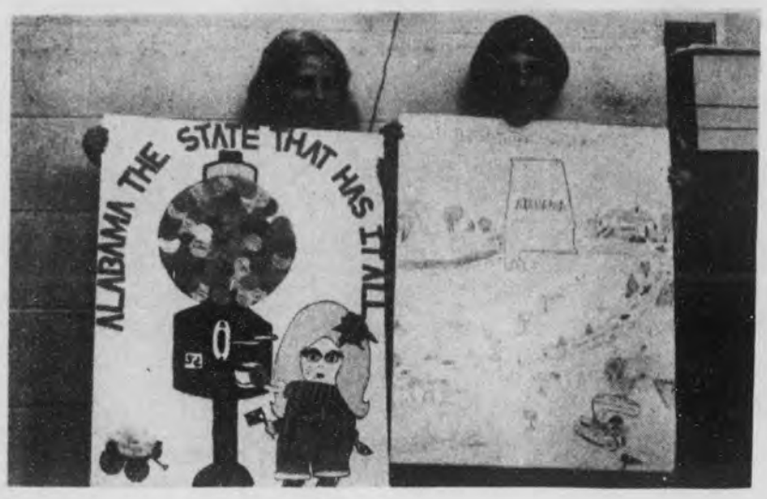
The Pelham Library has received a Christmas gift of the new World Book Encyclopedia together with its companion volumes, Childcraft.

The gift was made in memory of Mr. William C. Shelnutt and Mr. Elmer E. Messer by their family.

As soon as processing has been completed, the volumes will be on the shelves and available for the use of the public, according to a library spokesman.



State's birthday

In celebration of Alabama's 160th birthday, Sharon Gaydon's sixth and eighth grade social studies classes at Thompson Middle held a poster contest. Third and first place sixth grade winners Heather Daniel and Mike Wallace show off their handiwork which will hang with the other winners this week and next at the First Bank of Alabaster. Other winners were Ralph Watson (2nd place, sixth place), and eighth graders Mike Clayton (1st), Darlene Fowler (2nd) and Darrin Ledford (3rd).

Program sparks gift idea

If you're stumped for ideas for gifts or special memorials the Jefferson-Shelby County Division of the American Heart Association offers some suggestions.

Their special "Time to Remember" program provides a way to honor occasions in the lives of friends, relatives and business associates through contributions to the local heart association.

For Christmas gifts for those who have everything, a good way to show you care is a gift in his or her name to the association.

When gifts are received, the Heart Association will send an acknowledgment card to the person or family the donor wishes to honor.

Contributions made to the Heart Association through the "A Time to Remember" program will go toward funding heart research, education and community programs. For information: 592-8363.

Santa arrives bringing joyous Christmas wishes to you, from us.

Good poinsettia care brings annual bloom

by Shelby County Extension Service

We've had calls from several people asking how to care for poinsettias and rebloom them each year. Poinsettias make lasting holiday decorations and gifts if cared for properly.

Poinsettia blooms will last from several weeks to several months. The length of the blooming period depends on the plant's maturity and its care. If the flowers are green or red-tipped and fresh, the bloom will hold longer than if the pollen is covering the flowers.

Put the poinsettia in a sunny location where the temperature is 60 to 70 degrees F. Keep the plant away from cold windows, drafts of radiators. After Christmas, care for the plant as you would any other foliage plant during the winter.

After the danger of frost has passed, take the plant outside to a sunny location and plant the pot to the rim in soil or moist mulch. Cut the stem back to within three to six inches of the soil line. Keep the soil moist. New branches will begin to appear. Pinch the tips of all new branches when they are eight to 10 inches long.

Fertilize the plant every 10 to 14 days with a liquid house plant fertilizer. Lift and turn the pot slightly each week to break off roots that grow out of the pot.

Following the last pinch in August, keep the plant outside until late September and October. Move the plant inside where it will get maximum sunlight during the day. Keep the soil moist and continue to fertilize.

From September until blooming, protect the plant from artificial light throughout the night.

Cover the plant tightly with a dark material or move it to a darkened room each night. If the leaves are still green in November, you have allowed light to reach the plant. About Thanksgiving, the bracts should begin to color and the plant should be in full flower by December.

Holiday poems

"More rapid than eagles, His coursers they came; His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow..." These verses have taken on a clearer meaning for Denise Owen's third graders. Each of her 39 students chose a different verse of the poem to illustrate. Their paintings have added to the holiday spirit at Calera Elementary School.

Alumni head named

The acting alumni director at the University of Montevallo, Jeanetta Corbett Keller, has been named to the job full time, UM President Jim Vickrey has announced.

Mrs. Keller was the unanimous first choice of a campus search committee of faculty, staff, students and alumni, Dr. Vickrey said.

A 1975 UM graduate, Mrs. Keller came back to the Montevallo campus in October, 1977, as director of UM's award-winning Environmental and Energy Education Center (EEEC). Mrs. Keller continued to supervise the activities of the Center part time while working as acting alumni director.

She also earned a master's degree from the University of Alabama in 1976 and began working on a doctorate in higher education administration at Alabama last Spring.

"Mrs. Keller has been an outstanding acting alumni director," the UM President said, "and the initiatives she's undertaken in the last six months have considerably broadened the scope of alumni relations at her alma mater.

I am pleased to appoint someone to the office with the administrative skills and organizational ability that Jeanetta has demonstrated in her work here."

The new UM alumni director is a member of the American Association of University Women and several other organizations. She was named to a recent edition of Outstanding Young Women of America.

"If you had a million dollars'. . . .

What would you give for Christmas?

Students at Valley Elementary last week were asked to submit letters to Santa for publication in the Reporter.

While the second graders wrote what they wanted the jolly elf to bring them, a twist was added to the letter requests for the other grades.

Third grade classes were asked what they would buy their parents for Christmas if they had a million dollars to spend. Fourth graders were asked what gifts they would give Valley Elementary if they were wealthy.

Fifth graders were asked what they would give the world for Christmas.

These are some of the responses given the Reporter.

Second Grade

Dear Santa,

I want a dictionary with some words, some skates with pink pom-poms, a real hamster and a Blockbuster game.

I would also like a Simon game, a cuddly teddy bear, a necklace, a raincoat, a fur coat like my Mom's and a Marie Osmond record and record player.

I also want my sister Jennifer to have a Merry Christmas.

Love,
Shannon Newell
(Mrs. Janet Butler)

Dear Santa,

I think you are very sweet to deliver toys every Christmas all over the world and you don't even get a present for you, as all you get is cookies and milk and so I've come up with an idea. Every Christmas I'm going to give you some presents and poems and storys!

Love your friend,
Ginger Guyer
(Mrs. Donna Compton)

Third Grade

Dear Santa Claus,

If I had exactly one million dollars, I would buy many gifts for my parents. As a matter of fact there's no telling what I would buy. There is so many things I could buy I probably couldn't make up my mind.

Well let's see here.

Oh, I know what!

I would give them my one million dollars and let them pay their bills, like water bills or electric bills or stuff like that.

I also might buy them at least 2 floats. They have always wanted one because when they go to the lake they never have anything to get in the water on.

(Billy, pick up that money!)

Love,
Meredith Stone
(Kay Deaton)

Dear Santa,

If I had a million dollars I would buy my parents a castle on a hilltop. I'd buy white horses and one thousand acres of land with a big lake and 50 azaleas. My Mom and Dad would be king and queen. I would be a prince and my sister would be a prince, too.

Thank you, Santa
Ron Williamson
(Mrs. Margaret Phlasterer)

Dear Santa,

If I had a million dollars, I would buy a trip to Florida for mom.

Why? I love mom.

If I had a million dollars, I would buy a golden ring for mom.

Why? I love mom.

If I had a million dollars, I would buy Love for mom.

Why? I love mom.

Love Marie
(Last name and teacher's name unavailable)

Fourth Grade

If I were wealthy I would give (our school) some money so they could build some more rooms for the first grade and use the trailers for supplies and P.E. trailers. I would get more supply carts at the other ends of the building. I would get more desks, books for the library and filmstrips with film projectors.

Jason DeBerry
(Mrs. Kathleen Owens)

If I were wealthy I would buy our school two maids that do the job well. I would buy some nice things for the library. I would also buy new decorations for the halls for Christmas, Thanksgiving, Easter and Halloween. I would buy some new books, desks, cabinets for the teachers and carpet for the rooms, construction paper. And one more thing--better food. I would buy these things if I were wealthy!

Tiffany Bedford
(Mrs. Gay White)

Fifth Grade

Dear Santa Claus,

If I could give a present to the world...It would be to ask Iran very nicely and calmly to let us have fuel for about 44 cents. Then we could give them all of the food they needed. (Well, as fast as we could grow it and we get what we need.) And to please let our people go, because we haven't held any of their people hostages. Because if you think about it we could be real good friends, but no one will try to be friends, so the longer they are going to keep our people. If you think about it, you probably really love them.

Yours truly,
Jan Connor
(Mrs. Cecilia Tropeano)

Dear Santa,

If I had one wish for Christmas it would be to let the hostages in Iran go. Since you ride in the sky I thought you might see God. If you do, will you please ask him to grant my wish? As for you, you can have all my toys at Christmas.

Your friend,
Beth Ballard
(Miss Debra Garrett)

P.S. Tell God Merry Christmas! Tell Jesus Happy Birthday!

Dear Santa,

If I could give a present to the world I would let everyone know Jesus Christ and how he died for our sins. I would tell the whole world that he loves them, and wants them to serve him. I would let them know that God is right there besides them, that he is ready to help them when they need help. I would share this gift of love that I have in my heart.

Love,
Wendy Resser
(Miss Debra Garrett)

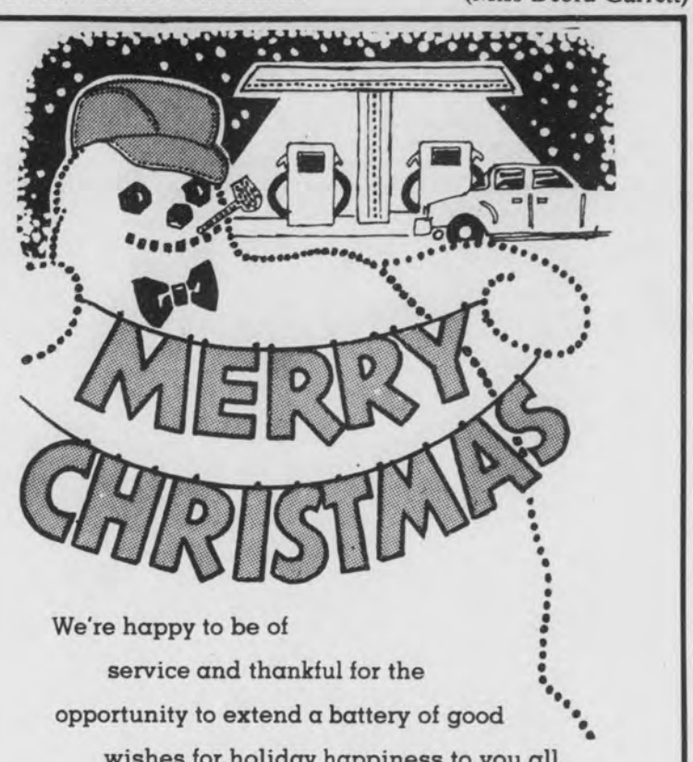
Foresters study patterns of county tree growth

Tree growth in Shelby County soil is being studied by foresters and soil scientists from Alabama, Tennessee and Arkansas.

Information obtained from the study will be compiled and published in the 1981 county soil survey report.

The many different types of soil conditions in Shelby County make it an interesting place to conduct such studies, according to Robert E. Kelley, Soil Conservationist.

The studies will be especially useful to private timberland owners and timber companies, which will be able to predict growth and yield per acre before trees are planted, Kelley indicated.



We're happy to be of service and thankful for the opportunity to extend a battery of good wishes for holiday happiness to you all.

The City Clerk shall give notice, which notice shall be published in newspapers of general circulation in Jefferson and Shelby Counties, Alabama, once each week for three consecutive weeks before the day of the election. Section 5. The provisions of this Act are severable. If any part of the Act is declared invalid or unconstitutional, such declaration shall not affect the part which remains.

Section 6. All laws or parts of laws which conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

Section 7. The provisions of this Act calling for an election shall become effective immediately upon its passage and approval by the Governor, or upon its otherwise becoming a law, and all other provisions shall become effective as otherwise herein stated."

Shape-note singing continues to be popular

Alabama possesses as rich a variety of traditional religious singing styles as does any area in the country. One of the most unique of these is shape-note singing, a musical form dating back to the early nineteenth century, where hymns are set in four-part harmony, and notes printed in different shapes to indicate their pitch.

"Sacred Harp" is perhaps the most widely known of the shape-note singing styles, with adherents throughout the Deep South singing from one of several revisions of the original "Sacred Harp," first published in 1844. The "Sacred Harp" employs a four-shape-note system. Developing along side the "Sacred Harp" in the mid-nineteen century was the seven-shape system. Its most active early proponent was William Walker who published his hymnal the Christian Harmony in 1866.

Ironically, William Walker figured prominiently in the development of the four-shape "Sacred Harp" and the seven-shape "Christian Harmony." Walker had published the "Southern Harmony" in 1835, which was the standard four-shape hymnal for a decade, before the publicatin of the "Sacred Harp" in 1844. Walker had collaborated with his brother-in-law, B.F. White, in publishing the Southern Harmony.

Apparently there was some disagreement between the brothers-in-law after 1835, and in 1844, White published the "Sacred Harp, which stood in direct competition to Walker's "Southern Harmony" among the four-shape singers of the South.

Around the time of the Civil War, Walker began to feel that the seven-shape system was starting to supplant the four-shape system; so in 1866 he published his Christian Harmony, which, to this day, is the principle hymnbook among Southern seven-shape singers.

Walker, of course, was wrong in his predicting the demise of the four-shape system. The "Sacred Harp" remains vibrant even now, with literaly thousands of singers in Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi.

But the "Christian Harmony" also commands its legion of seven-shape singers in the South. For decades the rivalry between "Sacred Harp" singers and "Christian Harmony" singers was almost hostile, with singers of one book having nothing to do with the other. Now, some singers sing from both books, but still pledge primary allegiance to one or the other.

Despite modern media and many new hymnals, and despite the fact that no religious denomination uses shape-note singing as part of its regular religious service, both the "Sacred Harp" and the "Christian Harmony" tenaciously hold to their thousands of practitioners who continue singing these religious melodies that are, in some cases, over three hundred years old, and in a style that can date itself to 1800.

There are those that see the day coming soon when shape-note singing will disappear altogether; and it is true that most of the adherents are over fifty years old. However, it is interesting to note that observors of shape-note singing fifty years ago also noticed that most of the singers were older; and they also predicted that the tradition would not survive much longer. And yet, it survives, and may very well continue to do so.

WE'RE SOLD ON YOUR HOUSE BEFORE WE SELL IT.

Call for our "House Dressing" brochure.

Our theory is simple. We take the time to know your house, price it correctly, and discover its distinctive features. Because when we're sold on it, it's much easier to find the right buyers and close the sale.

Then we even save you time after the sale by helping with the time-consuming paperwork. It's all a matter of spending our time wisely so it doesn't waste yours. This is another reason why CENTURY 21 helps more people buy or sell their homes than any other real estate sales organization in the world.

Going down

Santa may have used the chimney Christmas eve, but after last Friday firefighters at the new Pelham fire station number two began using the fire pole to slide downstairs to the trucks when the alarm sounds. According to PFD Lt. Jerry Lamb, the new station went into operation around 5:30 p.m. Friday December 21. Above PFD firefighter David McCurry demonstrates his form for the Reporter.

County's high schools adopt standardized grading system

by Bert Seaman

It was almost a case of no sooner said that done when Board of Education member Barbara Whitman asked that the county's high school grading system be standardized.

Voicing her concern at the Tuesday night board meeting, Mrs. Whitman pointed out that at Pelham High School, students receiving a grade of 81 would be given a C. At most county schools, she noted, the grade would be a B.

At a meeting of county principals the following day, the decision was made to place all county high schools on a 10 point grading system.

Principals and guidance counselors, who were also present at the session, set a grade scale which makes 90-100 an A; 80-89, B; 70-79., C; 60-69, D and 50-59, F.

And the group also agreed that wherever grades were recorded, they would be numerical grades.

Another issue that was clarified concerned semester exams. It was decided that individual schools could elect to give exemptions. Otherwise, all teachers in the school would give examinations to all the students..

But even students who are not required to take exams or performance tests, must be in school stressed Superintendent of Education, Charles Knowles.

The practice of stretching an exam over several periods and disrupting the normal time schedule is being done away with. And another change in policy will be to require all students to spend a full day in school.

In addition to the county's seven high school principals and guidance counselors, members of the superintendent's instructional staff also participated in drawing up the new guidelines which went into effect Dec. 19.

Referring to the matter of standardizing the county's grading system, Knowles said, "It's been talked about for 17 years, and at last we've finally done it."

Commission will support gasoline tax for highways

by Reporter Staff

The Shelby County Commission went on record Friday in support of an increased gasoline tax for highways.

The Commission passed a resolution supporting the recommendations of the Joint Highway Committee of the Alabama Legislature. That body has recommended a five percent privilege tax on the wholesale price of gasoline and motor fuels at the oil companies and distributors level, not directly at the gasoline pump.

Distribution of the proceeds would be the same as under the formula used since 1967 in dividing the statewide gasoline tax.

The Commission's resolution stated in part that the present funding has created a dire crisis situation in which the state, the counties and municipalities "are facing an accelerating deterioration of their primary secondary and off-road system highways and numerous structurally deficient bridges."

It continued, "if this pattern of critical deterioration is not stemmed through new highway funding, Alabama, its political subdivisions and foremost, citizens stand to face serious safety problems as well as lose millions of dollars which they have already invested in the ...highways and bridges in this state."

Because of funding problems Shelby County has been unable to pave any new roads for several years. Maintenance of existing county highways has become difficult in recent months, because of lack of funds. The Shelby County Highway Department has been reduced in size steadily over the past several years because of the funding crisis.

Road construction and maintenance is one of the primary responsibilities of County Commissions, under Alabama law. Shelby County Commissioners have been wrestling with money problems for roads ever since the first gasoline crisis in 1974, when prices for oil products and asphalt rose dramatically, but the tax income dropped.

Personnel Board approves deputies vacation schedule

Deputies have been wondering whether their new vacation schedule is firm since a member of the Shelby County Law Enforcement Personnel Board objected to the plan being voted on at the Nov. 21 meeting.

"We've heard it will have to be done over because it wasn't legal," one of the two deputies present at last Wednesday night's meeting told the board.

The objections to the board taking action on the plan were voiced by board member Doug Ballard. He made the point that the meeting had not been publicized and that the board did not have a secretary.

However, a motion to approve the new schedule was voted on and passed 2-1.

At last week's meeting, Board Chairman Teddy Brasher assured the two men that everything was in order and that the policy had been filed with the Circuit Clerk as soon as the courthouse opened following the Thanksgiving holidays.

The Dec. 19 meeting was the fourth one held by the board since being reorganized.

Because the bill establishing the first board varied from its advertised form, the courts declared it unconstitutional in January.

Joe Curtin, who is the director of Jefferson County's Personnel Board, was hired as a consultant to make revisions in the original rules and regulations.

Several amendments were added to the existing document and the system whereby personnel are classified was made comparable to state trooper job descriptions.

For example, jailers will now be classified as correctional officers. According to a member of the Sheriff's Department, the reclassification will promote only one investigator.

When the new vacation schedule was presented by board member Mickey Johnson, who was appointed by the deputies, Curtin pointed out that it was in violation of the board's policy.

Under the new setup, the deputies will receive more generous vacations than other county employees.

Ballard expressed the belief that this would create problems in other county departments and also cost the commission more money.

Under the new schedule, deputies who have worked a year get a week's vacation; one to five year employees get two weeks; five to ten year people get three weeks and anyone who has been with the department for more than 10 years is entitled to a month off.

Whether or not a deputy works on a holiday depends on his work schedule. He is not required to be on duty if that is his day off.

Johnson said he felt the deputies were entitled to more vacation time because they couldn't always be at home with their families when other county employees could.

Approximately 25 deputies were present at the meeting when the vacation schedule was voted on.

The only order of business taken up by the board at the December meeting was the discussion of hiring a secretary.

Brasher reported that several applications had come in but he said he thought the position should be advertised.

The board agreed and applications will be taken for the next two weeks.

If anyone would like to attend a board meeting they are welcome to do so, Brasher said. The date of the next meeting is Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room of the Sheriff's Department.

Ground broken for hospital expansion

A ceremony Thursday afternoon marked the beginning of new construction at Shelby Memorial Hospital.

Ben Grubbs, chairman of the hospital board of directors, presided at a brief ground breaking in front of the present dining room.

The scheduled $13 million expansion program will increase the number of beds by 39, will increase the size of the kitchen and dietary section, will add to the emergency room, and make several other improvements to the hospital.

On hand for the ceremony were the contractor, E. C. Coston, and the architect, Al Dampier, who took part in the symbolic 'breaking of the ground' (from a pre-dug trench) along with directors, hospital personnel and Dr. Barbara Roy, representing the medical staff.

Education Board opposes annexation by Hoover

Going on record to oppose Hoover's proposed annexation of Riverchase, members of the Shelby County Board of Education Tuesday night said that it would be a threat to the continued development of this school system.

Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles told the audience at Vincent Elementary School that there was no assurance that Hoover wouldn't one day decide to set up its own school system.

"At this time," the superintendent said in a prepared statement, "the board feels that those promoting this annexation should explain clearly its immediate and long range effects on the school system."

"Pending such explanation," Knowles continued, "we must oppose the plan."

Other information contained in the statement the board had asked Knowles to draw up listed the number of schools in the county as 22 with a total enrollment of 11,800 students.

Mentioning the advantage of this size school system, Knowles said that it is small enough to maintain closeness yet large enough to operate economically.

The superintendent also pointed out that "being countywide and inclusive of all public elementary and secondary school programs also promotes an esprit de corps among staff, students and patrons.

At their last meeting on Nov. 26, the Shelby County Commission also opposed the proposed annexation.

County makes move for new landfill site

by Reporter Staff

A new county landfill will be developed, four miles west of Columbiana on Highway 70.

The County Commission Friday took steps to acquire 100 acres from Gulf States Paper Corporation for the new landfill to replace the Calera landfill, which has reached saturation.

James Ray, county engineer, told the Commission that he had been studying aerial photographs to find a site that would best serve the Calera, Montevallo and Alabaster areas. He said that after finding this site, Gulf States suggested another location of 160 acres near Dargin which belonged partly to Gulf States and partly to U.S. Pipe and Foundry.

Ray said that after checking it out with borings, he and the state health department concluded it would not work for a landfill.

Hospital report gives year end standings

by Marcia M. Sears

Seventy registered nurses are among the 481 employees now working at Shelby Memorial Hospital, according to the annual report made last week by the hospital administration.

The report showed that the largest category of employees was nursing aides, orderlies and attendants, with some 92 persons.

Another large category was licensed practical nurses with 41 persons.

Some 203 persons were grouped together under the heading of "Other health professional technical and support personnel."

Several of the 481 employees are considered part-time, but there are approximately 420 full time equivalent employees, according to the report.

The report also detailed the statistics on how the hospital is used.

The biggest increase in use came in electro-cardiograms, where an increase of 24.3 percent was noted in 1979 over 1978. The next highest increase was in the number of operations which increased by 21.1 percent. In 1979 2,970 operations were performed as against 2,452 in 1978.

Physical therapy treatments and social services also showed large increases.

However, a decrease of 24.1 percent was noted in the use of respiratory therapy procedures, and a drop of 5.2 percent occurred in X-ray procedures.

Emergency room visits dropped by 1.3 percent, and the average occupancy by patients decreased by .5 percent.

The report showed there were 50,642 patient days recorded at the hospital in 1979, down from 50,871 in 1978.

This produced an average daily census of 138.7 in 1979 as opposed to 139.4 a year earlier.

A spokesman for the hospital's accounting firm of Ernst and Ernst reported that the hospital is in a good financial position. On September 30, he said, assets were three times liabilities. He said the total operating revenues increased 13 percent during the fiscal year ending on that date, even though the patient days decreased by about 230.

Hospital administrator Roland Bradford reported in a talk at the annual Christmas dinner that all the registered nurse and staff positions at the hospital are filled. He added that no other hospital in the Birmingham area can say that.

He went on to say that since he had come to SMH in July, two major staff people had died, three or four had moved on in their careers, and two had relocated with their spouses. He said the vacancies had been filled and that all the employees are very happy with the wage and benefit program.

Columbiana signs franchise with board

In order to complete all the necessary requirements for an FHA loan to pay for a new well, the Columbiana Council Thursday evening took the last step and approved a franchise for the city's water board.

The board had floated a $492,000 bond to finance the city's third well. However, there appeared to be no signed franchise agreement between the city and the board which was organized in 1948.

Mayor Bob Bolton told the panel that their signatures were needed on the franchise before further work could proceed and urged them to finalize the matter. He stressed that the city needed the well.

Although he didn't spell out his objections, Councilman Harold McCord abstained from voting on the issue.

According to a water board member, the well which is located in Shelby, as are the city's other two water sources, has been drilled and reamed.

If all goes well, he said it could be tied into the city's present system by this coming summer.

After discussing the matter of locating cars which have been impounded by the city, Mayor Bolton stressed that a written record be made of which garage they had been taken to.

It was also mentioned that a record of the vehicle's contents be made in duplicate and signed by two officers.

Councilman Paul Smith told the panel that if reports concerning ad valorem taxes being less than anticipated were true, the budget might have to be reworked.

It was brought out that some residents of Columbiana claimed they didn't live within the city limits when purchasing car tags. And the penalties being levied by other Shelby County municipalities for such action were mentioned.

Deciding that an accurate record of those living within the city limits be compiled, Smith remarked that even if it took two weeks, the effort would pay for itself.

A question concerning mobile homes in the city was thought to be resolved when the council conceded at their last meeting that an ordinance against the practice has never been enforced.

Mr. and Mrs. Kyle Gothard had been told they could put a mobile home behind their house on Carter Lane if they produced the written consent of adjoining property owners.

The couple complied with the request, but the council was reminded last week that the request should have first been submitted to the city's Planning and Zoning Board.

Although they could make a recommendation on the matter, board chairman Hilry King said later that a final decision would have to come from the council.

It was noted however, the matter could be appealed to the Board of Adjustments which rules on complaints.

In other business, the panel approved the state's new, stricter criminal code.

Quick moving police nab armed robbers

by Bert Seaman

Two Vincent men were in custody Thursday, 30 minutes after they robbed a convenience store on Valleydale Road.

James Louis McKenzie, 27, and Ricky Aaron Fair, 20, were stopped by Leeds police on Hwy. 119 at the city limits.

The duo were charged with armed robbery and taken to the Shelby County jail. Judge Robert Armstrong set their bond at $30,000 apiece.

An undetermined amount of cash and cigarettes were taken in the armed robbery which occurred at Steele Grocery on Valleydale Rd. According to Sheriff Buddy Glasgow, everything was recovered.

Kenneth Steele, store manager, was asked by one of the men for cigarettes when the Vincent man entered the business at approximately 2:35 p.m.

Steele told deputies that when he turned around, the man was holding a 38 calibre pistol on him. The grocer reported that a second man walked in while he was getting the cash, and after it had been handed over, the two fled.

As they sped off, Steele ran outside to get a description of the car, which was a 1973 two tone green Pontiac, and then called the Shelby County Sheriff's Department.

An all points bulletin was put out to all police units in the county and Leeds police were also alerted.

The two were apprehended shortly after 3 p.m. and the cash and cartons of Kools cigarettes were in the car.

Indigents offered free legal service in Columbiana

Legal services for those who cannot afford a private lawyer are available for Shelby County residents at a Columbiana office.

Birmingham Area Legal Services Corporation, announces that its Columbaina office is on Old Highway 25 South, where Strickland Chevrolet was formerly located.

Legal assistance is available free of charge to indigent persons in all types of civil cases except family matters and bankruptcy, according to Hubert van Tuyll, staff attorney for the agency. The corporation is an independent federally funded non-profit corporation established to provide free legal assistance to the indigent.

Persons requiring legal assistance should come by the office on Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 8:30 to 5, or telephone 669-4111.

The office in Montevallo has been closed.

New medical building opens

by Marcia M. Sears

Open house was held Friday at the new Shelby Professional Building.

Located in Shelby Office Park, to the north and the rear of Shelby Memorial Hospital, the new office building contains offices for several doctors.

The building has been in the planning stages for some time, with the early work and planning done by Dr. Stacy Childs, a young, practicing urologist.

The other doctors who joined him in the endeavor are Dr. John R. Fox, Dr. Joel Wissing, and Dr. C. Paul Perry, all of whom have extensive offices in the new building.

Dr. Fox engages in family practice. Dr. Wissing is a radiologist, and Dr. Perry is a gynecologist.

Several other doctors have leased space in the building, and Dan and Nancy Gillis of Gillis Pharmacy of Alabaster, are establishing a pharmacy there.

The building is designed with an atrium in the center. Offices are located on all four sides of the enclosed court, which features various plantings and a live tree that reaches almost to the ceiling of the two-story structure.

The offices on the second floor can be reached by stairs or elevator, and a balcony overlooks the atrium on all sides.

The interiors of the offices are decorated according to the tastes of each of the doctors. They are a far cry from the days when the walls of doctors' offices were all painted green.

Deep carpets, handsome paintings, and durable but decorative wallpapers are used throughout.

Chairs in the waiting rooms are deep and comfortable and most of the waiting rooms are not unlike the living room or den in a home.

DR. STACY CHILDS

Dr. Childs told the Reporter, "We felt that if we made the surroundings as comfortable and homelike as possible, it would keep our patients more relaxed, especially if they had to wait a half-hour or so before we could see them."

Dr. Perry, who had been practicing from offices in Chandalar, said the proximity of the new building to the hospital is very helpful to him.

He can walk from his new office to the obstetrical wing of the hospital in just a few minutes. When he arrived at the open house, he said he had just delivered an ll pound baby, 10 minutes before.

Dr. Wissing, the radiologist, showed the Reporter how the door and walls of the room where his X-ray machine is located, are lined with lead to prevent radiation leakage. The door alone weighs 400 pounds, he said. A quarter-inch layer of lead is visible at the edge of the door.

Dr. Fox's suite of offices features several examining rooms and laboratory facilities.

Nearly all the space in the new building has been reserved by physicians who have found that the growing population of Shelby County requires an ever-increasing number of doctors.

Alleged gift list gives Santa 'ho-ho-ho' as county officals tell what they want Reliable sources which insist on remaining anonymous, turned over the following list to the staff of the Reporter.

The paper appears to be a Christmas list of sorts, and contains the name of numerous county officials and unofficials, both famous and near-famous. It is dated December 20.

It remains uncertain whether the list was rejected by Santa Claus as being outrageous, or if perhaps it never reached the Jolly Ol' Elf.

The list reads as follows:

Sheriff Buddy Glasgow would like Santa to bring him a complete fleet of Blazer jeeps. And the county garage is requesting enough gas to keep the Blazers on the road.

Jail administrator Wayne Lucas wants Santa to bring him an escape-proof jail, while the Sheriff's Investigators are asking for a copy of the Hardy Boys Detective Handbook. Chief Deputy wants Santa to bring him a book on how to pose for pictures. (His expressions or lack of them reportedly leave a lot to be desired.)

Pelham Police Lt. Allan Wade says he needs a hat like Sherlock Holmes wears and "one of those round glass things you look through." Wade's Chief, Dave Watson, wants a street beat for Christmas.

Helena Police chief Gary Carter says he wants a suitcase packed with $152,500. Alabaster PD chief Bull Carter wants a police car with racing stripes.

Vincent PD Chief George Humphries wants Santa to bring him a parachute with a blue light on it, and Chief Sherman Humphries in Wilsonville wants to get something to do next year.

Montevallo PD Chief Troy Kirkland wants to get a fleet of Volkswagon police cars for Christmas. And in Harpersville, Chief Elvis Lineger wants a radar gun with a range of twenty miles.

Airport operator Larry Chapman wants Santa to bring him a real Lear jet.

County Engineer Jimmy Ray is requesting a yellow Tonka dump truck.

Probate Judge Snowden says all he wants is about 400 frames for baby pictures, and maybe a box of chocolate malt balls.

Shelby Memorial Hospital Administrator R. Rolland Bradford wants Santa to put a three-story elevator under his Christmas tree. SMH Board chairman Ben Grubbs wants an apple a day.

Hospital architect Al Dampier wants a large box of Tinker-Toys.

North Shelby Fire District chief Winston Boutwell wants a stocking full of paid fire dues. Pelham PD chief Billy Bryars wants four new fire stations and a great big ladder truck--preferably red.

Half the Pelham police force wants a reporter with a camera.

Harpersville mayor J.W. Donahoo wants Santa to stick a 500,000 gallon water bucket down his chimney.

Vincent coach Richard Crumpton wants a seven-foot bird dog that knows how to play physical basketball. Chelsea coach Richard Conkle wants just four National League football players who will pass for 17 years old.

Hoover wants a Riverchase for Christmas.

At the Shelby County Reporter, editor Marcia Sears wants a scandal to write about in the paper. Wayne Rasco wants a new account. Bert Seaman wants Santa to bring her a new egg beater and a Teflon skillet. David Moore wants to take a remedial spelling class and a dictionary with lots of big pictures.

The Pelham Panthers want to beat Thompson at anything, Thompson wants to beat everybody.

Helena mayor Charles Penhale wants a leash for his dog, or is that a dog for his leash?

On the Pelham city council, John Tanner wants to be famous for Christmas. Joe Littlefield wants to make a motion. Roy Jowers wants a cowboy suit. Ray Hamilton wants to look like sports caster Herb Winches. Councilman Willard Payne wants to reenact prohibition.

Pelham mayor Burk Dunaway wants to vote again.

Pelham librarian Mary Carver wants a new bookshelf and a highrise building to put it in.

County Superintendent of Ed Charles Knowles wants a course in hypnotism so he can mesmerize teachers in wanting to stay at school every Thursday afternoon.

President Jim Vickrey of the University of Montevallo wishes he were offered the presidency of Auburn, so he could turn it down and put all those rumors to rest, once and for all.

Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds wishes she could find ten taxpayers in a row who had no complaints about their assessments.

Vincent Mayor D.B. Smith would like one more meeting to attend each week.

The Reporter has been unable to verify whether or not any of the people on the list actually received their Christmas wishes. At any rate the staff of the Reporter hopes all these people and all the other residents of Shelby County had a Merry Christmas, and will have a happy New Year!

Good Morning

by Milton Bird

The weekly 'Good Morning' column written by Milton Bird, is brought to you with the good wishes of the First National Bank of Columbiana, member of the FDIC.

For six straight years he had come, slipping in with the dark, and getting away long before the light of day. For five years there had been only little toys that were gone in a few weeks. And then, on the sixth year, that first air rifle.

Somebody said Marcus Polk got a new bike. And that James Longshore got a four-ten. And that J.W. Peers got a pony. but it didn't matter. A fellow got what he got.

Afterward, for eight months, through the winter and spring and summer and into fall, he chased grass sparrows and meadowlarks and bluejays and thrashers over one whole end of town.

All except mockingbirds. Mrs. McMillan asked him never to kill a mockingbird. And he didn't.

And then September came. September, with horse apples in the corner of the front yard and scuppernongs in the tall elm tree on the trail to the pear orchard and the woods burning all the way down Mount Dixie and sugarcane in Mr. Handy Ellis' field.

September, and Aunt Louella Nelson standing on the front porch at the public school, with her bell in her hand, and her face as bright as the sunlight. And a double desk inside, and Percy Acker.

There was writing, just a little at first, one word at a time, and another and another, until there was a sentence, or just your name, maybe, or the name of the state. And reading, still one word at a time, little words that didn't reach far on the paper, and that meant something a boy knew--like cat, maybe, or dog or hen.

The days passed. The bright days of October and the colored days of November and then, about the middle of December, it happened.

It was just a rumor at first, nobody knowing for certain, but it spread like fire. There wasn't a Santa Claus, the rumor said.

That was 66 years ago. Time for a boy to grow into a man into a middle-age guy and a middle-age guy into a senior citizen, with nothing to do but remember.

But tonight, sitting here at my desk remembering, it's just about like it was 66 years ago.

It's just a rumor, and nobody knows for certain; but for me, the same now as it was then, Ol' Santa comes every year, bringing happiness to a whole world, even if it lasts just a little while.

Students at Vincent Elementary list resolutions for New Year

It's the time of the year when people start thinking about New Year's resolutions, and children are no exception.

Students at Vincent Elementary got a jump on most people when they turned in their New Year's resolutions last week at school. Second and third graders wrote down their personal resolutions, while fifth graders told what they would resolve for the United States if they were President.

Here's what some of them wrote:

SECOND GRADE

I am going to help my Mother. I will help to be clean. I will mind my teacher. I will not run in the hall. I will help my teacher and I will help clean up books.

I am going to help clean my little sister. I will do my homework, too.

Diona Perry

For 1980 I am going to:
1) Cut grass.
2) Bring in wood.
3) Help Daddy.
4) Clean Daddy's Ford.
5) Clean dishes.

Ronny Gulledge

For 1980 I am going to:
1) Make up my bed on Saturday and Sundays.
2) Obey my parents.
3) Clean up my room.
4) Do my homework.
5) Try to make better grades.
6) Obey my teacher.
7) I will not steal.
8) I will stay in my seat when the teacher is out of the room.
9) Help my mother watch my brother.
10) Say yes mam and no mam.

Sherri Phillips

THIRD GRADE

Help old people. Do good for one day in school and be polite.

Kirsten Skalka

I will try to get on A-team baseball. I will try to run fast and be a good bat(t)er.

Timmy Lynn

I will be a better boy for Mother and Daddy. I will try to be more patient.

Mark Weldon

I'm going to try (to) quit aurging (arguing) with my mother when she tells me something. I will try to not fight with my friends.

Heather Brook Jemison

Study for my test. Go to church every Sunday.

Kristi Rose

I'm going to do a better job in school. I'm going to try to write better.

Daniel Grizzle

FIFTH GRADE

If I were President of the United States, I would resolve for the New Year to lower the prices of fuel to about 63 cents a gallon.

I would also try to prevent crime. Arson is one crime I would try to prevent. About 100 Americans out of a thousand cause arson.

I would fight inflation. All of the prices of food would go down about 60%.

I would make factories cut down on pollution. Pollution can cause heartattacks. Pollution can also be bad for your lungs, and your health.

I would cut down on all the taxes.

Brian Moore

If I were President of the United States, in the new year I would resolve to try to get a peace treaty with the Iranians so we can have our people back.

I would also not put taxes on everything. I especially wouldn't put taxes on gas because most people can't afford it.

Emilie Bouchet

If I were President of the United States, in the new year I would resolve to cut gas prices down about 20 cents less. I would resolve to have the poor people have more to eat and a better Christmas next year. I would resolve to do something about the Iran Crisis. I would resolve to stop so much crime. I would resolve to help people in the orphanages. I would resolve to help people get more welfare. I would stop lazy people from getting food stamps. I would resolve to help the world.

Cindy Hullett

If I were President of the United States, in the new year I would resolve to getting the hostages free from Iran. I would make sure we cut down on oil and gas. I would try to get more food and clothes to people overseas. I think all people should be treated the. same. Black, tan, white, women, children, everyone. I would make sure everyone was happy for Christmas.

Brenda Sykes

Gas by the liter

With prices climbing into double figures and no end in sight to the increases, some county filling stations are beginning to charge by the liter for gasoline. Since conversion to metrics is but a matter of time, a good New Year's resolution might be to learn the metric system. Here's a start: one gallon equals 3.785 liters. (Photo by Moore)

Richard Shelby thanks Reporter

Letter to Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for helping keep the public informed about the work of the 96th Congress during the past year.

Over the past months we have faced many important decisions, especially in the areas of energy and inflation. As a member of the Energy Subcommittee in the House of Representatives, I have supported the passage of legislation that will begin to enable the country to develop a long-overdue energy policy. Of particular importance was approval of funds to stimulate the production of alternate energy sources that can lessen our dependence on foreign oil. In the coming year we will hopefully pass a windfall profits bill that will help insure that the exorbitant profits now being made by oil companies will get channeled back into research and development of new energy.

As for inflation, there is still much to be done. Federal spending must be cut, the budget balanced, and the deficit reduced. Several Representatives agree with me on taking such action, but so far we have not been able to gather enough votes to make the serious budget reductions that are necessary. Realizing that the continuation of rampant inflation threatens the standard of living for all Americans, I will continue to make this a top priority in the coming year.

As Congress struggles with these and many other issues that confront America in 1980, it is essential that the people be kept informed and that they let their representatives in Washington know what they think. This can only be done, however, with your assistance. I look forward to working with you and trust that you will let me know of ways that I can better serve you and all citizens in Alabama's Seventh Congressional District.

Sincerely,
Richard Shelby

Scrambled Eggs

By Bert Seaman

I hope everyone managed to get through the Christmas holidays better than I did.

Just a few days before Saint Nick was due, my annual ailment, which I call the grungies, set in.

Even though I managed to keep producing copy, I just wasn't up to any shopping expeditions, so my number one daughter was pressed into service as gift buyer and wrapper.

There were telltale signs that this affliction, which the doctor can't find a name for, was coming on, but I just wasn't paying attention till it really settled in good.

I had more difficulty than usual remembering things and I had this feeling of tiredness when all I had done was to go from city hall, to the courthouse, to the jail and to the highway department for news.

Oh yes, and I also covered a fire and made a quick trip to Alabaster which led to an unnerving experience at a gas station along the way.

The man operating the station had started pumping the precious fuel into my tank, when I suddely realized I had rushed out of the office without my wallet.

It was obvious the good man was not a Scrambled Eggs reader because he did not recognize me nor did he seem to think this typical predicament was very amusing.

He looked unbelieving when I assured him he would get his money, but at least he let me go on my way.

It was when I got back to the office and settled down in front of my VDT, one of those new fangled gadgets we use to type on, I realized that the grungies were in residence.

And, as it so often happens, Christmas was just around the corner and most of my shopping was still ahead of me.

The only gift buying I had done was the week before when my three year old and I headed out to find presents for a daughter and her husband who were leaving town for the holidays.

Even though we only visited one mall, we went through it about three times trying to come up with something suitable. And then the departing couple came by for the gifts before I had time to wrap them.

I felt kind of crummy about that, but the dear girl assured me she didn't mind. She reminded me that on other Christmases when time was short she had been delegated gift wrapper, which included doing up her own presents.

"I even acted surprised the next morning," she recalled.

Actually, when it comes to being surprised, no one was too astonished by what by what they found under the tree this Christmas. Santa pretty much brought what had been on the Christmas lists.

But when there's a little one in the house, Christmas is always exciting. She too got what she asked for, but there was such amazement and excitement with every gift she opened.

Even with the grungies in residence, I'll have to admit it was a pretty good Christmas.

Heflin praises strike force

U.S. Senator Howell Heflin praised the Department of Defense's decision to establish a "quick strike force" to deal with international incidents similar to the American Fmbassy takeover in Iran.

The Alabama Senator further called upon the military to "speed up the process dramatically and have the force ready for deployment by late 1980.

Cow? What cow?

Cow bolts nativity scene

Although a live nativity scene is usually motionless, an unexpected turn of events caused some lively action in such a scene in Montevallo Sunday.

A neophyte performer temporarily disrupted the impressive display on the lawn of the United Methodist Church when she bolted off down the street.

The uncooperative cast member was a cow named Peggy. Unaccustomed to crowds and the music being provided by a childrens' choir on the church steps, Peggy took off through the manger scene.

A goat decided to follow Peggy's example and adults and members of the cast chased the two animals through town.

After they were rounded up, it was decided that Peggy needed more work on her part and she was returned to her barn at Dr. Mike Mahan's Brierfield farm.

At the conclusion of the reassembled nativity scene, young people from the church sang Christmas carols on a hayride through town.

The evening ended with a bonfire and cookout at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Owen in Brierfield.

New water billing prepared for schools

Municipalities will have to change their method of billing schools for water due to a federal regulation.

In order to be in compliance with a rule prohibiting water bills for school lunchrooms being taken from lunchroom program funds, the Shelby County Board of Education last Tuesday agreed to take over the payments.

Superintendent of Education Charles Knowles pointed out that there would be some inconvenience to the towns and cities involved in that one bill will have to be sent to the school and the other to the Board of Education office.

Other action taken by the board at their December meeting was to change the terms of the lease granted to Day Care Service, Inc.

The Birmingham agency's lease of the former Almont School was soley for the purpose of day care but they were interested in giving over two rooms of the building for the instruction of Cerebral Palsied children.

Knowles listed for the board the ten legislative priorities which superintendents in Shelby and Jefferson Counties had prepared.

And one of the cheerful notes sounded at the meeting was the news that no loan would have to be taken out to meet the payroll because state monies had arrived on time.

Gun goes off in Alabaster

by Reporter Staff

A South Carolina woman was apparently accidentally shot in the jaw early Monday morning by an Alabaster police officer.

The incident occurred at 3:45 a.m. when APD officer Richard Harmon stopped Delores Curry and approached the car with his gun drawn. Reports indicate that when her car door opened, it hit Harmon's gun, accidentally triggering the weapon.

The shot hit Curry in the jaw. She was taken to University Hospital where she was still in surgery at press time Monday.

The shooting apparently occurred after Alabaster officers had trouble in getting Curry to stop her vehicle.

APD Chief C.E. "Bull" Carter said the incident was being investigated by the sheriff's department.

Clarification

An article in last week's Reporter mistakenly referred to a public hearing in Pelham concerning the reclassification of a parcel of property from A-1 to B-2.

The property, belonging to Thurman Wilson, is up for consideration for a change from A-1 to O-I.

Commission accepts APC roads

by Reporter staff

The Shelby County Commission took under advisement several insurance proposals at its Friday meeting.

Commissioners will study plans submitted by five insurance companies that are varying for the business of health, accident, liability and other insurance for county employees.

In other action, the Commission voted to accept gravel roads, on Alabama Power Company property that serve several homes. In the past, the county highway department provided maintenance and grading on these roads if they served a substantial number of houses.

However, since an attorney general's ruling in July, which specified that public money could not be spent on any roadways that were privately owned, the county has not provided maintenance.

By accepting the roads from the Power Company 'for public use' that problem is solved, Commissioner Jake Morris, who lives on such a road, made the motion for the county to accept them.

The contractor for the Scottsdale subdivision near Alabaster 'has lived up to his contract' according to Engineer James Ray, and Ray suggested the county return the deposit of $7,000, the contrator made.

County Tax Collector Fay Quick asked for an extension of time for two temporary clerks until after the conclusion of the tax sale in March. She pointed out that the tax confusion and the delays in assessments will make it necessary for her to have more help to complete her work. The Commission granted the request.

Commissioner Ned Bearden asked Chairman Tommy Snowden when the county would know what the tax income for the year would be. Snowden replied, "We don't have a handle on it."

Indications are that so many adjustments had to be made in assessments that tax income will be at least a quarter million dollars below the estimates that were projected by Tax Assessor Bobbie Reynolds.

Jolly red visitor

At its annual Christmas meeting the Cub Scouts of Alabaster Pack 394 had a very special guest who wore a red and white outfit instead of the traditional Cub blue. Santa Claus dropped by the meeting to wish everyone a Merry Christmas and take a few special orders.

Arrow recipients

At the recent meeting of Cub Scout Pack 394, (from left) Terry Woodrow, Mark Roddam and Steve LeSeur received the Arrow of Light award. The award is the highest honor bestowed upon a Cub, and from there he enters Webelos.

Basketball for fun

The Youth Basketball program at the Shelby County YMCA is played for the enjoyment of the sport.

"If it's not fun, why play at all?" says the Y's Executive Director Molly McGregor.

Although McGregor conceeds that winning is fun, she emphasizes that the main idea of the program is to teach the basic skills of the sport and at the same time develop a well rounded youngster.

And another plus factor is that every team member gets to play one half of every game.

Anyone between the ages of six and 14 may join a team. Leagues are divided by age groupings which are: 8 and under, 10 and under, 12 and under and 14 and under.

All games and practices will be played at Riverchase Middle School and league play will begin with scheduled games on Jan. 12. The games will be held on Saturday mornings.

Those interested in participating in the program as either a player or coach should contact the Y immediately. The phone number is 663-6504.

New landfill

The ground water was at too high an elevation, he said and was also too close to an underground 'thrust.'

The Commission voted to initiate legal proceedings under its right of eminent domain to acquire the 100 acres, but also agreed to try to work out a lease purchase agreement with Gulf States so that the legal steps would not be necessary.

"We need to be in there right now," Ray said, "but we must clear it, make a complete topographical survey, and submit full plans to the state health department first."

Ray said the new site should last 10 to 20 years in serving the needs of the area. Other landfills are located west of Helena, and near Westover.

Ray remarked that if the proposed Pelham-Columbiana highway were completed, the county could have found a landfill site that would have served the entire county.

UM graduates 129

The language used by a few state officials recently accusing state universities of hoarding funds is equivalent to verbal assault, University of Montevallo President James F. Vickrey, Jr., said during UM's fall commencement exercises.

Outlining the qualities of an educated person to UM graduates, Dr. Vickrey said that an educated person "also knows, unlike some state officials I know, that assaulting other people with language raises just as many moral and ethical issues as a physical assault."

Sen. Howell Heflin, who had planned to speak during the ceremonies, had to remain in Washington to vote on the so-called windfall profits tax bill.

Sen. Heflin, recipient of the President's Award for Distinguished Public Service, will receive the award at a later date, Dr. Vickrey said.

UM awarded degrees to 129 graduates during the ceremonies, one of three graduation ceremonies each year at the 83-year-old state institution.

County news notes

The Wayne Bunn family weren't able to spend Christmas in their own home, but at least they still have their tree and the presents that were under it.

A fire which started in the attic of the relatively new home on Hwy. 26 Friday afternoon, made it necessary for Columbiana firemen to cut a 20 foot section out of the roof.

In addition to the Christmas trimmings, firemen also removed furniture, appliances and clothing.

The fire was brought under control in a relatively short time and according to Fire Chief Bob Barrett, there was not extensive damage.

Reportedly, the Bunn's mobile home burned about six months ago and they built the home which is located near Wildwood Chapel.

The stretch

Mike Edward (33) stretches out for a block attempt but Thompson's Haver Carter (31) got the shot away, hitting for two from the base line. The shot came during a second quarter push by the Warriors to close a 10 point defecit. (Photos by Moore)

Thompson squeaks by Pelham

by David Moore

They played hard and they played long.

It was Pelham in the role of the slight underdog, inspired and bucking seriously for an upset, and Thompson, playing the part of the stubborn mule, stunned early by the Panthers but refusing to stay down.

At the end of regulation time last Tuesday night on Pelham's court, the score stood at 62 each. When the overtime buzzer sounded the mule was on top 68-66.

Fans from both sides saw darn good basketball that night.

A few minutes into the game and it was obvious the Warriors were stunned. They committed several fouls and had two shots nullified by the kinds of mistakes that drive coaches bananas. In the meantime the hustling Panthers popped in four quick points.

Pelham's desire and Thompson's mistakes put the Panthers out front at the end of the first quarter 22-14.

Though Pelham continued to hustle in the second stanza and Thompson continued to foul, the Warriors managed to turn the tables nearly around by scoring 21 points to the 14 for the Panthers. The score at the half: Pelham 36, Thompson 35.

Pelham managed to keep their lead most of the third quarter, until Thompson took it over with seven minutes gone. Thompson hit again with seven seconds left in the third, making the score 49-46, their way. The Warriors were playing their own ball game, now.

For the Panthers the first part of the fourth quarter was one of frustration. The basketball was anythng but cooperative, going where it wanted and not where it was supposed to. The Warriors and, the basketball were on the same side.

But Pelham did not give up and some determined defense made up for the wayward ball. The Panthers, still strong on the idea of an upset, closed the game to within one point several times in the last two and a half minutes.

With 16 seconds left in the game, the Pelham fans added themselves to the defensive effort, causing enough ruckus to shake the Warriors at the foul line. Five freebie shots under severe vocal pressure yielded only one point for Thompson, making the score 62-60.

With the clock reading 00:07, Pelham brought the ball down the court, and worked it over to Mike Edwards. Edwards went up in the air from twenty feet out and shot. The buzzer sounded. The ball hit true. The fans went crazy and the game went into overtime.

Pelham forced a turnover on the jump and Buddy Champion scored two for the Panthers with only 15 seconds gone.

But with a minute gone, Harry Harris hit from the base line for THS, tying the score at 64.

At 1:50 Thompson scored again on a shot by Alvin Thomas.

Fourty seconds later the Thompson fans got a chance to be vocal when Pelham went to the foul line and had the ball roll around the hoop and fall off the zero side.

With the clock ticking down to five seconds, Pelham was forced to foul (again), which gave Eric Marcus a trip to the line. Marcus hit two freebies, putting an end to the Panthers notion of an upset.

Pelham scored again but time ran out. The final: 68-66, Thompson's way.

"If a game like this doesn't bring people out, I don't know what will," THS basketball boss Eddie Williams told the Reporter while his team changed.

"We've been playing alot of close ball games--too many. I wish we'd go ahead and beat someone!" Williams said.

"The boys pulled that one out. I'm proud of our kids," the drained but relieved looking coach said.

Williams credited Pelham's coach Tony Taylor and his hustling team with a supurb effort.

"Doggone it, they're good. Mike Edwards is tough," he said.

Williams explained that he thought the Warriors had had a little trouble having to get up for the Pelham game so soon after their close call with arch rival Montevallo. The Warriors had scrapped by the Bulldogs 45-42 in overtime only four days earlier.

But, Williams added, that took nothing away from the play of Pelham.

On the other side of the gym, Coach Taylor looked drained, too. There was no relief in his face, however, only dissappointment.

"I get tired of saying next time, but that's what it's going to have to be," the Pelham coach said, leaning against the wall.

"I think they played about as well as they could," Taylor added.

He noted that in his three years as Pelham's basketball coach the loss to Thompson was the first loss he'd had in overtime.

"Someone forgot to tell them (Thompson). We were supposed to win." Taylor almost smiled.

Stats on the game:

Thompson's Harry Harris proved to be the game's high scorer, hooping the ball for 27 points. Harris's seven rebounds were also tops for Thompson.

Arthur Thomas scored 13 points for THS, and Eric Marcus and Clinton Taylor added 12 and 8, respectively. Taylor was good also for a couple of key rebounds.

For Pelham, Jeff Adams was top Panther, scoring 22 points and pulling in 10 rebounds.

Mike Edward scored 18 points and Mike Enoch, playing with the flu, scored 14.

Coach Taylor reported that Pelham starter Keith Frostman was unable to play due to injuries he suffered recently in an auto accident.

From the field, Thompson hit 26 to 48 (54%), while Pelham was good for 28 out of 50 (56%).

At the free throw line Thompson went 16 for 21 (76%) and Pelham went 10 for 15 (67%).

The Warriors will rest on their 6-1 record until they meet B.B. Comer on the road January 3.

The Panthers took their 5-4 record into a home game last Friday against area powerhouse Sylacauga. (See related story.)

High jump, scorer

High scorer for the Panthers in their inspired but failing effort to beat Thompson was Jeff Adams (44) shown here going high over the head of Thompson's Haver Carver.

Thompson Boys Program teaches b'ball basics

Registration for youth basketball will be held Saturday, December 29 from 8-10 a.m. at the Thompson High gym. Registration is open to all boys in grades 3-8.

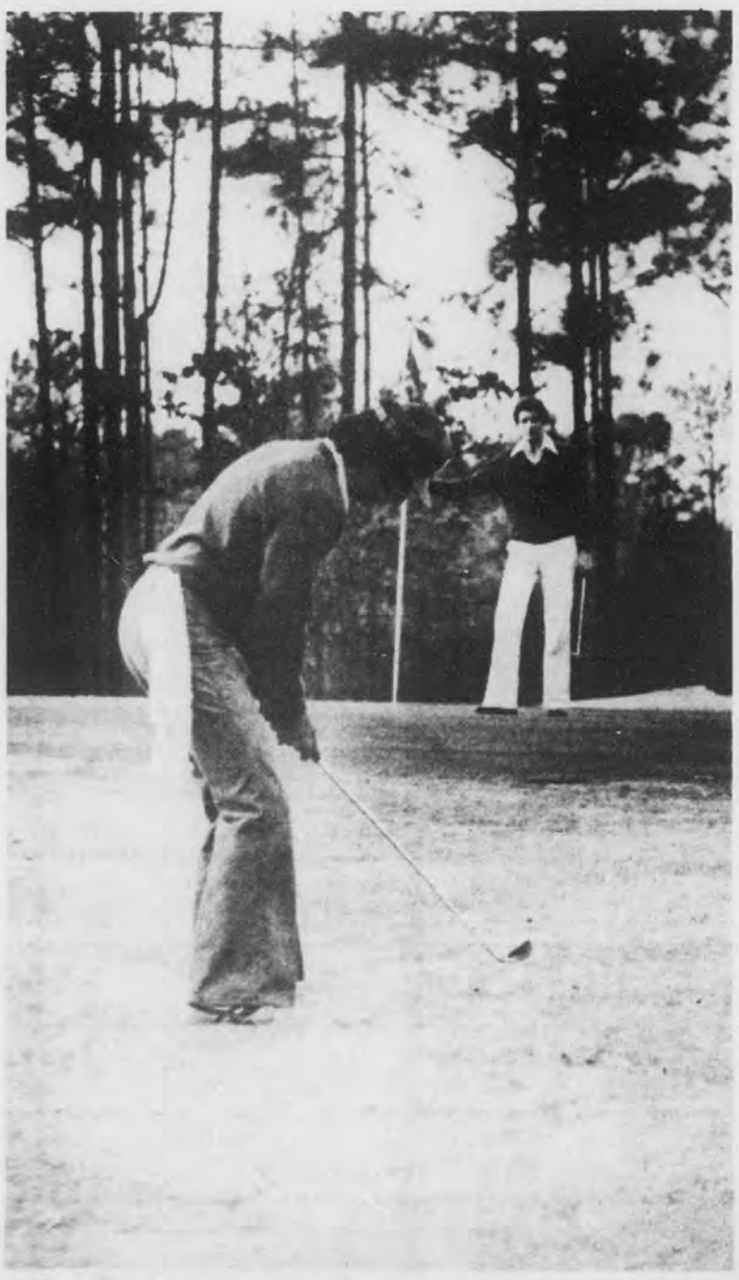
According to THS basketball coach Eddie Williams, who heads up the program, the main emphasis is placed upon fundamentals of the game and ball handling.

"There's no pressure on winning," said Williams, pointing out that the idea is to prepare the boys for playing in high school and college, and to perform a community service.

Helping Williams with the teams will be former THS basketball great Glenn Marcus, now a guard for the UAB Blazers. Other local college players will be on hand to teach the boys how the ball bounces and how to bounce the ball.

Williams said that games will be played on Saturdays and at half time at Thompson's home basketball games. The games will be played among teams established within the program.

The season will last for eight weeks, running through February 16. The registration fee of $10 is to cover the cost of referees.



Winter Chip Shot

For those dedicated to the sport, the fact that the calendar says December is no reason not to shoot a few rounds of golf, especially during recent mild afternoons. SA, Rebs play holiday tournaments

The Christmas holidays will give county roundball teams a chance to both catch their breath and work out, too--that is all but two of the teams.

Shelby Academy and Coosa Valley Academy will both play in holiday tournaments after Christmas.

The SA Raiders will journey to Centreville to compete with Faith, Talladega and Cahaba. Action at that tourney will begin Friday, December 28, with round one, and the finals will be played the following day.

The Raiders, who started the season off with two wins, have since dropped four in a row. You can bet they'd like to even out their record by taking top honors in Centreville.

"Hopefully we'll be ready," coach Dewayne Kervin told the Reporter last week, adding that the team had been working on their inconsistent offense.

Kervin pointed out that three of their losses have been by six points or less.

Rebounding, he said, has been picking up and the defense played its best game recently against Cahaba, who beat the Raiders 46-42.

Dirk Carson, he said, has been the most effective shooter to date, averaging about 13 points per game.

Over on the other side of the county the Rebels at Coosa Valley Academy have been preparing for their journey to Burney Points where they'll be fighting for honors in the Christmas Tournament.

Since the hosting school is possibly the top team in District 7, the trip will not be an easy one.

Action at Burney Points begins Thursday, December 27, and runs through Saturday.

The Reporter was unable to reach Reb coach Mark Green for comments on his team.

Contaminated ball

Arther Thomas (41) and Mike Enoch (32) appear to be jumping away from the basketball like it might be radioactive. Actually this shot was snapped during the first quarter before the Warriors' got settled down and started playing their own brand of roundball.

Comin' through

Montevallo's Yuell Gilbert (10), no doubt with scoring on his mind, charges around a Wildcat defender. In the past two games, Gilbert has scored 36 points, including an impressive 18 points out of 19 trips to the free throw line. He went 9-9 from the line against West Blocton last week to tie a school record. (Photos by Moore)

By score of 63-54

Montevallo steals dinner from SCHS

by David Moore

Picture this: A hungry wildcat crouched in his lair, almost frustrated and grumpy enough to do something about some dinner.

And if you happen to pass by his lair whenever he reaches whatever point it is that springs him into action, you'd better lookout, or you'll end up on his dinner table.

Before Friday night's game at the lair in Columbiana, Montevallo coach Kurt Pnazek expressed a concern to the effect that he hoped this wouldn't be the night when the Wildcats ate dinner.

The Shelby County team was improving. Their time was coming. Pnazek knew that. He was concerned, and should have been.

If the halftime buzzer had been the dinner bell, Coach Don Pouncey and his Wildcats would have had Bulldog for supper that night. They took a 34-32 lead into the locker room.

Things had certainly looked worse for the 0-7 Wildcats. They had finally warmed up, showed some good team play, and come from behind to take the lead with about a minute left in the half.

The hot ninth grader Arthur Johnson had fired in 15 points for them, including 5 for 6 free throws. And Montevallo had been fouling, too--11 times on the half.

But the Bulldogs don't go down easily. They came out in the third period and caught Shelby County off guard by switching from a man-to-man to a zone. The Wildcats were fuddled and scored only 4 points in the quarter. Montevallo led at the end of three, 46-38.

The Wildcats, however, rallied in the fourth, closing the gap to two points. For several quick series the teams swapped one good shot for another.

Then with about three and a half minutes left the Bulldogs shifted into overdrive. When the buzzer sounded they had escaped dinner by the score of 63-54.

"I knew they'd (SCHS) be ready for us," Pnazek said, chatting with the Reporter after the game. "They're tough, They've improved 100%."

Pnazek said one of the difference in the game was the switch to zone coverage, which left Shelby County cold in the third.

He also noted that Arthur Johnson had only scored two points in the second half, after running so hot the first.

"That's about the difference in the game," he said.

"I was pleased. It was a fine one to win. (The Bulldogs' take a 5-4 record into the holidays.) We had a great team effort again," the MHS coach added.

Another difference in the game was the free throw department. For the second outing in a row Montevallo connected on 79% (15 for 19) of their free throws. Yuell Gilbert came through again (see Montevallo vs. West Blocton article) this time with nine for 10 from the line.

Shelby County hit 8 of 16 from the line, and 23 field goals. Montevallo hit 24 field goals.

Refering to Montevallo's 79% from the line, Pnazek said, "If you can do that, you're going to win the tight ones."

Coming out of the locker room. Shelby County's Pouncey said of his team, "I was proud they gave the effort they did. They didn't tuck their tails and run like a lot of 0-7 (now o-8) teams. Their attitude is great. It's a good bunch of kids. They're just young. (Only two starting seniors.)"

Pouncey said the Wildcats were going to "keep plowing away" and would cause somebody some trouble after Christmas.

Pouncey admitted that Montevallo's third quarter change in defense temporarily threw his team off course. He pointed out, too, that Shelby County didn't shoot the first free throw in the second half.

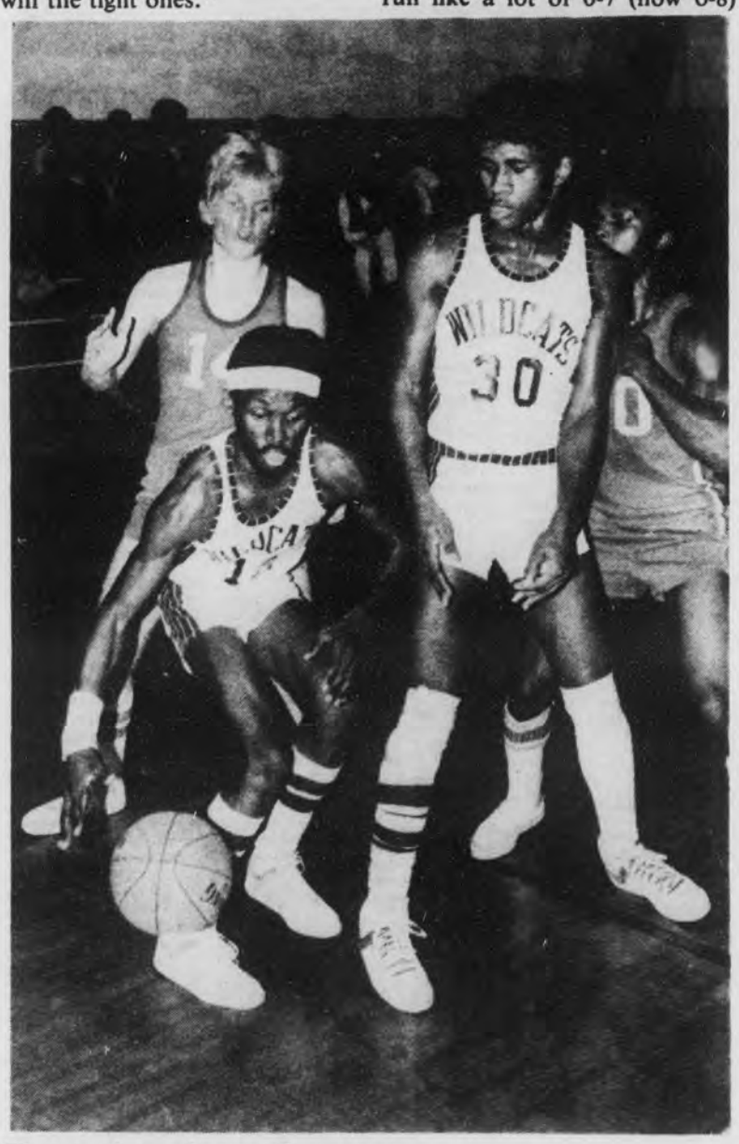
"I'm not crying--that's just indictive of their (MHS) being a good team," Pouncey added.

For SCHS Arthur Johnson was high scorer with 17 points, followed by Terry Carter with 14.

Bert Jones scored 20 for the 'Dogs, with a whole fist full of them coming from the outside corner and base line.

Yuell Gilbert hit for 17 points and Jerome Jones was good for 14 in Montevallo's winning effort.

Montevallo pulled in 36 rebounds to 40 for the Wildcats.



Running interference

Arthur Johnson (30) runs interference for teammate Terry Carter (12), blocking out David Melsoni (14) and another bothersome Montevallo defender. Johnson was good for 17 points and Carter was good for 14 in the Wildcats lose to Montevallo last Friday night.

Annual feast honors Pelham's gridders

by Reporter Staff

Dale Busby was selected Most Valuable Player of the 1979 year by Coach Steve Rivers at Pelham High School's pigskin awards banquet last Thursday evening.

Coach P.W. Underwood, defensive coordinator at Auburn, was the main speaker at the event, inspiring the audience to a pursuit for excellence as well as relating some stories about playing football in Mississippi with Jerry Clower during his undergraduate days.

Some 200 parents and friends enjoyed the turkey-and-trimmings of Christmas dinner while the B-team and varsity cheerleaders were recognized, and the three players who made the all-county football team were named.

Pelham head coach Steve Rivers was master of ceremonies, and four categories of achievement in football were awarded after the speech.

Most valuable offensive back was tailback senior Dale Busby.

Most valuable offensive lineman was offensive forward Randy Springer.

Most valuable defensive back was Brad Jacks, linebacker.

Most valuable defensive lineman was Jeff Mathis, defensive end.

Dale Busby, who helped the Panthers' to a 5-5 season with 240 carries and 1130 yards, was selected Most Valuable Player.

Of Pelham's five losses, four were heartbreakers of less than a touchdown.

With his weight training program already five weeks old, Coach Rivers predicted that next year's version of the Pelham Panthers might turn the corner and be something all Pelham fans could be proud of.

Aggies whip Pelham

Playing Sylacauga is sort of like riding a super fast roller-coaster. Once things get rolling, about all you can do is hang on tight and wait for the end.

The Pelham Panthers tangled with the Aggies last Friday at home. One of the top powerhouses in the district, Sylacauga whipped the Panthers 78 to 52.

"We did real good the first quarter and on into the second," Pelham coach Tony Taylor said. (At the end of the first quarter the Aggies were out front 29-24.)

"Then we got behind at the end of the second and the beginning of the third. They scored 10 points on us before we could bat our eyes," said Taylor.

Down 16 at the half, the 10 unanswered points in the first of the third period did the Panthers in, though they managed not to fall any further behind before the rollercoaster finally stopped.

"We had 20 turnovers. That's what killed us," Taylor pointed out. "I think next time we play them we might win."

Mike Edwards scored 17 points for Pelham and Jeff Adams was right behind him with 16. Taylor said Mike Enoch also played a good game.

Pelham takes a 5 and 5 record into the holidays.

Bulldog ties record

The Montevallo Bulldogs travelled to West Blocton Tuesday the 18th to pick up win number four, and tie a school record.

Though outscored 50-46 from the field, the 'Dogs ended up beating West Blocton 65-59--the reason being they hit 79% of their free throws for 19 points.

Giving 100% to that effort was Yuell Gilbert, who tied a school record by hitting 9 for 9 from the freebie line.

The 5' 10" junior tied the school's record set first in 1968 by Eddie Lovelady. Jerry Hayes also hit 9-9 for Montevallo in the 1972 regional playoffs.

Gilbert scored 19 points in all against West Blocton, as did Bert Jones, who also pulled in 8 rebounds.

Section 2. This act shall be inoperative and void unless it shall have been approved by a majority of the qualified electors of Jefferson and Shelby Counties who live in the area to be annexed voting thereon at a referendum held for such purpose. The Boards of Registrars of Jefferson and Shelby Counties shall furnish to the City Clerk of the City of Hoover the names of those electors qualified to vote in this election no later than fifteen (15) days prior to the date of the election provided for herein. The election shall be held and conducted as nearly as may be in the same manner as elections on constitutional amendments, and shall be called and held by the City of Hoover not later than on the same day as the next general election of the municipal, county or state officers next following final passage of this Act. The City Clerk shall give notice, which notice shall be published in newspapers of general circulation in Jefferson and Shelby Counties, Alabama, once each week for three consecutive weeks before the day of the election. On ballots to be used at the election, the proposition to be voted on shall be stated substantially as follows:

If a majority of the votes cast at the election are affirmative votes, this Act shall be in full force and effect immediately thereafter. The votes shall be certified as provided by law, and all costs incurred with the said referendum shall be born by the City of Hoover.

All of the territory to be annexed to the City of Hoover pursuant to this Act shall be exempt from any increases in the rate of city ad valorem taxes in effect on the effective date of such annexation for the period of fifteen (15) years from such date, and persons employed within such territory shall be exempt from the imposition of any form of "occupational taxes" during such fifteen (15) year period; provided, however, that nothing herein shall prevent the City of Hoover from imposing any sales tax allowed by law on sales within the annexed territory.

Section 4. The Annexation Agreement executed by the City of Hoover and concerning the development of a portion of the territory to be annexed, and which agreement provides, among other things, for the financing, construction and operation of a sewage treatment facility to serve a portion of the annexed territory, is hereby ratified. Effective immediately upon annexation, the annexed area shall receive a Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning classification under the Zoning Ordinance of the City of Hoover, and those parts of the annexed area which have already been developed shall be within a PUD land use district appropriate to their then present use and in accordance with any recorded restrictions on such areas.

Section 5. The provisions of this Act are severable. If any part of the Act is declared invalid or unconstitutional, such declaration shall not affect the part which remains.

Section 6. All laws or parts of laws which conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

Section 7. The provisions of this Act calling for an election shall become effective immediately upon its passage and approval by the Governor, or upon its otherwise becoming a law, and all other provisions shall become effective as otherwise herein stated."

Trailbikers set meeting

A meeting of the North Alabama Trail and Endurance Riders Association has been set for December 29, at the farm of Marvin Turner, in Birmingham. A pleasure trail ride will precede the business meeting. The purpose for the meeting will be to welcome new members and anyone else interested in joining this organization.

The functional purpose of the association is to promote more interest in riding the trails of scenic Alabama forests and use horses for other things as well as showing, hunting, work, and racing.

The association sponsors a yearly trail clinic for those wishing to have more information about these two sports and is active on the management of at least two yearly endurance rides.

Anyone interested in this organization and the other events mentioned, may phone Marvin Turner at 788-3645 or 787-3032.
